NIXON PRESSED TO RETALIATE IN VIET

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports of a sizable North Vietnamese buildup in and around the DMZ mounted pressure on President Nixon Saturday to retaliate against enemy disregard of terms under which the United States halted bombing of North Vietnam.

Nixon met with the National Security Council during the morning with Vietnam a listed topic, along with disarmament. The White House remained silent on the deliberations dealing with war and the peace effort.

Meanwhile Communist troops opened the fourth week of their new offensive today with a barrage of rocket fire against Saigon and at least 30 other towns and military bases surrounding the capital.

The attacks defied U.S. President Nixon's warning that continued action against civilian population centers would bring retaliation from the Allies.

Some of the intelligence reaching the Administration in Washington estimated that the North Vietnamese have increased their forces on the area of the DMZ — demilitarized zone — from around nine to some 13 regiments over the past ten days or so.

Although earlier reports of infiltration through the supposedly neutral zone dividing the two Vietnams seemed inconclusive, the more recent dispatches gave growing evidence of Hanoi troops crossing into the southern half of the buffer strip and beyond.

The evidence includes accounts from prisoners from elements of at least two North Vietnamese regiments, U.S. sources said. The prisoners, captured south of the DMZ were said to have acknowledged they came through the zone.

The U.S. command in Saigon has reported a North Vietnamese assault Thursday on a South Vietnamese outpost two miles south of the DMZ, attacks on U.S. Marines Thrusday and Friday also about two miles south of the line and rocketings Saturday

Bloody Russ, China Clash Still Growing

MOSCOW (AP)—The second bloody clash in two weeks between Soviet and Red Chinese troops flared Saturday on a disputed little island along their border, sparking a flurry of charges, countercharges and warnings of worse to come.

Moscow and Peking accused each other of starting what both called "armed provocation," and Moscow radio said there was an unspecified number of dead and wounded. The Chinese declared the latest round was "continuing and expanding."

THE NEW incident touched off an exchange of protest notes between the two governments, while Moscow and Peking radio swapped charges.

Bone of contention was an island in the Ussuri River along the Manchurian border about 200 miles north of Vladivostok. The Russians call it Damansky Island and the Chinese refer to it as Chenpao.

Both nations claim the island, and they clashed over it March 2 in a skirmish which the Russians said left 31 of their soldiers dead. Both warned that the latest incident could have grave consequences, but they gave highly conflicting versions of what happened, as they did two weeks ago.

For example, Moscow said Chinese troops invad-

School for the Law

Q. When I read a news story about the recent graduates from the Long Beach Police Academy, I wondered how much of their 400 hours of training was devoted to law and community relations and how much was spent on the shooting range. Can you tell me? A.M., Long Beach.

A. A total of 480 hours of training is given to each police rookie during the 12-week course at the academy, said Lt. James Lynch of the Recruit Training Division. Of these hours, 46 are devoted to criminal law and criminal evidence classes. Eight courses, totaling 28 hours, are in classes in community relations and related areas, including the role of police in a free society (four hours), discretionary decision-making (four hours), race relations (four hours) and public relations and the news media (six hours). Lynch said recruits spend a total of 32 hours learning firearm regulations and use, most of which is spent on the range.

Lincoln Lore

Q. Where can I obtain a copy of the speech given by the animated figure of Abraham Lincoln in the Disneyland exhibit? I.R., Long Beach.

A. A copy of the speech is being sent to you by Disneyland's public relations department. The "Great Moments with Mr. Lincoln" exhibit opened at the New York World's Fair in 1964 and was moved to Disneyland's Main Street in 1965. It features a life-like vinyl model of Lincoln delivering portions of his speeches. The carefully synchronized facial movements, voice and gestures result from a special system developed by Disneyland technicians. A live person was wired with sensors to a magnetic tape which recorded his facial movements as he read the speeches. Then these synchronized movements were duplicated in the figure. The figure's face was created from an actual life mask of Lincoln made in 1850. After auditioning many actors to record the voice, Royal Dano, who had portrayed Lincoln in a movie, was selected.

SEOUL (AP) — A U.S. medical evacuation helicopter carrying soldiers wounded in a clash with North Korean troops crashed in the western sector of the demilitarized zone Saturday nigth, killing all eight persons aboard.

Another American GI was killed on the ground when the North Koreans opened fire on a U.S.-South Korean work detail that was putting up demarcation markers in the buffer zone, U.S. authorities said.

STORY WITH A TWIST ENDING

Dialogue With a 'Hype' Who Emptied Many a House

A series of four articles on the drug problem ended in the Independent, Press-Telegram Saturday. But the problem didn't end there.

This is the story of a man who called himself a hype, which is slang for an addict who uses a hypodermic needle. To supply his needle he became one of the busiest burglars in the Los Angeles area. Ironically, he was "loaded" when the police caught up with him and his life took a strange new turn.

In the following dialog the Man (M.) tells his story to Don Reed (R.) in a special report broadcast by the news department of KMPC.

Reed: If your home has been burglarized in recent years it's possible the man sitting opposite me pulled the job. What started you in this business?

Man: I was using drugs and I was addicted to heroin.

R: In other words that was the sole reason you became a burglar?

M: Yes. There were other type of crimes I could have gone to to make money but burglary was the easiest.

R: Any idea how many burglaries that you may have pulled during this time?

M: I pulled burglaries for about a five-year period.

R: One or two a day — three or four?

M: Sometimes three and four. At night.

R: In one night?

M: Yes.

'Finally Loved,' Judy Takes 5th Husband Amid Cheers

Combined News Services

It was typically cold and murky, but for singer Judy Garland London Saturday was that place "somewhere over the rainbow." She married her fifth husband and happily told the world that "finally, finally, I am loved."

While an adoring crowd blocked traffic and chanted "Judy! Judy! Judy!" Miss Garland, 46, and Mickey Deans, a 35-year-old New York discotheque owner, were wed in a simpel 15-minute civil ceremony at the Chelsea register office.

With singer Johnny Ray as best man and a crowd of some 200 ranging from toddlers to little old ladies with umbrellas cheering them on, the diminutive actress and her businessman husband married again — for the record since Deans said an earlier ritual wasn't legal because of a divorce technicality.

It was 34 years ago that Judy Garland sang her way into millions of hearts with "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" as Dorothy in the "Wizard of Oz."

Shipping Magnate Stavros Niarchos Saturday accused his former brother-in-law, Aristotle Onassis, of planning to make exorbitant profits from a new oil refinery he is to build for the Greek government.

Onassis was reported on his way to the Canary Islands to join his wife and was not available to answer the challenge.

DEVOTION

Pope Paul VI said Saturday there is a "giddiness" apparent in the world shaking even those who have devoted their lives to the church.

His reference came three days after it was learned a member of the papal household had won permission to quit the priesthood and marry, and one day after the opening of Rome's first birth control clinic.

Msgr. Giovanni Musante, 52, a pontifical chaplain, plans to marry a well-to-do 38-year-old woman.

BELLS

Television producer Don Fedderson was married Saturday to actress Yvonne Lime in a noon ceremony in Christ Church Unity in Los Angeles.

Fedderson is the creator and executive producer of the Fred MacMurray television series, "My Three Sons," and "Family Affair." His bride is co-founder of International Orphans, which cares for 2,000 war orphans in Japan and Vietnam.

CAREER ENDS

Ben Shahn, the socially conscious painter who considered himself "a storyteller, like any father and my grandfather before me," is dead at the age of 70.

His subjects had included the anarchists Sacco and Vanzetti and the labor leader Tom Mooney. He collaborated with the Mexican activist and painter Diego Rivera on a mural for the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, New York. the mural was chipped from the wall when Rivera refused to paint over a likeness of V. I. Lenin, the Soviet leader.

SHAHN

Shahn died late Friday night in Mt. Sinai Hospital in Manhattan, where he had undergone a bladder operation.

Shahn's works, carrying the twin themes of social justice and universal brotherhood, hang in the nation's most important museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, the Art Institute of Chicago and the Detroit Institute of the Arts.

Shahn was born Sept. 12, 1898 in Kaunas, then part of Czarist Russia in what is now Lithuania in the Soviet Union. His father was a woodcarver and carpenter.

VICTORY

Raymond W. Postgate, a British gastronome who decided something just had to be done about British food, retired Saturday convinced that his battle is won.

It is just 20 years since he started what he then called the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Food. He produced his first Good Food Guide with his wife from the front room of their home. It sold 8,000 copies. Now his Good Food Guides sell in excess of 100,000 a year.

Retiring at 72, Postgate mused how greatly food standards had improved, but he had these warnings as likely indicators of bad food:

A very large shining menu. It only means the landlord has an enormous deep freeze.

Staff dressed up in expensive and exotic uniforms, decor expensive and ugly. It means they're spending their money on anything but the food.

Loud canned music. It's a way of distracting you from paying attention to the food and service.

A menu full of lush description on advertising jargon like "golden brown chicken specially grilled for you" or "luscious, dew-fresh mushrooms." It simply means the food is rubbish.

Engine Blast Sinks Ship; 28 Perish

NEW YORK (AP) — A engine-room explosion apparently sank a freighter in the stormy Gulf of Mexico Saturday. The Coast Guard said six of the crew of 34 were rescued.

Search for two lifeboats and one liferaft from the Liberian freighter Vainqueur continued through the night.

The Coast Guard said another sea search ended when a sea-going tug, last heard from Tuesday in the Atlantic, was spotted nearing Bermuda with her crew of 20 safe.

The Vainquer's six survivors, riding six-foot seas on an inflatable raft, were picked up by the merchant vessell Arbitrator, of British registry, bound for Beaumont, Tex.

Apollo 9's Movies Show Flight Had 2 'Spacewalkers'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut David A. Scott crawled almost completely into space out of the Apollo 9 command module on the third day of the space flight, movies taken during the space flight revealed here Saturday.

Pictures taken by astronaut Russell L. Schweickart show Scott emerging from the open hatch three times, restrained only by the plastic-like oxygen hoses that kept him alive.

The pictures — in color — were taken while Schweickart was standing outside the lunar module, which was linked to the command vehicle, the space agency said.

* * * *

THEY SHOW Scott, wearing a pressure suit and red helmet, reaching out of the open hatch to retrieve thermal samples on the side of the command module.

In one sequence, Scott reaches so far out that only the lower part of his legs remain in the spacecraft.

Pictures also showed Schweickart standing on the lunar module porch operating a camera.

NONE SHOWED the third astronaut, James A. McDivitt, who commanded the space flight and never left the interior of the crafts.

Other parts of the five-minute movie showed the lunar module — America's moon landing machine — flying toward the command module in the rendezvous maneuver of the fifth day of the mission.

The module, which contained McDivitt and Schweickart, is shown turning in space, its rendezvous lights blinking. The sun glinted off its aluminum skin. Pictures were taken by Scott from the command module.

Also released was a still photo of the lunar module locked with the third-stage booster.

This was taken just before Scott guided the command module to a docking with the lunar module. The two were then separated from the booster.

In the long movie sequence on Scott, the astronaut grasps match-book-sized thermal samples, tugging them free before disappearing into the hatch. One group of samples — which measures the amount of heat the skin of spacecraft felt — was attached by lanyards. As Scott took one, the others floated in a string out into space. He pulled them back by the cord.

* * * *

WHILE THE pictures were being released, the three astronauts spent nine hours talking about their 10-day flight.

The trio started a 10-day debriefing only 15 hours after their return home. They will work nine hours a day, talking into tape recorders and being quizzed by experts.

They also went through a two-hour medical examination, their second since ending the space flight with a perfect landing Thursday in the Atlantic Ocean.

Debriefing will end on March 25 when the spacemen hold a press conference. Two days later they are to be honored at a White House dinner.

COL. DAVID SCOTT leans far out of spacecraft's hatch to retrieve thermal sensors attached to outside of the Apollo 9 in films released Saturday by NASA. At times, only the lower part of Scott's legs were inside the craft and he was restrained only by a thin, plastic-like oxygen tube. In his left hand, Scott holds cord to which the sensors are attached.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

'Finally Loved,' Judy Takes 5th Husband Amid Cheers

Combined News Services

It was typically cold and murky, but for singer Judy Garland London Saturday was that place "somewhere over the rainbow." She married her fifth husband and happily told the world that "finally, finally, I am loved."

While an adoring crowd blocked traffic and chanted "Judy! Judy! Judy!" Miss Garland, 46, and Mickey Deans, a 35-year-old New York discotheque owner, were wed in a simpel 15-minute civil ceremony at the Chelsea register office.

With singer Johnny Ray as best man and a crowd of some 200 ranging from toddlers to little old ladies with umbrellas cheering them on, the diminutive actress and her businessman husband married again — for the record since Deans said an earlier ritual wasn't legal because of a divorce technicality.

It was 34 years ago that Judy Garland sang her way into millions of hearts with "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" as Dorothy in the "Wizard of Oz."

OVER THE RAINBOW is there for Judy Garland. The singer was married to discotheque owner Mickey Deans (left) in London. At right is the best man, singer Johnny Ray, after the ceremony.

KIN FALL OUT

Shipping Magnate Stavros Niarchos Saturday accused his former brother-in-law, Aristotle Onassis, of planning to make exorbitant profits from a new oil refinery he is to build for the Greek government.

Onassis was reported on his way to the Canary Islands to join his wife and was not available to answer the challenge.

DEVOTION

Pope Paul VI said Saturday there is a "giddiness" apparent in the world shaking even those who have devoted their lives to the church.

His reference came three days after it was learned a member of the papal household had won permission to quit the priesthood and marry, and one day after the opening of Rome's first birth control clinic.

Msgr. Giovanni Musante, 52, a pontifical chaplain, plans to marry a well-to-do 38-year-old woman.

BELLS

Television producer Don Fedderson was married Saturday to actress Yvonne Lime in a noon ceremony in Christ Church Unity in Los Angeles.

Fedderson is the creator and executive producer of the Fred MacMurray television series, "My Three Sons," and "Family Affair." His bride is co-founder of International Orphans, which cares for 2,000 war orphans in Japan and Vietnam.

CAREER ENDS

Ben Shahn, the socially conscious painter who considered himself "a storyteller, like any father and my grandfather before me," is dead at the age of 70.

His subjects had included the anarchists Sacco and Vanzetti and the labor leader Tom Mooney. He collaborated with the Mexican activist and painter Diego Rivera on a mural for the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, New York. the mural was chipped from the wall when Rivera refused to paint over a likeness of V. I. Lenin, the Soviet leader.

SHAHN

Shahn died late Friday night in Mt. Sinai Hospital in Manhattan, where he had undergone a bladder operation.

Shahn's works, carrying the twin themes of social justice and universal brotherhood, hang in the nation's most important museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, the Art Institute of Chicago and the Detroit Institute of the Arts.

Shahn was born Sept. 12, 1898 in Kaunas, then part of Czarist Russia in what is now Lithuania in the Soviet Union. His father was a woodcarver and carpenter.

VICTORY

Raymond W. Postgate, a British gastronome who decided something just had to be done about British food, retired Saturday convinced that his battle is won.

It is just 20 years since he started what he then called the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Food. He produced his first Good Food Guide with his wife from the front room of their home. It sold 8,000 copies. Now his Good Food Guides sell in excess of 100,000 a year.

Retiring at 72, Postgate mused how greatly food standards had improved, but he had these warnings as likely indicators of bad food:

A very large shining menu. It only means the landlord has an enormous deep freeze.

Staff dressed up in expensive and exotic uniforms, decor expensive and ugly. It means they're spending their money on anything but the food.

Loud canned music. It's a way of distracting you from paying attention to the food and service.

A menu full of lush description on advertising jargon like "golden brown chicken specially grilled for you" or "luscious, dew-fresh mushrooms." It simply means the food is rubbish.

Engine Blast Sinks Ship; 28 Perish

NEW YORK (AP) — A engine-room explosion apparently sank a freighter in the stormy Gulf of Mexico Saturday. The Coast Guard said six of the crew of 34 were rescued.

Search for two lifeboats and one liferaft from the Liberian freighter Vainqueur continued through the night.

The Coast Guard said another sea search ended when a sea-going tug, last heard from Tuesday in the Atlantic, was spotted nearing Bermuda with her crew of 20 safe.

The Vainquer's six survivors, riding six-foot seas on an inflatable raft, were picked up by the merchant vessel Arbitrator, of British registry, bound for Beaumont, Tex.

Apollo 9's Movies Show Flight Had 2 'Spacewalkers'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronaut David A. Scott crawled almost completely into space out of the Apollo 9 command module on the third day of the space flight, movies taken during the space flight revealed here Saturday.

Pictures taken by astronaut Russell L. Schweickart show Scott emerging from the open hatch three times, restrained only by the plastic-like oxygen hoses that kept him alive.

The pictures — in color — were taken while Schweickart was standing outside the lunar module, which was linked to the command vehicle, the space agency said.

* * * *

THEY SHOW Scott, wearing a pressure suit and red helmet, reaching out of the open hatch to retrieve thermal samples on the side of the command module.

In one sequence, Scott reaches so far out that only the lower part of his legs remain in the spacecraft.

Pictures also showed Schweickart standing on the lunar module porch operating a camera.

NONE SHOWED the third astronaut, James A. McDivitt, who commanded the space flight and never left the interior of the crafts.

Other parts of the five-minute movie showed the lunar module — America's moon landing machine — flying toward the command module in the rendezvous maneuver of the fifth day of the mission.

The module, which contained McDivitt and Schweickart, is shown turning in space, its rendezvous lights blinking. The sun glinted off its aluminum skin. Pictures were taken by Scott from the command module.

Also released was a still photo of the lunar module locked with the third-stage booster.

This was taken just before Scott guided the command module to a docking with the lunar module. The two were then separated from the booster.

In the long movie sequence on Scott, the astronaut grasps match-book-sized thermal samples, tugging them free before disappearing into the hatch. One group of samples — which measures the amount of heat the skin of spacecraft felt — was attached by lanyards. As Scott took one, the others floated in a string out into space. He pulled them back by the cord.

* * * *

WHILE THE pictures were being released, the three astronauts spent nine hours talking about their 10-day flight.

The trio started a 10-day debriefing only 15 hours after their return home. They will work nine hours a day, talking into tape recorders and being quizzed by experts.

They also went through a two-hour medical examination, their second since ending the space flight with a perfect landing Thursday in the Atlantic Ocean.

Debriefing will end on March 25 when the spacemen hold a press conference. Two days later they are to be honored at a White House dinner.

COL. DAVID SCOTT leans far out of spacecraft's hatch to retrieve thermal sensors attached to outside of the Apollo 9 in films released Saturday by NASA. At times, only the lower part of Scott's legs were inside the craft and he was restrained only by a thin, plastic-like oxygen tube. In his left hand, Scott holds cord to which the sensors are attached.

SEVERAL HOPEFULS HOSTILE TO PLAN

ANAHEIM SEX EDUCATION KEY ISSUE IN ELECTION

By JIM McCAULEY
Staff Writer

Anaheim, the national cradle of modern sex education, faces an April 15 election that could evict the birds and bees from the classroom.

Paul W. Cook, Anaheim Union High School District superintendent, predicts that the curriculum on family life and sex education will be a major issue at the upcoming school-board election.

Related Story, Page A-4

The developments:

— A larger than usual field, of 17 candidates, including several hostile to teaching sex education in the classroom, have filed for the three board spots that are up for grabs. (At stake is majority control on the five-man board).

— The comprehensive 7th to 12th grade Anaheim "family life" curriculum has become a national model for sex education. It is now in its fourth year.

— Parents, given the chance to withdraw their children from the program, seldom do. Asked by letter whether they wanted their child to skip the program, 1 per cent of the parents favored dropping out the first year. This year, the dropouts declined to three-fourths of 1 per cent.

— Several national magazines, including Time, Redbook and Good Housekeeping, have lauded the Anaheim approach to family life and sex education.

— The national acclaim for the Anaheim program, including the fact 1,500 outside educators have requested copies of the curriculum, stirred up opposition. National organizations in opposition to sex education in the classroom have centered their fire on Anaheim.

A self-styled "Christian Crusader" of Tulsa, Okla., Billy James Hargis, widely has circulated a mimeographed sheet which asks: "Is the school house the proper place to teach raw sex?"

* * * *

ONE OF THE charges leveled by Hargis: "In Anaheim, the head of the sex education program is Sally R. Williams ... In some elementary grades in Anaheim, as part of the sex training, little children, fresh out of their mother's arms, are taught to model sex organs in clay. The film series, 'How Babies Are Made,' is also included in the curriculum."

Mrs. Williams, coordinator of family life and sex education at Anaheim Union High School District, replied that the only sex education program in Anaheim begins at the seventh grade. Asked if sex organs are modeled out of clay, she said: "Heavens, no!"

In Washington, the National School Public Relations Assn. warned that sex education is the target of intensified attacks. It stated:

* * * *

"WITHIN THE past six months sex education programs have become the center of bitter controversies throughout the country. The attacks usually come from small but well organized and very vocal parent groups which often have ties with extreme right-wing political organizations, according to the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, a nonprofit voluntary health organization ...

"Sex education is facing its worst problem in California, where the state board of education has ordered an investigation of all sex programs in the public schools. A board spokesman said the investigation was sparked by a deluge of letters and calls from discontented parents ...

"The names of the groups which oppose sex education include Sanity on Sex, Mothers Organized for Moral Stability, Parents' Rights, People Against Unconstitutional Sex Education."

* * * *

THE JOHN BIRCH Society also has announced a campaign, known as the "Movement to Restore Decency," to eliminate or restrict sex education programs. Robert Welch, society president, says sex education is part of a Communist plot to destroy the morals of youth and to keep them obsessed with sex.

Orange County State Sen. John G. Schmitz, a member of the Birch Society, has introduced a bill which bans the teaching of sex education with graphic illustrations of the human anatomy unless such a course is requested in writing by parents. A companion Schmitz resolution would call for a state probe of sex education courses and request school boards not to institute new ones.

The sex-education attitudes of Anaheim candidates varies widely. Among the opinions of school-board hopefuls:

James P. Bonnell, a systems analyst, of 856 S. Cardiff St. — "As presently constituted, I am opposed to the family life and sex education program. Sex education ideally should be in the home supplemented by the church and family physician."

Phillip A. Ramseyer, a Long Beach teacher, of 2339 W. Mall Ave. — "The three incumbents are using scare tactics ... to the effect that if you don't vote for them, the anti-sex zealots or the John Birch Society will take over. Sex education should not have been used to gain statewide and national recognization in a manner that antagonized a segment of the community. I favor sex education in the classroom but would criticize the way this program has been sold. There have been some mistakes and it needs continuous refinements."

Robert A. Bark, of 5362 Verner Dr., La Palma, a retired narcotics agent — "I feel there has been an overemphasis on sex education. I am concerned about the narcotic and drug-abuse problem — also the trend toward sensitivity training. If elected, I would ask that the district suspend any connection with the Sex Informational and Educational Council. I feel there is a conglomeration of people involved in money-making schemes in various phases of sex and sex education."

Mrs. Katherine E. McDonald, an insurance agent, of 403 Gain St. — I am not in favor of our program as it is being taught. I do not favor combining boys and girls in the same class nor going into sex education into the lengths they go now."

Roy L. Hutts, a pension consultant, of 8852 Syracuse Ave. — "It is overemphasized, distracting from the basic curriculum. The $385,000 budget for family life is almost equal to the amount of money being spent on English. It has to be reviewed and shouldn't go too far in depth."

William U. Almand, a shop superintendent, an incumbent, of 3335 W. Lincoln Ave. — I don't feel sex education is necessarily going to be an issue. The election will determine there is public support for the program."

John Barton, machine shop general manager, an incumbent, of 6342 San Lorenzo Drive, Buena Park. — "A half dozen of the people running hope to remove the curriculum and return to the middle ages. Also, they're talking about curtailing or eliminating music and drama. Our opponents feel that if they can knock off sex education in Anaheim, they can do it in the whole country."

Mrs. Dorothy Bailey, of 8802 San Mateo Circle, Buena Park — "I am concerned with the goals of the special program. Enlightment is one thing but approach is something else. The way it is now too much emphasis is on actualities and not enough on symbolism.

Dale F. Nuzum, technical writer, of 9931 Woodley Ave. — "I consider family life and sex education very essential. Teenagers are at a disadvantage what with the new movies coming out. They are exposed to things today that I wasn't exposed to until my 20s. I'd also like to see some adult training on the subject."

Allen J. Long, real estate broker, of 2626 E. Alki Pl. — "There may be a place for sex education, but it isn't this program. This is an anti-life program that advocates sex without morals. A tax-supported school isn't the place for it. It has caused entirely too much controversy."

Vincent P. Pietruk, machine shop operator, of 1008 E. South St. — "It seems to me that sex education has gotten into areas beyond what I thought it would go. I don't know whether they go into morality enough. I would want to have the program checked further. It varies too much from teacher to teacher."

Mrs. Eleanor Page, of 2054 Della Lane — "My position is very much in favor of the concepts in family life and sex education. As far as I have gone in various discussions, I have found a greater percentage of parents support it. Those who oppose it have not gone to school to check out their questions."

SEX EDUCATION isn't the only issue in the campaign — though it is a key one. Candidates Ramseyer and Mrs. Page separately charged that the three incumbents have identical job ties. Their places of business — Deuwhit Metal Products and Gamma Industries — all were in the same building earlier this year.

"A core group on the board should not come from one company," declared Mrs. Page. "You could call any one of them at the same phone number," said Ramseyer.

Others in the 17-candidate field: Incumbent Irving Pickler, of 2377 Mall Ave.; Gene T. Jaeger, life insurance salesman, of 4900 Hazelnut Ave., Seal Beach; William Silverman, of 507 Westgate Ave., and Dr. John R. Kent, of 7852 Colgate Ave., Westminster.

Socialite's Arms Cache Trial Ready

FRESNO (AP) — San Francisco socialiate William E. Thoresen III is scheduled to go to trial Monday in U.S. District Court in Fresno, nearly two years after Thoresen and his wife Louise, were charged with illegal possession and transportation of firearms.

Frederal authorities raided their fashionable mansion in the Pacific Heights area of San Francisco in April 1967 and found 77 tons of arms and ammunition. Among the weapons were 17 machine guns, nine submachine guns, two 20mm anti-aircraft guns, a bazooka and two cannons.

Four days after the raid Thoresen surrendered, posted $55,000 bail by certified check and began a series of legal maneuvers.

Early last year, change of venue to Fresno was granted because of what was termed "prejudicial publicity" surrounding the case.

SEVERAL HOPEFULS HOSTILE TO PLAN

ANAHEIM SEX EDUCATION KEY ISSUE IN ELECTION

By JIM McCAULEY
Staff Writer

Anaheim, the national cradle of modern sex education, faces an April 15 election that could evict the birds and bees from the classroom.

Paul W. Cook, Anaheim Union High School District superintendent, predicts that the curriculum on family life and sex education will be a major issue at the upcoming school-board election.

Related Story, Page A-4

The developments:

— A larger than usual field of 17 candidates, including several hostile to teaching sex education in the classroom, have filed for the three board spots that are up for grabs. (At stake is majority control on the five-man board).

— The comprehensive 7th to 12th grade Anaheim "family life" curriculum has become a national model for sex education. It is now in its fourth year.

— Parents, given the chance to withdraw their children from the program, seldom do. Asked by letter whether they wanted their child to skip the program, 1 per cent of the parents favored dropping out the first year. This year, the dropouts declined to three-fourths of 1 per cent.

— Several national magazines, including Time, Redbook and Good Housekeeping, have lauded the Anaheim approach to family life and sex education.

— The national acclaim for the Anaheim program, including the fact 1,500 outside educators have requested copies of the curriculum, stirred up opposition. National organizations in opposition to sex education in the classroom have centered their fire on Anaheim.

A self-styled "Christian Crusader" of Tulsa, Okla., Billy James Hargis, widely has circulated a mimeographed sheet which asks: "Is the school house the proper place to teach raw sex?"

* * * *

ONE OF THE charges leveled by Hargis: "In Anaheim, the head of the sex education program is Sally R. Williams ... In some elementary grades in Anaheim, as part of the sex training, little children, fresh out of their mother's arms, are taught to model sex organs in clay. The film series, 'How Babies Are Made,' is also included in the curriculum."

Mrs. Williams, coordinator of family life and sex education at Anaheim Union High School District, replied that the only sex education program in Anaheim begins at the seventh grade. Asked if sex organs are modeled out of clay, she said: "Heavens, no!"

In Washington, the National School Public Relations Assn. warned that sex education is the target of intensified attacks. It stated:

* * * *

"WITHIN THE past six months sex education programs have become the center of bitter controversies throughout the country. The attacks usually come from small but well organized and very vocal parent groups which often have ties with extreme right-wing political organizations, according to the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, a nonprofit voluntary health organization ...

"Sex education is facing its worst problem in California, where the state board of education has ordered an investigation of all sex programs in the public schools. A board spokesman said the investigation was sparked by a deluge of letters and calls from discontented parents ...

"The names of the groups which oppose sex education include Sanity on Sex, Mothers Organized for Moral Stability, Parents' Rights, People Against Unconstitutional Sex Education."

* * * *

THE JOHN BIRCH Society also has announced a campaign, known as the "Movement to Restore Decency," to eliminate or restrict sex education programs. Robert Welch, society president, says sex education is part of a Communist plot to destroy the morals of youth and to keep them obsessed with sex.

Orange County State Sen. John G. Schmitz, a member of the Birch Society, has introduced a bill which bans the teaching of sex education with graphic illustrations of the human anatomy unless such a course is requested in writing by parents. A companion Schmitz resolution would call for a state probe of sex education courses and request school boards not to institute new ones.

The sex-education attitudes of Anaheim candidates varies widely. Among the opinions of school-board hopefuls:

James P. Bonnell, a systems analyst, of 856 S. Cardiff St. — "As presently constituted, I am opposed to the family life and sex education program. Sex education ideally should be in the home supplemented by the church and family physician."

Phillip A. Ramseyer, a Long Beach teacher, of 2339 W. Mall Ave. — "The three incumbents are using scare tactics ... to the effect that if you don't vote for them, the anti-sex zealots or the John Birch Society will take over. Sex education should not have been used to gain statewide and national recognization in a manner that antagonized a segment of the community. I favor sex education in the classroom but would criticize the way this program has been sold. There have been some mistakes and it needs continuous refinements."

Robert A. Bark, of 5362 Verner Dr., La Palma, a retired narcotics agent — "I feel there has been an overemphasis on sex education. I am concerned about the narcotic and drug-abuse problem — also the trend toward sensitivity training. If elected, I would ask that the district suspend any connection with the Sex Informational and Educational Council. I feel there is a conglomeration of people involved in money-making schemes in various phases of sex and sex education."

Mrs. Katherine E. McDonald, an insurance agent, of 403 Gain St. — I am not in favor of our program as it is being taught. I do not favor combining boys and girls in the same class nor going into sex education into the lengths they go now."

Roy L. Hutts, a pension consultant, of 8852 Syracuse Ave. — "It is overemphasized, distracting from the basic curriculum. The $385,000 budget for family life is almost equal to the amount of money being spent on English. It has to be reviewed and shouldn't go too far in depth."

William U. Almand, a shop superintendent, an incumbent, of 3335 W. Lincoln Ave. — I don't feel sex education is necessarily going to be an issue. The election will determine there is public support for the program."

John Barton, machine shop general manager, an incumbent, of 6342 San Lorenzo Drive, Buena Park. — "A half dozen of the people running hope to remove the curriculum and return to the middle ages. Also, they're talking about curtailing or eliminating music and drama. Our opponents feel that if they can knock off sex education in Anaheim, they can do it in the whole country."

Mrs. Dorothy Bailey, of 8802 San Mateo Circle, Buena Park — "I am concerned with the goals of the special program. Enlightment is one thing but approach is something else. The way it is now too much emphasis is on actualities and not enough on symbolism.

Dale F. Nuzum, technical writer, of 9931 Woodley Ave. — "I consider family life and sex education very essential. Teenagers are at a disadvantage what with the new movies coming out. Q. We would like to get tickets for the "Dean Martin Show" and various other television shows but we've heard that there is a very long waiting list. What are the procedures for obtaining tickets to the different network TV productions? G.P., San Pedro.

A. ACTION LINE receives many requests for information on tickets to television shows. Here's what the three networks say: NBC—Ticket requests should be sent to the Guest Relations Department, National Broadcasting Co. Television Network, 3000 Alameda Ave., Burbank. Requests should include the name of the desired show and approximate date. Beth Reeg at NBC said there is a 2½ year waiting list for "The Dean Martin Show" tickets. Tickets for other NBC shows are available according to popularity. There are a limited number of tickets given out for various shows at the NBC lobby, she explained, but it would be best to get there before 8:00 a.m. Monday mornings when the window opens. CBS—Ticket requests, which should mention the particular show and date, are handled by the CBS Ticket Office, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply which should take about 3 to 12 weeks and also mention if any members of your group are under 15 years of age as there are age restrictions on some TV shows. Tours of the television facilities at CBS are conducted Monday through Friday on the hour from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Children must be 8 years or older and be accompanied by an adult. ABC—Ticket requests for ABC shows are handled through the Guest Relations Department, ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, and should include the name of the show and approximate date. A limited number of tickets are passed out in the ABC lobby for some of the daytime game shows that have no waiting list. "The Lawrence Welk Show" has a nine month waiting list and "The Joey Bishop Show," a seven month list.

You recently suggested a reader send his surplus used postage stamps to a Veterans Hospital hobby group — certainly a worthwhile donation. I feel, though, that your readers also should know about the collection of used postage stamps conducted by the Washington State Council of Churches, Room 210, 2005 Fifth Ave., Seattle, Wash. 98121. They collect stamps, particularly large and medium-sized commemorative, foreign, and air mail, and sell them to dealers. The money raised is used to buy surplus U.S. government food, through the Church World Service, to be sent to hungry people abroad. The stamp project collected $42,372 from 1963-67 for this purpose. Stamps for the project may be sent or taken locally to the Bay Shore Church, 5100 The Toledo, Long Beach. Defective stamps can not be used. The best way is to cut out the section of the envelope on which the stamp is pasted and deliver it that way. Mrs. M. G., Long Beach.

RUSSIANS VS RED CHINESE
Peking's Hsinhau Agency claims this photo shows Soviet frontier troops fleeing at full speed from Chenpao Island and heading toward the eastern bank of the Ussuri River on the Sino-Soviet border. ed the Soviet frontier post on the island Friday and that a Chinese detachment attacked Soviet guards Saturday and made no reference to the casualties reported by Moscow radio.

THE SOVIET protest to Peking, distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass, said that on Saturday a "big detachment of Chinese soldiers, supported by artillery and mortar fire, attacked Soviet guards who were protecting the island."

"Through measures adopted, the provocateurs were expelled from the island," Tass added.

Moscow accused the Chinese of provoking "fresh incidents" and warned: "If further attempts are made to violate the inviolability Soviet territory, the Soviet Union and all its peoples will resolutely defend it and give a crushing blow to such violations."

"All responsibility for possible severe consequences from a similar type of adventuristic actions of the Chinese authorities lies wholly on the Chinese side," the Soviet protest said.

Peking radio, in turn, said Russian soldiers supported by a big convoy of armored cars and tanks intruded into Chinese territory near the island Saturday. The broadcast said the Russians attacked and Chinese border patrols were "compelled to shoot back in self defense.

New China News Agency NCNA said Chinese guards on the island are beefing up their preparedness against "new provocations by the Soviet revisionists."

"SHOULD THE Soviet revisionists dare to keep on intruding into China, we revolutionary fighters, armed with Mao Tse-tung's thought, will crush them to pieces and will never let them escape."

The People's Daily, official organ of the Chinese Communist party, said there had been 16 intrusions into the island by Soviet troops between Jan. 23, 1967, and last March 2. NCNA said the paper published photographs intended to prove that the Russians "deliberately encroached" on the island.

The March 2 skirmish was the first reference by either side to an armed clash in the area, however.

Heavy Snows Rip Southwest

United Press International

A savage late-winter storm verging on a blizzard paralyzed much of southeastern New Mexico and western Texas Saturday with up to 12 inches of snow which was swept by powerful winds in some areas into drifts six feet high.

Hobbs, N.M., was isolated. Taxis and buses quit running and airport operations were shut down in Lubbock, Tex. As far north as the Oklahoma Panhandle, roads were choked with snow and closed.

Only a temperature of 27 degrees, a few degrees above blizzard range, enabled the snow to escape that classification.

Isolated Hobbs measured a foot of new snow and more than 100 cars and buses were stranded on snow-choked U.S. 180 between Hobbs and Carlsbad, N.M. Snow made the entrance to Carlsbad Caverns impassable and forced the closing of the tourist attraction.

National Guard four-wheel drive trucks and road graders fought through the snow clogging U.S. 180 to reach the stranded travelers.

In Texas, snow fell as far south as El Paso on the Mexican border, Midland and Abilene. Rain drenched central and eastern Texas and stretched into Louisiana. Rainfall amounts of 2 inches were common.

Lightning accompanied the snow storm in Lubbock, illuminating the sky with an eerie purplish cast, and sleet was mixed with the snow in both Lubbock and Wichita Falls.

Lubbock, with 6 inches of snow whipped by strong winds into drifts 3 to 6 feet high, was paralyzed. But conditions were worse further south at Seminole and Seagraves, closer to the New Mexico border. Winds were clocked at 30 and 45 miles per hour.

ganizations said they will "continue the strike until we win—even if it takes 10 years."

Compounding the potentially explosive student situation was a fire that caused an estimated $4,000 damage to an employe lunchroom at the Lillian Street Elementary School in South Central Los Angeles.

Nine city and county fire units fought the blaze, which sent black smoke clouds billowing skyward.

* * * *

FEARS OF continued student unrest swept Los Angeles Saturday as those involved in the boycott met at several locations ni the city.

One rally, held at South Park, drew an estimated 300 Black Panther and BSU members, some of whom were armed, according to police.

Pepperdine College, scene of the Wednesday night shotgun slaying of Washington High School student Larry Kimmons, 15, was under BSU pressure for administration acceptance of a 12-point list of demands.

Police termed the Black Panthers prime suspects in the predawn gunfire barrage fired into the apartment of James Leroy Goss, 31, of South Central Los Angeles.

Goss, vice chairman of Ron Karenga's supermilitant "US" organization, was uninjured as 25 rounds from a highpowered rifle and a .45-caliber pistol careened through his first-floor apartment.

The slugs passed through his living room walls and into an adjacent apartment in which two children were sleeping. They were not injured.

POLICE said they have substantial evidence linking the Panthers to the shooting and said the incident was apparently in retaliation for the shooting Friday afternoon of Panther Ronald Freeman, 24, at a South Central Los Angeles church.

Police were seeking four men with shaved heads—the US trademark—who were seen fleeing the scene in an auto seconds after the shooting of Freeman, who is in satisfactory condition.

Goss told officers he and his wife, Carmelita, crouched on their bedroom floor as the shot crashed into the apartment.

MEMBERS of the Panthers and US have been sparring for control of militant Negro student organizations—a contest for power that resulted in County Grand Jury murder indictments against five US members in the January slayings of two Panthers at UCLA following a meeting on establishment of a black studies program.

The school boycott was sparked by police dispersal of March 7 of a sit-in at George Washington Carver Junior High School by 200 youngsters protesting the arrest of a collegiate BSU member.

Militant leaders are demanding police be barred from campuses, that more Negro principals and teachers be hired and that predominantly Negro neighborhoods be given greater control of local schools.

Orange County Delays Sex-Education Probe

An emotion-packed probe into the controversial sex-education courses offered in some Orange County schools was sidetracked by the county Board of Education until it can study two surveys yet to be reported.

Chairman Clay Mitchell of the county board said County Superintendent of Schools Robert D. Peterson's independent survey will be studied by the county board, and it will seek a legal opinion as to whether it can join with local boards of trustees in planning family life courses.

Mitchell said the whole issue will be set over until June so board members can get the reports and study them.

He stressed the county board "has no authority" over study courses offered in local school districts but is anxious to know if it can cooperate in planning them.

The county board has jurisdiction only over "county" schools such as are maintained for juvenile offenders; physically handicapped or mentally retarded.

A proposal to institute sex-instruction courses in some of these schools triggered a dispute which embroiled the county board's last four meetings.

Superintendent Peterson's involvement developed unexpectedly; he had sent out a 19-question survey and one of the queries dealt with sex education. He refused to report it to the board, because he said it "might influence" its deliberations. However, he delivered sealed envelopes to each of the trustees, detailing its findings.

Enemy Defies Nixon to Retaliate in Viet against the northern South Vietnamese city of Hue.

In stopping the bombing of North Vietnam last Nov. 1, Pesident Lyndon B. Johnson said North Vietnam understood that "a total bombing halt must not risk the lives of our men." Johnson said it had been made clear to Hanoi also that productive peace talks in Paris would be impossible during shelling of South Vietnamese cities and abuse of the DMZ. Hanio has said there was no agreement on such conditions.

Nixon has taken the position since the enemy offensive opened three weeks ago that last fall's bomb halt understanding remains in force, but that any response to violations must weigh against the possibility of upsetting the Paris peace discussions.

Nixon has also linked his consideration of U.S. retaliation to whether the U.S. casualty rate remains high. GI deaths in Vietnam are now running more than double the level before the enemy offensive, though last week showed some drop.

Some administration advisers see the reported DMZ buildup as adding a serious new element in weighing what to do.

During today's attacks Viet Cong gunners fired seven Soviet-made 122mm rockets into Saigon in the predawn barrage, the first attack on the capital in 10 days. Attacks also were directed against the U.S. 25th Infantry Division camp at Dau Tieng.

Military authorities said the rockets injured one person and damaged a number of slum dwellings in Saigon. Casualties and damage at military bases under fire were described as light.

The round of shelling Saturday night and early Sunday also hit five provincial capitals in the Mekong Delta, killing one civilian and wounding two others.

In patrols around the Capitol Saturday, U.S. Air Cavalrymen uncovered another cache of Communist arms 27 miles west of Saigon.

Vice Squad Cracks Down on Bottomless Taverns

Sheriff's vice officers jailed a Long Beach bottomless dancer and the owner and manager of a Hawthorne tavern early Saturday in a continuing crackdown on bare-bottom bars in the Lennox area.

The officers, who have nabbed three dancers and their managers in the last two nights, believe the arrests may discourage bottomless bar owners in other parts of the county.

"We expect more arrests in the same district," Sheriff's Sgt. Jack Greenleaf says.

The latest raid was made at The Real Thing Bar, 10927 Hawthorne Blvd., after about 80 persons viewed a performance by Brenda Joyce Caddell, 22, of Long Beach.

SHE WAS booked on suspicion of indecent exposure. Bar owner James J. Dozal, 32, of Los Angeles and manager Gary D. Wallak, 25, of Rolling Hills, were jailed on suspicion of assisting a person to commit indecent exposure.

Previous arrests were made Thursday and Friday at the Kit Kat Bar, 10513 Hawthorne Blvd., Lennox, and the Boom Boom Room, 1818 Rosecrans Ave., Gardena.

CBS—Ticket requests, which should mention the particular show and date, are handled by the CBS Ticket Office, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply which should take about 3 to 12 weeks and also mention if any members of your group are under 15 years of age as there are age restrictions on some TV shows. Tours of the television facilities at CBS are conducted Monday through Friday on the hour from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Children must be 8 years or older and be accompanied by an adult. ABC—Ticket requests for ABC shows are handled through the Guest Relations Department, ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, and should include the name of the show and approximate date. A limited number of tickets are passed out in the ABC lobby for some of the daytime game shows that have no waiting list. "The Lawrence Welk Show" has a nine month waiting list and "The Joey Bishop Show," a seven month list.

You recently suggested a reader send his surplus used postage stamps to a Veterans Hospital hobby group — certainly a worthwhile donation. I feel, though, that your readers also should know about the collection of used postage stamps conducted by the Washington State Council of Churches, Room 210, 2005 Fifth Ave., Seattle, Wash. 98121. They collect stamps, particularly large and medium-sized commemorative, foreign, and air mail, and sell them to dealers. The money raised is used to buy surplus U.S. government food, through the Church World Service, to be sent to hungry people abroad. The stamp project collected $42,372 from 1963-67 for this purpose. Stamps for the project may be sent or taken locally to the Bay Shore Church, 5100 The Toledo, Long Beach. Defective stamps can not be used. The best way is to cut out the section of the envelope on which the stamp is pasted and deliver it that way. Mrs. M. G., Long Beach.

RUSSIANS VS RED CHINESE

Peking's Hsinhau Agency claims this photo shows Soviet frontier troops fleeing at full speed from Chenpao Island and heading toward the eastern bank of the Ussuri River on the Sino-Soviet border. The second bloody clash in two weeks between Soviet and Red Chinese troops took place on the disputed island Saturday.

Bloody Soviet, Chinese Clash Grows

ed the Soviet frontier post on the island Friday and that a Chinese detachment attacked Soviet guards Saturday and made no reference to the casualties reported by Moscow radio.

* * * *

THE SOVIET protest to Peking, distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass, said that on Saturday a "big detachment of Chinese soldiers, supported by artillery and mortar fire, attacked Soviet guards who were protecting the island."

"Through measures adopted, the provocateurs were expelled from the island," Tass added.

Moscow accused the Chinese of provoking "fresh incidents" and warned: "If further attempts are made to violate the inviolability Soviet territory, the Soviet Union and all its peoples will resolutely defend it and give a crushing blow to such violations."

"All responsibility for possible severe consequences from a similar type of adventuristic actions of the Chinese authorities lies wholly on the Chinese side," the Soviet protest said.

Peking radio, in turn, said Russian soldiers supported by a big convoy of armored cars and tanks intruded into Chinese territory near the island Saturday. The broadcast said the Russians attacked and Chinese border patrols were "compelled to shoot back in self defense.

New China News Agency NCNA said Chinese guards on the island are beefing up their preparedness against "new provocations by the Soviet revisionists."

"SHOULD THE Soviet revisionists dare to keep on intruding into China, we revolutionary fighters, armed with Mao Tse-tung's thought, will crush them to pieces and will never let them escape."

The People's Daily, official organ of the Chinese Communist party, said there had been 16 intrusions into the island by Soviet troops between Jan. 23, 1967, and last March 2. NCNA said the paper published photographs intended to prove that the Russians "deliberately encroached" on the island.

The March 2 skirmish was the first reference by either side to an armed clash in the area, however.

Heavy Snows Rip Southwest

United Press International

A savage late-winter storm verging on a blizzard paralyzed much of southeastern New Mexico and western Texas Saturday with up to 12 inches of snow which was swept by powerful winds in some areas into drifts six feet high.

Hobbs, N.M., was isolated. Taxis and buses quit running and airport operations were shut down in Lubbock, Tex. As far north as the Oklahoma Panhandle, roads were choked with snow and closed.

Only a temperature of 27 degrees, a few degrees above blizzard range, enabled the snow to escape that classification.

Isolated Hobbs measured a foot of new snow and more than 100 cars and buses were stranded on snow-choked U.S. 180 between Hobbs and Carlsbad, N.M. Snow made the entrance to Carlsbad Caverns impassable and forced the closing of the tourist attraction.

National Guard four-wheel drive trucks and road graders fought through the snow clogging U.S. 180 to reach the stranded travelers.

In Texas, snow fell as far south as El Paso on the Mexican border, Midland and Abilene. Rain drenched central and eastern Texas and stretched into Louisiana. Rainfall amounts of 2 inches were common.

Lightning accompanied the snow storm in Lubbock, illuminating the sky with an errie purplish cast, and sleet was mixed with the snow in both Lubbock and Wichita Falls.

Lubbock, with 6 inches of snow whipped by strong winds into drifts 3 to 6 feet high, was paralyzed. But conditions were worse further south at Seminole and Seagraves, closer to the New Mexico border. Winds were clocked at 30 and 45 miles per hour.

Factions Battle; Tension Up

ganizations said they will "continue the strike until we win—even if it takes 10 years."

Compounding the potentially explosive student situation was a fire that caused an estimated $4,000 damage to an employe lunchroom at the Lillian Street Elementary School in South Central Los Angeles.

Nine city and county fire units fought the blaze, which sent black smoke clouds billowing skyward.

* * * *

FEARS OF continued student unrest swept Los Angeles Saturday as those involved in the boycott met at several locations ni the city.

One rally, held at South Park, drew an estimated 300 Black Panther and BSU members, some of whom were armed, according to police.

Pepperdine College, scene of the Wednesday night shotgun slaying of Washington High School student Larry Kimmons, 15, was under BSU pressure for administration acceptance of a 12-point list of demands.

Police termed the Black Panthers prime suspects in the predawn gunfire barrage fired into the apartment of James Leroy Goss, 31, of South Central Los Angeles.

Goss, vice chairman of Ron Karenga's supermilitant "US" organization, was uninjured as 25 rounds from a highpowered rifle and a .45-caliber pistol careened through his first-floor apartment.

The slugs passed through his living room walls and into an adjacent apartment in which two children were sleeping. They were not injured.

POLICE said they have substantial evidence linking the Panthers to the shooting and said the incident was apparently in retaliation for the shooting Friday afternoon of Panther Ronald Freeman, 24, at a South Central Los Angeles church.

Police were seeking four men with shaved heads—the US trademark—who were seen fleeing the scene in an auto seconds after the shooting of Freeman, who is in satisfactory condition.

Goss told officers he and his wife, Carmelita, crouched on their bedroom floor as the shot crashed into the apartment.

MEMBERS of the Panthers and US have been sparring for control of militant Negro student organizations—a contest for power that resulted in County Grand Jury murder indictments against five US members in the January slayings of two Panthers at UCLA following a meeting on establishment of a black studies program.

The school boycott was sparked by police dispersal of March 7 of a sit-in at George Washington Carver Junior High School by 200 youngsters protesting the arrest of a collegiate BSU member.

Militant leaders are demanding police be barred from campuses, that more Negro principals and teachers be hired and that predominantly Negro neighborhoods be given greater control of local schools.

Orange County Delays Sex-Education Probe

An emotion-packed probe into the controversial sex-education courses offered in some Orange County schools was sidetracked by the county Board of Education until it can study two surveys yet to be reported.

Chairman Clay Mitchell of the county board said County Superintendent of Schools Robert D. Peterson's independent survey will be studied by the county board, and it will seek a legal opinion as to whether it can join with local boards of trustees in planning family life courses.

Mitchell said the whole issue will be set over until June so board members can get the reports and study them.

He stressed the county board "has no authority" over study courses offered in local school districts but is anxious to know if it can cooperate in planning them.

The county board has jurisdiction only over "county" schools such as are maintained for juvenile offenders, physically handicapped or mentally retarded.

A proposal to institute sex-instruction courses in some of these schools triggered a dispute which embroiled the county board's last four meetings.

Superintendent Peterson's involvement developed unexpectedly; he had sent out a 19-question survey and one of the queries dealt with sex education. He refused to report it to the board, because he said it "might influence" its deliberations. However, he delivered sealed envelopes to each of the trustees, detailing its findings.

against the northern South Vietnamese city of Hue.

In stopping the bombing of North Vietnam last Nov. 1, Pesident Lyndon B. Johnson said North Vietnam understood that "a total bombing halt must not risk the lives of our men." Johnson said it had been made clear to Hanoi also that productive peace talks in Paris would be impossible during shelling of South Vietnamese cities and abuse of the DMZ. Hanio has said there was no agreement on such conditions.

Nixon has taken the position since the enemy offensive opened three weeks ago that last fall's bomb halt understanding remains in force, but that any response to violations must weigh against the possibility of upsetting the Paris peace discussions.

Nixon has also linked his consideration of U.S. retaliation to whether the U.S. casualty rate remains high. GI deaths in Vietnam are now running more than double the level before the enemy offensive, though last week showed some drop.

Some administration advisers see the reported DMZ buildup as adding a serious new element in weighing what to do.

During today's attacks Viet Cong gunners fired seven Soviet-made 122mm rockets into Saigon in the predawn barrage, the first attack on the capital in 10 days. Attacks also were directed against the U.S. 25th Infantry Division camp at Dau Tieng.

Military authorities said the rockets injured one person and damaged a number of slum dwellings in Saigon. Casualties and damage at military bases under fire were described as light.

The round of shelling Saturday night and early Sunday also hit five provincial capitals in the Mekong Delta, killing one civilian and wounding two others.

In patrols around the Capitol Saturday, U.S. Air Cavalrymen uncovered another cache of Communist arms 27 miles west of Saigon.

Vice Squad Cracks Down on Bottomless Taverns

Sheriff's vice officers jailed a Long Beach bottomless dancer and the owner and manager of a Hawthorne tavern early Saturday in a continuing crackdown on bare-bottom bars in the Lennox area.

The officers, who have nabbed three dancers and their managers in the last two nights, believe the arrests may discourage bottomless bar owners in other parts of the county.

"We expect more arrests in the same district," Sheriff's Sgt. Jack Greenleaf says.

The latest raid was made at The Real Thing Bar, 10927 Hawthorne Blvd., after about 80 persons viewed a performance by Brenda Joyce Caddell, 22, of Long Beach.

SHE WAS booked on suspicion of indecent exposure. Bar owner James J. Dozal, 32, of Los Angeles and manager Gary D. Wallak, 25, of Rolling Hills, were jailed on suspicion of assisting a person to commit indecent exposure.

Previous arrests were made Thursday and Friday at the Kit Kat Bar, 10513 Hawthorne Blvd., Lennox, and the Boom Boom Room, 1818 Rosecrans Ave., Gardena.

Travel Plan Unit Proposed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan proposed Saturday creating a new state agency to try to grapple with the transportation issue of "after rubber tires and concrete freeways, what next?"

He announced legislation would be introduced calling for a new state office of transportation planning along with a seven-member advisory committee.

The bill, scheduled for introduction by Assembly Transportation Committee Chairman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco, will implement recommendations made last year by Reagan's special task force on transportation.

* * * *

THE NEW agency would attempt to figure out what burgeoning California needs in the way of transportation.

The new agency would aid in developing policies for the state's role in new transport services such as supersonic airplanes, urban transit and supertanker ships. Additionally, it would advise and help plan local transportation systems tailored to local geography.

The new agency would attempt, for example, to find out if it would be cheaper and feasible to develop an oceangoing freight ferry system between California port cities than to rely on trucks.

* * * *

ANOTHER possibility would be to learn if it would be less costly and more efficient to build an airport system linking remote mountain villages than to construct connecting highways.

The agency and its advisory board would be financed from the state general fund, highways users tax fund, aeronautics fund and harbors and watercraft fund. Federal funds also may be available.

Schemes to Foil Hijackers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In its search to find a solution to airline hijackings, the government checks out every solution the public offers, "no matter how wild," Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said Saturday.

Volpe said behind the scenes talks with Cuba were "making some progress" but he told United Press International he could not "divulge the nature of what was going on." So far this year 12 U.S. airliners have been hijacked to Cuba.

* * * *

VOLPE said the Federal Aviation Administration investigates any idea that looks the slightest bit practical.

"Let's face it, there were people who never dreamed you could fly, there were people 500 years ago who said there was nothing behind Europe except dragons, but Columbus said there was something out there," he said.

According to the FAA, it has received a suggestion from everyone except Columbus.

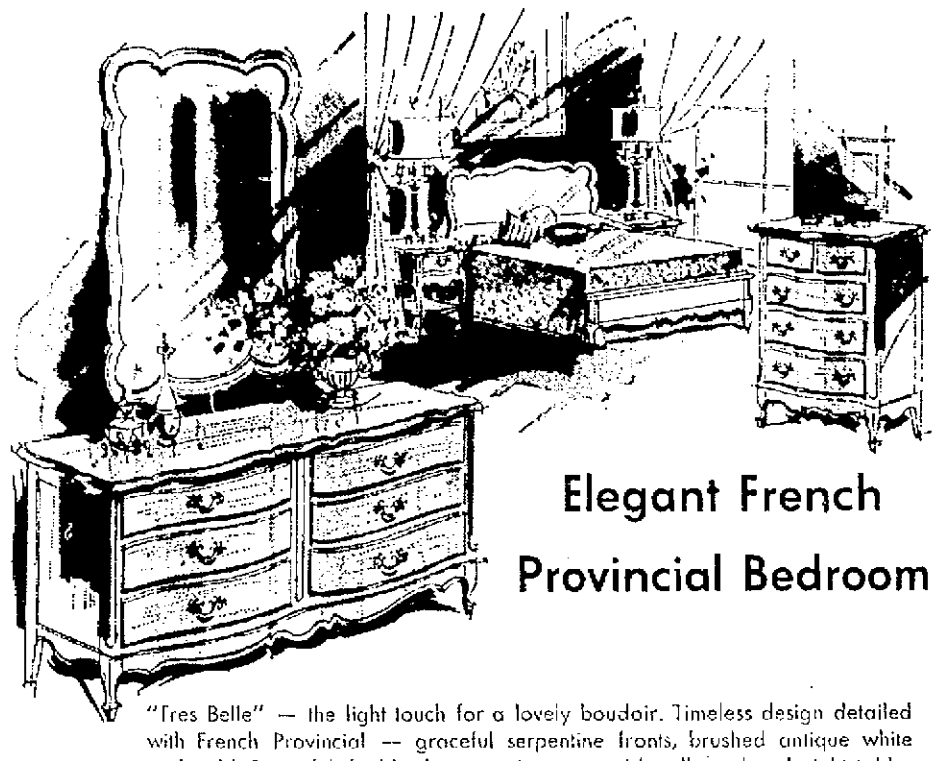

One man suggested that the Cuban national anthem be played over the loudspeaker just before takeoff. Anyone who stood up should be arrested, he suggested.

Another letter writer was more shrewd. He suggested that the FAA build a mock up of Havana Airport in the Florida Everglades to fool hijackers.

Others thought it would be a good idea to put a trap door in the passenger compartment. When the hijacker stepped on it, the pilot would press a button and the problem would be solved.

U.S. Bank Official Takes Oath in L.B.

Preston G. Martin of Pasadena was sworn in as new chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Saturday in an unusual ceremony in the home of friends in Long Beach.

Because the ceremony was set for a weekend and away from Washington, it was considered extraordinary. Martin explained his predecessor's resignation was effective at 7 p.m. and the taking of the oath by him Saturday was to assure a quorum on the board.

Martin's nomination to the board last week by President Nixon triggered the displeasure of one congressman.

Rep. H. Allen Smith, R-Glendale, pointed out he has nothing against Martin. But he charged Nixon lieutenants with pressuring the outgoing chairman, Robert L. Rand, into resigning to make room for Martin. Rand's term would have run out June 30, 1970.

Martin, after his swearing-in, said Smith and Rand have been friends for many years "so naturally he supported his man and I respect him for it."

Martin, 45, has been commissioner of the California Division of Savings and Loans. Named acting commissioner was Eric Stattin, who has been Martin's chief deputy in California.

Martin said he plans to go to Washington, where the board office is located, on Monday. It oversees the nation's savings and loans associations.

Four Die, Three Injured as Plane Crashes Into Ocean Off Baja Tip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four persons have been killed and three others injured in the crash of their twin-engine plane into the ocean off the tip of Baja California, authorities said Saturday.

The U.S. Coast Guard said the injured reportedly were rescued by a fishing vessel. The Federal Aviation Administration said they were taken to a hospital in La Paz.

The dead were tentatively identified by the FAA as E.P. Knox, the pilot; R. W. Hanson, the co-pilot; Mrs. Thomas Ridgeway and Herbert Grimstass.

Their ages and hometowns were not immediately determined.

An FAA duty officer said the survivors were believed to be Roger Laverty, a vice president of Thriftymart stores in Los Angeles; his wife and Thomas Ridgeway.

The FAA said the plane went into the Pacific between 1 and 3 p.m. shortly after takeoff Friday from Cabo San Lucas, but word failed to reach here until Saturday.

U.S. Bank Official Takes Oath in L.B.

Preston G. Martin of Pasadena was sworn in as new chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Saturday in an unusual ceremony in the home of friends in Long Beach.

Because the ceremony was set for a weekend and away from Washington, it was considered extraordinary. Martin explained his predecessor's resignation was effective at 7 p.m. and the taking of the oath by him Saturday was to assure a quorum on the board.

Martin's nomination to the board last week by President Nixon triggered the displeasure of one congressman.

Rep. H. Allen Smith, R-Glendale, pointed out he has nothing against Martin. But he charged Nixon lieutenants with pressuring the outgoing chairman, Robert L. Rand, into resigning to make room for Martin. Rand's term would have run out June 30, 1970.

Martin, after his swearing-in, said Smith and Rand have been friends for many years "so naturally he supported his man and I respect him for it."

Martin, 45, has been commissioner of the California Division of Savings and Loans. Named acting commissioner was Eric Stattin, who has been Martin's chief deputy in California.

Martin said he plans to go to Washington, where the board office is located, on Monday. It oversees the nation's savings and loans associations.

Four Die, Three Injured as Plane Crashes Into Ocean Off Baja Tip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four persons have been killed and three others injured in the crash of their twin-engine plane into the ocean off the tip of Baja California, authorities said Saturday.

The U.S. Coast Guard said the injured reportedly were rescued by a fishing vessel. The Federal Aviation Administration said they were taken to a hospital in La Paz.

The dead were tentatively identified by the FAA as E.P. Knox, the pilot; R. W. Hanson, the co-pilot; Mrs. Thomas Ridgeway and Herbert Grimstass.

Their ages and hometowns were not immediately determined.

An FAA duty officer said the survivors were believed to be Roger Lavrerty, a vice president of Thriftymart stores in Los Angeles; his wife and Thomas Ridgeway.

The FAA said the plane went into the Pacific between 1 and 3 p.m. shortly after takeoff Friday from Cabo San Lucas, but word failed to reach here until Saturday.

SYMPOSIUM TOLD

Diagnosis of Death Problem in Transplants

By TERRY SATTORIA
Staff Writer

LAS VEGAS— About 1,400 doctors and lawyers were told at the 1969 National Medicolegal Symposium that unless doctors are doubly cautious in the immediate future, they may be charged with a "double standard" in diagnosing death. As a result of the recent surge in heart transplants, one of the most difficult questions facing medical and legal authorities is when a patient is dead.

In the past, blood transfusions, a form of transplant, skin grafts, or the removal of a single paired organ like the kidney did not threaten the life of the donor or the recipient. However, the removal of a beating heart means certain death to the donor and has raised the fearsome question by some authorities of committing wrongful death.

A panel of two doctors and two lawyers addressing the medicolegal audience at the three-day forums attempted to fathom some of the ethical, legal and social problems inherent in this new era of medicine.

The panel agreed the currently most acceptable definition of death is that time at which the brain dies—when the patient falls into irreversible coma —even though the heart continues to beat.

If life at that time is being maintained by a machine such as a respirator, it is acceptable to shut it off, the panel said.

At one time death was established by absence of heart beat. This criterion, according to experts, is no longer tenable since the heart is stopped during most open heart operations, and since patients whose hearts have stopped as a consequence of heart attacks have been resuscitated and have survived. For these reasons the concept of "brain death" has emerged.

It is not a new concept, however, as neurosurgeons for years have recognized irreversible brain damage and have been able to identify it by certain signs. When these signs were present, the respirator was turned off and the patient was pronounced dead.

These signs include: The absence of all spontaneous respiration; a completely flat electroencephlographic (EEG) reord; the absence of all reflexes, including corneal; the absence of drugs or of hypothermia, which might alter the EEG or the patient's response, and the considered judgment of the neurosurgeon that the total clinical picture is consistent with irreversible brain damage.

This criteria was adopted in 1968 by an Ad Hoc Committee at Harvard Medical School as an acceptable criteria for diagnosis of death.

Dr. Elliot Corday, a professor of medicine at UCLA, warned that although the Harvard Ad Hoc Committee's concept of death as irreversible coma is a sound one, there are pitfalls. He said some doctors base criteria for diagnosis of brain death on lesser considerations and have transplanted hearts of those who still have spontaneous respiration.

"There is real danger," he said, "that the medical profession might be charged with accepting a double standard in diagnosing death, if the profession is not doubly cautious."

The Harvard criteria, however, does provide sound guidelines for the diagnosis of cerebral death. "It is in keeping with the popular concepts of theologians," he said.

The doctors and lawyers were warned it would be unwise to attempt to write a legal definition of death into law.

Blair L. Sadler, who at 27 is a consultant on transplant laws and a lawyer for the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., told the audience writing a definition of death into transplant laws would risk impeding future medical progress.

He predicted no doctor who removed a beating heart would be convicted of homicide, although the question was raised by Dr. Corday as a distinct possibility.

Dr. David Hume, a transplant surgeon at the Medical College of Virginia, and a pioneer in kidney transplants, said "The law should make it easy as possible so the dead can help the living."

Dr. Corday summed up the situation: "We must not shake the public confidence. They'll wonder (about the patient) 'Was he alive or dead?' "

Six Die in Area Traffic Accidents

A 6-year-old boy and two men were killed in Southland traffic accidents Saturday and a Long Beach man died in a collision in Castroville.

Three persons — a Whittier couple and a San Bernardino man — died in a crash on Santa Ana Canyon Road near Star Rock early Saturday evening. However, police withheld names pending notification of next of kin.

Daniel Sanchez, 6, of 1705 W. 152nd St., Compton, was struck by a car after he darted into the street near his home. He was dead on arrival at Las Campanas Hospital, Compton, at 5:53 p.m.

In Long Beach, Jimmy Owens, 29, of 3049 Eucalyptus Ave., was dead on arrival at Long Beach Community Hospital after his car crashed into another and overturned on Spring Street near Redondo Avenue.

At 6:56 a.m. Saturday, firemen were called to free Andres Padilla, 23, of 768 W. First St., San Pedro, from the wreckage of his car on the Harbor Freeway near B Street in Wilmington. Padilla was dead on arrival at Harbor General Hospital.

On Friday night, Isaac Lopez, 43, of 265 Newport Ave., was killed in a two-car collision in Castroville.

Facts You Should Know About Cultured Pearls

by Denny Foltz
Lawson's Jewelers
250 Pine Avenue
Downtown Long Beach Only

We are interrupting our series on Diamond Appraisals because from the 17th until the 23rd is National CULTURED PEARL Week. Our buyers just recently returned from Japan where they purchased cultured pearls of all types, sizes and color.

How a cultured pearl is created is truly fascinating. You start with 3-year-old oysters. Oysters cannot be younger or older to obtain the best results. Oyster's complete life expectancy is only 9 to 10 years.

Next you must have a good supply of Mississippi clam shells! The Japanese have discovered that the best nucleus to start the cultivation of a cultured pearl is to use a Mississippi Clam Shell, named for the river it is found in.

The membrane of an oyster creates the beautiful distinctive layers of pearl skin. When you find a hard, lustrous, colorful sea shell, it was formed by the membrane of the oyster.

So they cut open a live 3-year-old oyster and remove the membrane. They then insert into another 3-year-old oyster the Mississippi Clam Shell. The shell is round, usually 4 to 4½ millimeter. It must be placed in only one location of the oyster otherwise it will be rejected. The shell is surrounded by membrane from the other oyster.

This operation cannot take over 20 to 30 seconds, otherwise the oyster dies.

Once the operation is completed, the oyster is placed in the lake where it remains for at least 3 years.

Next week, the results of this operation. Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only.

Sniper Kills Trainman in Harlem

NEW YORK (UPI) — A conductor aboard a Penn Central Railroad train was shot and killed by a sniper Saturday night as his train made a scheduled stop in the heart of Manhattan's Harlem district. Police ordered an immediate search of rooftops in an attempt to track down the gunman.

Police theorized the sniper may have shot through an opening door as the train pulled into the 125th S St. and Park Ave. elevated station. The shooting occurred shortly after 7 p.m.

The train, inbound to New York City from the suburbs, was kept in the station by police order as the search for the killer was pressed.

STORY WITH A TWIST ENDING

Dialogue With a 'Hype' Who Emptied Houses for a 'Fix'

to burglarize? Why that particular one?

M: When I was on foot, I would just walk to the front door and knock. If nobody would answer, I would go around to the back and I would try the back door, knock, if nobody would answer I figured nobody was home.

R: What about tools?

M: Just a pocket knife, sometimes a screw driver.

R: Why did you just carry those particular instruments. Some people carry a whole set of tools.

M: Most homes, the way the windows are now, all you need really is a pocket knife. If you are going to go through the window you just slit the screen and the way the windows are fixed you can open it with your hand after you get the screen slit. So all I usually need is my pocket knife.

R: How do you know when there is nobody at home? In other words let's say when nobody answers the door — on what basis do you go on the fact that there is nobody home actually?

M: I always had a strange feeling, like I remember one time I started to crawl through a window and I had a feeling that someone was in there and there was. The people were in bed.

R: Now if you did go into a home and the residents were asleep, would you still go on and commit the burglary?

M: No.

R: You'd cut out.

M: This happened I think twice and I left. It panicked me.

R: From the burglar's point of view, what is the best point of entrance into a home?

M: You'll be surprised when I tell you this, but it is usually right through the back door, nine out of 10 times it's unlocked.

R: Do you try that first?

M: The front door, then the back door. The back door really surprised me. It is usually unlocked.

R: When you get inside the house what do you look for, what is the first thing you go for?

M: I used to go into the bedroom first thing, start going through the drawers. They usually leave some money in the drawers or checkbooks and there's always some jewelry in the drawers, but jewelry is usually on top of the dresser in some type of container or box.

R: Bedroom is the first place to hit then?

M: Right, 'cause that way I get a pillow case and put everything in the case.

R: Other than that what valuables would you look for in a house?

M: Portable televisions, taperecorders, cameras, things like this.

R: What about alarm systems? Dogs?

M: Those instances I ran into a dog and then the dog would make loud enough noise, I would leave, but usually the dog would be so friendly that all I would have to do is talk to him a little bit. And then there were times that there were signs that said that they had dogs and yet there weren't dogs.

R: Some of you burglars don't believe in signs.

M: Can't take chances.

R: What is the difference between your M.O. operating in the daytime and operating at night? Let's shift to daytime first, what do you do differently?

M: The times I did pull burglaries during the daytime, I usually wasn't by myself. I would have somebody with me.

R: A lookout?

M: No somebody to help me. When you're doing something during the daytime, you have to make it look obvious that you should be there. Usually one of the neighbors or somebody is going to see you. You got to look like you belong there.

R: How does this accomplice, what does he do along the line?

M: I can explain about how we had a van, we'd pull up in the driveway of house we were going to burglarize, we'd have on white coveralls, we'd look like repair men. We'd go up to the door. The neighbors, even if they were in the front yard, would see us and they wouldn't think anything was strange. So the door would still be locked, the front door, we would either have a crowbar, or even a lug wrench to pop the front door open. You can't see from the side of the house, the other houses, what's going on on the porch. So you go on into the house. Just like we were expected, like the people had left the door unlocked for us. We just start moving all the furniture out.

R: What about neighbors that might come up and say, "Is Mrs. Jones moving?"

M: I never had this happen. I have had the neighbors stand there and look like they were dumbfounded, you know, like they're feeling strange that their neighbors are moving out without telling them. But they never walked over to talk to us. One time I remember, the neighbors stood there and watched us and were real friendly. And when we got ready to leave, I waved at them. They smiled and waved back and we drove off. We took everything, including the rug. We rolled the rug up, too.

R: Now that you've got some loot, how would you unload it, how do you fence it?

M: There's a lot of fences around. When you're using drugs especially, you come across these people, because they for some reason seem to hunt out the hooked addict because they know he is the easiest and he's one that will take less money for merchandise. He'll take what he can get because he is in no position to bargain.

R: Let's say you had a television worth $300, what could you get for it, fencing it?

M: You mean a color TV?

R: Yes.

M: Around $125.

R: In other words your getting maybe 35 per cent?

M: That would be in good shape.

R: How do you know the fence is honest?

M: He's our friend, we're in no position to argue.

R: He could have been a crook.

M: We were going to the fence that would give us the most money. Honest or not.

R: How did you get caught?

M: The people that owned the house walked in on me.

R: You were burglarizing?

M: Yes, I was inside some people's house in one of the better areas in Norwalk, and the people . . . the police told me later when they got me to the police station that the people just walked in on me. I don't remember because I was so loaded at the time.

R: And they just took you without any resistance?

M: No resistance at all, which is strange because the last thing I remember before I went into this house, was that I was going to get sick, and I needed some money to get some heroin, and yet I was so loaded I don't even remember being taken.

R: This is one field in which everyone is vulnerable from Skid Row to Malibu. You set the percentage rate base on how easy a target you present. But just to tag off this report, the young man that we've been talking to was a long time burglar but oddly enough — aren't you employed by the Los Angeles Police Department now?

M: Yes.

R: Under your true name, Don Roberts?

M: Yes.

R: What are your duties?

M: I'm a community relations aid.

R: What does that mean?

M: I work with the community relations officers. Since I've had this involvement in drugs I feel that I can talk to the younger kids about drug problems and get my point across better to them than some police officers.

STORY WITH A TWIST ENDING

to burglarize? Why that particular one?

M: When I was on foot, I would just walk to the front door and knock. If nobody would answer, I would go around to the back and I would try the back door, knock, if nobody would answer I figured nobody was home.

R: What about tools?

M: Just a pocket knife, sometimes a screw driver.

R: Why did you just carry those particular instruments. Some people carry a whole set of tools.

M: Most homes, the way the windows are now, all you need really is a pocket knife. If you are going to go through the window you just slit the screen and the way the windows are fixed you can open it with your hand after you get the screen slit. So all I usually need is my pocket knife.

R: How do you know when there is nobody at home? In other words let's say when nobody answers the door — on what basis do you go on the fact that there is nobody home actually?

M: I always had a strange feeling, like I remember one time I started to crawl through a window and I had a feeling that someone was in there and there was. The people were in bed.

R: Now if you did go into a home and the residents were asleep, would you still go on and commit the burglary?

M: No.

R: You'd cut out.

M: This happened I think twice and I left. It panicked me.

R: From the burglar's point of view, what is the best point of entrance into a home?

M: You'll be surprised when I tell you this, but it is usually right through the back door, nine out of 10 times it's unlocked.

R: Do you try that first?

M: The front door, then the back door. The back door really surprised me. It is usually unlocked.

R: When you get inside the house what do you look for, what is the first thing you go for?

M: I used to go into the bedroom first thing, start going through the drawers. They usually leave some money in the drawers or checkbooks and there's always some jewelry in the drawers, but jewelry is usually on top of the dresser in some type of the container or box.

R: Bedroom is the first place to hit then?

M: Right, 'cause that way I get a pillow case and put everything in the case.

R: Other than that what valuables would you look for in a house?

M: Portable televisions, taperecorders, cameras, things like this.

R: What about alarm systems? Dogs?

M: Those instances I ran into a dog and then the dog would make loud enough noise, I would leave, but usually the dog would be so friendly that all I would have to do is talk to him a little bit. And then there were times that there were signs that said that they had dogs and yet there weren't dogs.

R: Some of you burglars don't believe in signs.

M: Can't take chances.

R: What is the difference between your M.O. operating in the daytime and operating at night? Let's shift to daytime first, what do you do differently?

M: The times I did pull burglaries during the daytime, I usually wasn't by myself. I would have somebody with me.

R: A lookout?

M: No somebody to help me. When you're doing something during the daytime, you have to make it look obvious that you should be there. Usually one of the neighbors or somebody is going to see you. You got to look like you belong there.

R: How does this accomplice, what does he do along the line?

M: I can explain about how we had a van, we'd pull up in the driveway of house we were going to burglarize, we'd have on white coveralls, we'd look like repair men. We'd go up to the door. The neighbors, even if they were in the front yard, would see us and they wouldn't think anything was strange. So the door would still be locked, the front door, we would either have a crowbar, or even a lug wrench to pop the front door open. You can't see from the side of the house, the other houses, what's going on on the porch. So you go on into the house. Just like we were expected, like the people had left the door unlocked for us. We just start moving all the furniture out.

R: What about neighbors that might come up and say, "Is Mrs. Jones moving?"

But they never walked over to talk to us. One time I remember, the neighbors stood there and watched us and were real friendly. And when we got ready to leave, I waved at them. They smiled, and waved back and we drove off. We took everything including the rug. We rolled the rug up, too.

R: Now that you've got some loot, how would you unload it, how do you fence it?

M: There's a lot of fences around. When you're using drugs especially, you come across these people, because they for some reason seem to hunt out the hooked addict because they know he is the easiest and he's one that will take less money for merchandise. Details Add Insight into the Sirhan Trial

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

So much complex legal maneuvering and detailed testimony have come out of the murder trial of Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, the accused assassin of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, that at times the reason for it all seems lost.

Only reminder many times are the little insignificant details which add insight—and many times perspective—to the trial.

The judge and psychologist dozing as the tapes are being played of Sirhan's arrest and interrogation . . .

The joking, playful atmosphere in the corridors during recess . . .

The party-like press corps . . .

* * * *

ALL MAKE it easy to forget that the intense, boyish white knight of the Democratic party—and vast majorities throughout the free world—is dead.

And a young, dark-haired Arab who sits, always smiling, eyeing the girls and signaling to his brother, is his killer.

Sirhan's actions in court —his frequent laughter and his anger—have been well reported. Some of his other activities in the courtroom where he eventually will learn whether or not he is to die for killing the New York senator, haven't been mentioned.

For example, when San Diego psychologist Dr. Martin Schorr testified in his behalf for the third straight day, the young Jordanian's interest seemed to lag.

As Dr. Schorr testified as to his psychotic tendencies, Sirhan, biting on his fingernails—a relatively new habit—read a book: "Laws of Mental Domination" by Frank Young.

Sirhan, who has not spoken to the press since his arrest June 5, 1968, because of a "contract" with magazine writer Robert Kaiser, informed his brother, Munir, via a note passed in court, that he, too, shouldn't talk to the press.

* * * *

TWENTY-ONE year old Munir, who is more extroverted as well as more handsome than his older brother, however, continues to talk to the press. And so does his mother, Mary, although she confines her remarks to a few select members of the press.

Munir related an incident this past week in which he said he and his mother were walking to lunch, conversing in arabic, when a man stopped them.

"He asked if we were the Sirhans and when he found out we were, he took out his wallet and tried to shove it into our hands. It was full of money . . . he told us to also light a candle for Sirhan."

Munir, who wears dark glasses both out and in doors, said he refused the money, but expressed his thanks.

"He was actually crying . . . He said he was Lebanese there were tears in his eyes," the youngest Sirhan said. "There are many people who feel for us."

At another time, Munir told reporters his constant attendance at the trial was because he "wanted to be here — but also because I can't find a job."

"I guess it's because my name is Sirhan," he said with a half smile. "When this is over with, I guess I'd better change my name."

* * * *

MRS. SIRHAN, the 56-year-old mother of the admitted assassin, plans to return to her teaching duties at the Westminster Nursery School in Pasadena as soon as the trial ends.

"The children," she has told reporters, "have sent me many letters. Some say they are praying for me . . . some even sent me money," she says.

"But I cannot return to work now . . . I must be here . . . for here is where my heart is."

On the day the pyschologist testified that Sirhan killed Kennedy because "his mother failed him", the almost-blind Mrs. Sirhan attempted to see her son "alone".

"I must see him . . . I must see him alone . . . I must find out what this is all about," she demanded of one of his attorneys.

She was refused, the attorney said later, and "made quite a fuss."

"The family is getting very demanding," the attorney confided.

* * * *

DURING THE playing of the tape recordings taken shortly after Sirhan was arrested, both Munir and his mother maintained Sirhan sounded "drunk" in the beginning. The recordings began less than a half hour after the accused assassin was arrested and ended shortly before 7 a.m. when he was arraigned.

"He sounds very drunk in the beginning," Munir said, "and he still doesn't sound right at the end of the tapes."

"He's drunk . . . you can tell he has been drinking," the mother kept repeating.

(The defense contends that Sirhan had not only been drinking — and is not used to alcohol — but was in a mental disassociated state when he shot Kennedy.)

Sirhan's actions — no longer angry rebellion — is attributed to a soft-spoken Palestinian Arab who has joined the defense team.

* * * *

ISSA NAKLEH, the director of the Palestinian Arab delegation to the United Nations, took his place at the defense table the day after Sirhan's outburst in court in which he asked to be executed.

Nakleh's talks with the 24-year-old Jordanian have "calmed him down".

"He is a victim of this tragedy," says Nakleh of Sirhan. "The people of Palestine look on him as a hero — they look on him as a man for whom justice should be done.

"He is not a criminal . . . not a murderer. A murder is not regarded as a murder if you feel so much in justice that you forget what you are doing.

"But it's a terrible tragedy for everyone. Kennedy is just as much a victim of the Palestine situation as Sirhan is . .

"I am a refugee too. My home, my land, my property were taken away too. I know how he feels. The average American doesn't know what it is to lose everything overnight.

"I know," the mother agreed earlier, "that if my son killed anyone he was not himself . . . he was out of his mind."

* * * *

ALTHOUGH "gagged" by the contract with Kaiser, the grey-haired woman said at one point she wanted the American people to know how she felt:

"I feel there is here a double tragedy — the death of Mr. Kennedy and the tragedy of my son", she says sadly.

"You are lucky in America to have a country to call your own. We have none. To not have a country to call your own is to have no dignity."

But the mother isn't the only sad one in court each day.

People talked in corridors after listening to the psychologist describe how "sick" Sirhan was because of his uncontrolled hatred of the Zionists and anyone — specifically Kennedy — who was sympathetic.

"Y'know," muttered Chief Deputy District Attorney Lynn Compton as he slumped out of court one day, "seems that if you dislike a person a little and kill him you're a murderer. But if you dislike him a lot and kill him, you're sick."

But Compton, a vociferous proponent of capital punishment, isn't the only one to air his views in the courtroom corridors.

* * * *

CHIEF DEFENSE Counsel Grant Cooper continues to try the case in the corridors, giving reporters adjectives to be used to describe his client. "Mercurial" was one — and it was used by at least one reporter the following day.

Other small pieces of information — gathered, but not reported by the battery of newsmen from throughout the world covering the trial — points up dramatically the fact that, despite the legal jargon and maneuvering, a human being is dead.

One witness, near tears, described how the young senator on his way to make his most victorious victory speech, stopped by the pantry — the same one in which he several minutes later lay dying — to "steal" an olive from a kitchen worker.

He stopped by and chatted with a girl making a salad, the witness said, and stole one of the olives enroute to make his victory speech. Apparently unable to dispose of the pit, Kennedy made his speech with the pit still in his mouth then walked back through the same pantry.

* * * *

WHEN HE was shot and lay dying on the floor, a young Mexican youth knelt at his side, trying to comfort him, when he noticed there was something in his mouth.

"I was afraid to stick my fingers in his mouth to take it out," he testified . . .

". . . you just don't stick your fingers in the mouth of the next president of the United States," he said later.

The object in Kennedy's mouth as he lay dying was the seed of the olive he had playfully stolen from the salad being made by the kitchen maid.

Sirhan, who has not spoken to the press since his arrest June 5, 1968, because of a "contract" with magazine writer Robert Kaiser, informed his brother, Munir, via a note passed in court, that he, too, shouldn't talk to the press.

* * * *

TWENTY-ONE year old Munir, who is more extroverted as well as more handsome than his older brother, however, continues to talk to the press. And so does his mother, Mary, although she confines her remarks to a few select members of the press.

Munir related an incident this past week in which he said he and his mother were walking to lunch, conversing in arabic, when a man stopped them.

"He asked if we were the Sirhans and when he found out we were, he took out his wallet and tried to shove it into our hands. It was full of money . . . he told us to also light a candle for Sirhan."

Munir, who wears dark glasses both out and in doors, said he refused the money, but expressed his thanks.

"He was actually crying . . . He said he was Lebanese there were tears in his eyes," the youngest Sirhan said. "There are many people who feel for us."

At another time, Munir told reporters his constant attendance at the trial was because he "wanted to be here — but also because I can't find a job."

"I guess it's because my name is Sirhan," he said with a half smile. "When this is over with, I guess I'd better change my name."

* * * *

MRS. SIRHAN, the 56-year-old mother of the admitted assassin, plans to return to her teaching duties at the Westminster Nursery School in Pasadena as soon as the trial ends.

"The children," she has told reporters, "have sent me many letters. Some say they are praying for me . . . some even sent me money," she says.

"But I cannot return to work now . . . I must be here . . . for here is where my heart is."

On the day the pyschologist testified that Sirhan killed Kennedy because "his mother failed him", the almost-blind Mrs. Sirhan attempted to see her son "alone".

"I must see him . . . I must see him alone . . . I must find out what this is all about," she demanded of one of his attorneys.

She was refused, the attorney said later, and "made quite a fuss."

"The family is getting very demanding," the attorney confided.

* * * *

DURING THE playing of the tape recordings taken shortly after Sirhan was arrested, both Munir and his mother maintained Sirhan sounded "drunk" in the beginning. The recordings began less than a half hour after the accused assassin was arrested and ended shortly before 7 a.m. when he was arraigned.

"He sounds very drunk in the beginning," Munir said, "and he still doesn't sound right at the end of the tapes."

"He's drunk . . . you can tell he has been drinking," the mother kept repeating.

(The defense contends that Sirhan had not only been drinking — and is not used to alcohol — but was in a mental disassociated state when he shot Kennedy.)

Sirhan's actions — no longer angry rebellion — is attributed to a soft-spoken Palestinian Arab who has joined the defense team.

* * * *

ISSA NAKLEH, the director of the Palestinian Arab delegation to the United Nations, took his place at the defense table the day after Sirhan's outburst in court in which he asked to be executed.

Nakleh's talks with the 24-year-old Jordanian have "calmed him down".

"He is a victim of this tragedy," says Nakleh of Sirhan. "The people of Palestine look on him as a hero — they look on him as a man for whom justice should be done.

"He is not a criminal . . . not a murderer. A murder is not regarded as a murder if you feel so much in justice that you forget what you are doing.

"But it's a terrible tragedy for everyone. Kennedy is just as much a victim of the Palestine situation as Sirhan is . .

"I am a refugee too. My home, my land, my property were taken away too. I know how he feels. The average American doesn't know what it is to lose everything overnight.

"I know," the mother agreed earlier, "that if my son killed anyone he was not himself . . . he was out of his mind."

* * * *

ALTHOUGH "gagged" by the contract with Kaiser, the grey-haired woman said at one point she wanted the American people to know how she felt:

"I feel there is here a double tragedy — the death of Mr. Kennedy and the tragedy of my son", she says sadly.

"You are lucky in America to have a country to call your own. We have none. To not have a country to call your own is to have no dignity."

But the mother isn't the only sad one in court each day.

People talked in corridors after listening to the psychologist describe how "sick" Sirhan was because of his uncontrolled hatred of the Zionists and anyone — specifically Kennedy — who was sympathetic.

"Y'know," muttered Chief Deputy District Attorney Lynn Compton as he slumped out of court one day, "seems that if you dislike a person a little and kill him you're a murderer. But if you dislike him a lot and kill him, you're sick."

But Compton, a vociferous proponent of capital punishment, isn't the only one to air his views in the courtroom corridors.

* * * *

CHIEF DEFENSE Counsel Grant Cooper continues to try the case in the corridors, giving reporters adjectives to be used to describe his client. "Mercurial" was one — and it was used by at least one reporter the following day.

Other small pieces of information — gathered, but not reported by the battery of newsmen from throughout the world covering the trial — points up dramatically the fact that, despite the legal jargon and maneuvering, a human being is dead.

One witness, near tears, described how the young senator on his way to make his most victorious victory speech, stopped by the pantry — the same one in which he several minutes later lay dying — to "steal" an olive from a kitchen worker.

He stopped by and chatted with a girl making a salad, the witness said, and stole one of the olives enroute to make his victory speech. Apparently unable to dispose of the pit, Kennedy made his speech with the pit still in his mouth then walked back through the same pantry.

* * * *

WHEN HE was shot and lay dying on the floor, a young Mexican youth knelt at his side, trying to comfort him, when he noticed there was something in his mouth.

"I was afraid to stick my fingers in his mouth to take it out," he testified . . .

". . . you just don't stick your fingers in the mouth of the next president of the United States," he said later.

The object in Kennedy's mouth as he lay dying was the seed of the olive he had playfully stolen from the salad being made by the kitchen maid.

CONSPIRACY?

Ashtray and Suit May Be 'Grassy Knolls' for Ray

(Editor's Note: The writer of the following report has covered the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. from the weeks in Memphis before the April 4, 1968 slaying. He was in Memphis the night of the murder and has spent much of the past 11 months investigating the case, including the trial last Monday of James Earl Ray.)

By HENRY P. LEIFERMANN

MEMPHIS (UPI) — An ashtray full of cigarette butts, a duplicate driver's license and a tailored Canadian suit are likely to become the "Grassy Knolls of the Martin Luther King assassination for a public unsatisfied with the trial of James Earl Ray.

The three items are some of the unanswered questions that prompted a torrent of outrage over Ray's quick trial Monday.

They are three pieces of fuel for what is likely to become a rehash of the King-Ray case in books and before Warren Commission-style investigations trying to determine once and for all if a conspiracy existed in the April 4, 1968, murder of King.

* * * *

SOME STUDENTS of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy insist shots were fired from a grassy knoll in front of his motorcade in Dallas, as well as from the Texas Schoolbook Depository.

As the grassy knoll, the Zapruder film and other unexplained questions became household words in the Kennedy assassination, so will items such an ashtray of cigarette butts in the King case.

On April 11, one week after the murder, Atlanta police found Ray's white Mustang automobile abandoned in a parking lot at the Capitol Homes housing project. The car's ashtray was filled with cigarette butts.

James Earl Ray does not smoke.

The car was locked when found by residents of the public housing project. How did those butts get there? Who smoked them? Was it only a hitchhiker? Why would a killer on the run pick up a hitchhiker? Was someone else with him, someone in a conspiracy?

* * * *

ON FEB. 28, 1968, Ray has been positively located in Hollywood, Calif., taking a course in bartending. On the same day, someone called the drivers' license division of the Alabama Highway Patrol to order a duplicate license for Eric S. Galt, an alias Ray used.

The duplicate was mailed to 2608 South Highland, a boarding house where Ray had lived in Birmingham, Ala. Who made the call, and who picked up the duplicate for Ray—and sent by return mail the 25-cent service charge?

Was it just a casual friend of Ray's in Peter Cherpes' boarding house? If so, why hasn't that boarder come forward? Or, was it a conspirator?

On July 21, 1967, Edward J. Feigin, owner of English and Cottonwood Ltd., a tailor's shop in Montreal, Canada, measured Ray for a suit,—the one he wore when arrested in London June 8.

Ray was living at 2589 Notre Dame St. in Montreal when he ordered the suit. But before it was made, tailor Feigin, in checking Ray's address, found orders to forward it to 2608 South Highland in Birmingham.

* * * *

HOW DID Ray know he would be in Birmingham later? Why would an escaped convict return to the United States? Did a mysterious blond Latin, Raoul, order him to Birmingham as suggested in notes Ray gave Alabama author William Bradford Huie?

Where did Ray get the $1,995 to buy a Mustang automobile in Birmingham? How could he afford tailor-made suits? How did he finance bartender's school, dancing lessons and months of travel across the United States, Canada and Mexico?

The state of Tennessee and the FBI say Ray was running contraband—drugs from Canada to the U.S., and jewelry from Mexico to the U.S. They also contend Ray sold drugs while in the Missouri State Prison at Jefferson City.

If so, who helped Ray in the prison racket and the smuggling? Have those persons been found? Did they have a part in a conspiracy to slay the Negro civil rights leader? Or did they simply join Ray in other crimes, without knowing Ray planned to slay King?.

Those who criticize the Warren Commission's handling of the Kennedy assassination as a rush job with gaping holes may find the same flaw in the trial of Ray.

The 41-year-old confessed killer pleaded guilty in return for a guaranteed 99-year prison sentence and no threat of death by electrocution. His trial last Monday took less than three hours.

* * * *

SCORES OF small points, which when taken together still may not add up to conspiracy, went begging for answers. Only five witnesses took the stand, and that was done only to meet legal requirements that at least a barebones case must be presented the jury, which, in any event, had agreed in advance to find Ray guilty and give him a 99-year sentence.

The way the case was handled, from start to finish, may prompt as many doubts as the specific questions of evidence.

For example, the day after the slaying, then-Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, who had only 24 hours investigation as his basis, said no conspiracy existed. FBI sources say Clark's comment was made without their agreement.

And again last Monday, when Ray's trial was over, the Justice Department in Washington said the case remains under investigation.

But FBI sources again pointed out that was a Justice Department comment, not an FBI one. Sources in the bureau say no major task force of agent is at work on the case. It remains "open" as do all cases with unanswered questions—dormant as far as the FBI is concerned until someone comes forth with new facts.

* * * *

NEWSPAPER EDITORIALS and network television commentators described the handling of the case Monday and demanded further explanations.

Rep. Charles C. Diggs, Jr., a Negro Democrat from Detroit, said he will ask President Nixon to appoint a Warren-style commission to investigate the assassination despite the trial.

Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., said his Senate internal security subcommittee will investigate.

King's widow, Coretta King, said she is more convinced than ever that a conspiracy existed to kill her husband. Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, successor to King as president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said the same.

The evidence that did come out in the trial undoubtedly links Ray to the Mustang that supposedly was the escape car; to the .30-06 Remington rifle that killed King; to being in Memphis on the day of the murder; to being in the dollar-a-day rooming house at 422½ South Main; and to being in the bathroom where the shot was fired, according to the testimony of the prosecution.

A very strong case of circumstantial evidence tags Ray as the trigger man. Veteran prosecutors say few murder cases are solved in any other way.

* * * *

PERCY FOREMAN of Houston, Ray's bear-like defense lawyer, said after the trial he believes Ray did it alone just for the notoriety. That, says Foreman, is why the rifle and other bits of evidence carefully wrapped to preserve fingerprints were ditched by Ray at Guy Canipe's Amusement Co.'s front door, next door to the rooming house, seconds after the shot was fired.

Author Huie, who got Ray's story on notes the convicted killer wrote while in the Shelby County Jail awaiting trial, is having second thoughts about whether or not Ray lied to him.

"He has a strange mind. He gets satisfaction from our doubts," Huie said after the trial.

Prosecutor Phil M. Canale said after the trial Ray killed King for racist motives.

Free-lance magazine writer George E. McMillan of Atlanta, who is writing a book on Ray with the help of psychiatrists, believes Ray is one of that strange breed of men who transform their political hatred into violent action. He sees no conspiracy, but adds he has not investigated that possibility in detail.

Huie is on the verge of retracting much of what he wrote for Look magazine about Ray, the mysterious Raoul and a plot, by saying Ray may have lied to him.

Author Gerold Frank, whose six best sellers include a painstaking account of the Boston Strangler, says he has not made up his mind on the conspiracy question. Frank points out that scores of seemingly inexplicable things in the strangler case turned out in the end to have simple explanations.

* * * *

MUCH HAS been said about a phony chase broadcast over police radios that Thursday night, April 4, 1968, that may have diverted police from the real getaway. But the Memphis Police Department says two teen-age amateur radio operators admitted making the broadcast.

Much has been said about Solomon Jones, King's driver that night, and an unnamed 10-year-old Negro boy who claim to have seen a "hooded man" jump from bushes in the vacant lot behind the rooming house seconds after the shot was fired.

While many other questions went unanswered in the short trial Monday, the prosecution took pains to answer this one, although in an oblique method—answering it before the question was officially posed.

James C. Beasley, the assistant county attorney general who read to the jury a summary of evidence stipulated by the defense as what the state would prove in a full-length trial, touched on this point.

* * * *

BUT THE prosecution said Monday that more than one dozen city policemen on patrol around the Lorraine Motel had stopped to use restrooms in a fire station about 50 yards from both the rooming house and the Lorraine. When the officers heard the rifle shot, they poured out of the fire station. Some jumped down onto Mulberry Street, between the Lorraine and the vacant lot, and others climbed up a 10-foot embankment to search the vacant lot.

They saw no one, they said, not even James Earl Ray. As it happened, none of the policemen in the fire station ran out the front door onto South Main Street.

If some of those policemen had run the other way, perhaps they would have caught James Earl Ray before he could pull away in his white Mustang.

YOUNG BURGLARS QUARREL, ONE SHOT

A 14-year-old burglar shot his 13-year-old companion after a dispute over loot they'd stolen from a Carson councilman's home, Firestone Sheriff's deputies said Saturday.

The wounded young suspect was in satisfactory condition at the Los Angeles County General Hospital prison ward after the shooting in a field behind Councilman H. Rick Clark's home, 21541 Craig Court.

His companion, booked on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon besides a burglary charge, was arrested shortly after the shooting.

Deputies said the pair pried open a sliding glass door to break into Clark's home Friday and took almost $800 in loot, including silver dollars, a watch, currency, rare coins and two .38-caliber guns.

After leaving the house with their loot, they quarreled over splitting it and the older teen-ager shot his companion in the upper left shoulder, investigators said.

Then, deputies said, the frightened youth called for an ambulance. Ambulance attendants called deputies, who took the teen-ager in custody.

Deputies arrested them when the burglary was reported and they found some of the items in the teen-ager's possession, investigators said.

FBI FIGURES ARE CONFUSING

Rapes Increase; L.B. Solves Many

"Rapes and other crimes of passion are without rhyme or reason. If you stationed a police officer in each block you would prevent few, if any, such occurrences," Maurice Z. Wishon, Long Beach deputy chief of police, said Saturday.

Forcible rapes, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's annual report, increased 23.9 per cent in Long Beach in 1968, or from 117 in 1967 to 145.

The term forcible rape, as used in the FBI report, is misleading. The FBI figures include attempt rapes, and in Long Beach there were 67 attempt rapes and 78 forcible rapes.

The number of rapes and attempt rapes in Long Beach, Wishon declared, dropped 10 per cent in 1967 compared to 1966 and in 1965 they dropped 2 per cent compared to 1964.

In Long Beach, police solved by arrests 37.9 per cent of the rapes and attempt rapes in 1968 and in 1967 50.4 per cent of the crimes.

In the nation as a whole, the FBI figures showed, police solved only 20 per cent of the major crimes in 1968.

One of the reasons for the drop in the number of cases solved, Wishon said, was a recent court decision which prevents police from placing suspects in lineups for victims to identify.

Other cities in California comparable to Long Beach showed a greater percentage increase in rapes, the FBI report showed.

In San Jose rapes were up 75.6 per cent, in Sacramento 48.8 per cent, 56 per cent in Fresno, in San Diego 36.4 per cent, 33.9 per cent in Oakland and 24.7 per cent in San Francisco.

Det. Sgts. Robert E. Hodkin, Vernon J. Racobs and Roland R. Mackay, felony morals detail, said the victims ranged in age from 13 to 68 years.

They added burglar-rapists who enter through an unlocked window or by picking or forcing a lock, men whom women meet in bars and kidnaper-rapists who grab their victims on the street, account for the vast majority of the crimes.

4 Freed Airmen Return to States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Army airmen freed by Cambodia after four weeks' captivity returned to the United States Saturday for reunions with their families.

Three of the men were flown to nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md., for transfer to hospitals near their homes for brief checkups before going on leave.

Maj. Querin E. Herlik repeated during a stopover his Saigon statement earlier this week that his spotter plane crew were "very well treated" in Cambodia.

Herlik declined to discuss any accusations or charges against the four by their captors.

Herlik is bound for Hunter Army Hospital, near Savannah Ga.

He was accompanied on the flight from Japan, by way of Alaska, by CWO Laird P. Osburn, headed for Walter Reed Army Hospital here, and Spec. 5 John B. Fisher, also bound for Savannah.

The fourth man in the plane shot down Feb. 12 in the Vietnam-Cambodia border region is Spec. 5 Robert J. Pryor, who was flown separately to Ft. Campbell, Ky, en route to his home in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Herlik lives in Savannah; Osburn in Webster Springs, W. Va., and Fisher in Gainesville, Fla.

'Big Four' to Huddle on Mideast

UNITED NATIONS (AP)— Well placed sources said Saturday night the Soviet, United States, British and French ambassadors to the U.N would meet secretly in the coming week to discuss the Mideast crisis.

Sources said the four ambassadors had agreed on what to discuss but did not elaborate. The meeting was expected to be held Thursday or Friday in New York, possibly at the United Nations.

The four ambassadors are Jacob A. Malik of the Soviet Union, Charles W. Yost of the United States, Armand Berard of France and Lord Caradon of Britain.

Meanwhile, explosions rocked Israeli-held Gaza on Saturday and authorities tightened security measures along the Gaza Strip border.

Downtown Gaza City was nearly deserted and under heavy armed patrol in the wake of morning blasts by hand grenades and molotov cocktails.

Sewage Troubles Southland Beaches

A section of Orange County shoreline remains troubled today by effluent from a Riverside County sewer line break, but beaches there, at Long Beach and in Los Angeles County were not affected by oil slick woes Saturday.

Lifeguards at Southland beaches reported large crowds during the balmy, near summer-like day.

In Orange County, about two miles of beach from Newport Beach Pier to the Santa Ana River jetty is listed as "closed" by the Newport Beach Harbor Department under advisement from the Orange County Health Department.

Another report describes the affected area as extending to Route 39 (Beach Boulevard) terminus at the beach.

Lifeguards said the water shows a high bacteria count as a result of sewage flow into the Santa Ana River.

Lifeguards at Long Beach, Los Angeles County, Laguna Beach, Newport Beach, Huntington Beach, and Huntington State Beaches all reported no problem with oil slick.

At San Diego, however, complaints of globs of oil and tar-black debris washing ashore prompted the call-out of city crews from La Jolla to Point Loma Saturday.

"It would be misleading to flatly say all of this came from Santa Barbara," said Dr. William Menard, a professor at Scripps Institute of Oceanography. "But now it is really getting bad," he added. He predicted the "worst was yet to come."

FLEXIBILITY NEEDED

Nixon Missile Stand Based on Prospects

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The prospect of major improvements in defensive missile technology, including the possibility of nonnuclear warheads, had a significant impact on President Nixon's rearrangement of the Sentinel defense system, according to Administration officials.

In making his announcement, the President said that, rather than tie himself to a fixed deployment schedule, he preferred to move ahead by short steps, annually reviewing the proposed system in light of changes in the enemy threat, prospects for a freeze on strategic weapons, and developments coming out of weapons laboratories.

Pentagon sources report that preliminary research has pointed the way toward the following types of advances, five to eight years into the future:

Much higher frequency radars that offer the prospect of guiding the interceptor missile so close to the incoming warhead that intercept could be made with either a much smaller nuclear warhead or even a high explosive charge.

A new third stage for the long range Spartan missile to enable it to fly out at greater ranges and maneuver through a cloud of decoys to find and destroy the real warhead.

Defensive missiles carried either in ships or large aircraft deployed closer to the enemy's launch sites to achieve intercept much earlier in the missile's flight toward the United States.

One of the most controversial aspects of the Johnson Administration's Sentinel system was the Army's positioning of Spartan missile sites close to large cities.

This was aimed, the Army had explained, at enabling future installation of short range Sprint missiles at such sites if Communist China, in the late 1970s or early 1980s, developed sophisticated decoy devices to permit some of their missiles to penetrate the defensive shield provided by the long range Spartans.

An additional complaint had come from those who warned that the Russians might interpret such a deployment as being secretly aimed at being the first step in a very large-scale defense of the cities against a Soviet first strike. This could have prompted the Russians to further expand their offensive missile force.

Nixon, however, proposed to move all missile sites away from the cities, with the single exception of the nation's Capitol. The 12 new sites, he said, could both offer countrywide protection against the Chinese threat, and substantial protection for America's strategic missiles and bomber bases against a Soviet surprise attack.

But should the second generation of Red Chinese missiles contain advanced decoys, Pentagon officials said, these could be countered, not by installing local defense missiles at the cities, but by improving the Spartan.

Under present technology the three-stage Spartan is designed to be fired out at a range of about 400 miles to intercept a missile that first would come within radar view while it was still between 1,000 and 1,500 miles away.

* * * *

BUT THE ARMY has started studies of an advanced third-stage for the Spartan. It could be given the capability, officials say, of lying out at greater distances into a cloud of decoys, employing on-board sensors to steer first toward one and then another object until it found the real nuclear warhead. It would then destroy or disarm this warhead.

If experiments in very high frequency, high resolution radar continue to show promise, the officials add, it is conceivable that both the long range Spartan and the short range Sprint could accomplish their mission with nonnuclear warheads.

The Army is spending about one-third of its nearly $2 billion annual research and development budget pressing for just such advances in ballistic missile defense.

State Demos Urge Nixon Abandon ABM Plans

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Democratic Central Committee called on President Nixon Saturday to abandon plans for an antiballistic missile system.

In a resolution adopted by the group's executive committee, the Democrats attacked the President's decision to go ahead with a modified system as a "provocative military" step.

The resolution urged Americans to organize campaigns against the ABM, which it said will take billions of dollars away from domestic programs.

Republican Nixon announced Friday that the Administration plans a so-called thin system using Sentinel missiles to guard some missile sites against Soviet missile attack, as well as providing more complete defense against less-sophisticated Red Chinese missiles.

The resolution was adopted by a voice vote with only scattering of nays.

Earlier, the party pledged manpower — and $3,000 — to the 23-year-old carrying the party hopes in a key special State Senate election.

"This is the race of the '70s," said Joseph Holsinger, the party's northern chairman.

The executive committee of the Democratic State Central Committee agreed to put all the resources of the state committee at the command of George Miller III, who dropped out of law school to run for the Contra Costa County seat vacated by the death of his father.

If the young man from Martinez defeats Republican Dist. Atty. John Nejedly March 25, he will be the youngest person ever to serve in the state Senate.

And if he loses, warned Holsinger, "We will be that much farther down."

Party leaders also passed the hat for Miller and raised $3,000 at a luncheon and a morning meeting.

Preparations for special elections was the main topic of the executive committee session.

In addition to the Contra Costa race, there will be a special election in Stanislaus County for the San Joaquin County Assembly seat left vacant when Republican John G. Veneman joined the Nixon Administration in Washington.

If Miller wins, it would leave the Senate divided 20-20 between the parties. And a victory in Stanislaus County would split the Assembly 40-40.

Victory in the two races, said Holsinger, will "set a pattern" and give the party a boost for the legislative races in 1970.

That's the crucial year for both parties. The party that wins control of the Legislature in 1970 will reapportion legislative and congressional districts in 1971.

That historic redistricting will do much toward shaping political control of the state in the next decade.

The party in power traditionally draws districts tailored to favor its own candidates — the so-called gerrymandering that stirs up controversy.

There also is a special congressional election April 1 for the seat of Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, who quit Congress to come to Sacramento and serve under Gov. Reagan. San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto is one potential candidate for the seat.

Singer Arrested Driving in Alabama

HEFLIN, Ala. (UPI) — Negro rock singer Gene Chandler and two companions were being held in Cleburne County jail on charges of possessing dangerous drugs, authorities reported Saturday.

A state investigator, Sgt. Roy Riddle, said Chandler, Robert Lee Thorpe and Richard Bannister, all of Chicago, were arrested by deputies Friday as they drove through the county.

FLEXIBILITY NEEDED

Nixon Missile Stand Based on Prospects

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The prospect of major improvements in defensive missile technology, including the possibility of nonnuclear warheads, had a significant impact on President Nixon's rearrangement of the Sentinel defense system, according to Administration officials.

In making his announcement, the President said that, rather than tie himself to a fixed deployment schedule, he preferred to move ahead by short steps, annually reviewing the proposed system in light of changes in the enemy threat, prospects for a freeze on strategic weapons, and developments coming out of weapons laboratories.

Pentagon sources report that preliminary research has pointed the way toward the following types of advances, five to eight years into the future:

Much higher frequency radars that offer the prospect of guiding the interceptor missile so close to the incoming warhead that intercept could be made with either a much smaller nuclear warhead or even a high explosive charge.

A new third stage for the long range Spartan missile to enable it to fly out at greater ranges and maneuver through a cloud of decoys to find and destroy the real warhead.

Defensive missiles carried either in ships or large aircraft deployed closer to the enemy's launch sites to achieve intercept much earlier in the missile's flight toward the United States.

One of the most controversial aspects of the Johnson Administration's Sentinel system was the Army's positioning of Spartan missile sites close to large cities.

This was aimed, the Army had explained, at enabling future installation of short range Sprint missiles at such sites if Communist China, in the late 1970s or early 1980s, developed sophisticated decoy devices to permit some of their missiles to penetrate the defensive shield provided by the long range Spartans.

An additional complaint had come from those who warned that the Russians might interpret such a deployment as being secretly aimed at being the first step in a very large-scale defense of the cities against a Soviet first strike. This could have prompted the Russians to further expand their offensive missile force.

Nixon, however, proposed to move all missile sites away from the cities, with the single exception of the nation's Capitol. The 12 new sites, he said, could both offer countrywide protection against the Chinese threat, and substantial protection for America's strategic missiles and bomber bases against a Soviet surprise attack.

But should the second generation of Red Chinese missiles contain advanced decoys, Pentagon officials said, these could be countered, not by installing local defense missiles at the cities, but by improving the Spartan.

Under present technology the three-stage Spartan is designed to be fired out at a range of about 400 miles to intercept a missile that first would come within radar view while it was still between 1,000 and 1,500 miles away.

* * * *

BUT THE ARMY has started studies of an advanced third-stage for the Spartan. It could be given the capability, officials say, of lying out at greater distances into a cloud of decoys, employing on-board sensors to steer first toward one and then another object until it found the real nuclear warhead. It would then destroy or disarm this warhead.

If experiments in very high frequency, high resolution radar continue to show promise, the officials add, it is conceivable that both the long range Spartan and the short range Sprint could accomplish their mission with nonnuclear warheads.

The Army is spending about one-third of its nearly $2 billion annual research and development budget pressing for just such advances in ballistic missile defense.

State Demos Urge Nixon Abandon ABM Plans

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The State Democratic Central Committee called on President Nixon Saturday to abandon plans for an antiballistic missile system.

In a resolution adopted by the group's executive committee, the Democrats attacked the President's decision to go ahead with a modified system as a "provocative military" step.

The resolution urged Americans to organize campaigns against the ABM, which it said will take billions of dollars away from domestic programs.

Republican Nixon announced Friday that the Administration plans a so-called thin system using Sentinel missiles to guard some missile sites against Soviet missile attack, as well as providing more complete defense against less-sophisticated Red Chinese missiles.

The resolution was adopted by a voice vote with only scattering of nays.

Earlier, the party pledged manpower — and $3,000 — to the 23-year-old carrying the party hopes in a key special State Senate election.

"This is the race of the '70s," said Joseph Holsinger, the party's northern chairman.

The executive committee of the Democratic State Central Committee agreed to put all the resources of the state committee at the command of George Miller III, who dropped out of law school to run for the Contra Costa County seat vacated by the death of his father.

If the young man from Martinez defeats Republican Dist. Atty. John Nejedly March 25, he will be the youngest person ever to serve in the state Senate.

And if he loses, warned Holsinger, "We will be that much farther down."

Party leaders also passed the hat for Miller and raised $3,000 at a luncheon and a morning meeting.

Preparations for special elections was the main topic of the executive committee session.

In addition to the Contra Costa race, there will be a special election in Stanislaus County for the San Joaquin County Assembly seat left vacant when Republican John G. Veneman joined the Nixon Administration in Washington.

If Miller wins, it would leave the Senate divided 20-20 between the parties. And a victory in Stanislaus County would split the Assembly 40-40.

Victory in the two races, said Holsinger, will "set a pattern" and give the party a boost for the legislative races in 1970.

That's the crucial year for both parties. The party that wins control of the Legislature in 1970 will reapportion legislative and congressional districts in 1971.

That historic redistricting will do much toward shaping political control of the state in the next decade.

The party in power traditionally draws districts tailored to favor its own candidates — the so-called gerrymandering that stirs up controversy.

School Honors Cuba Refugee Grads

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fourteen Cuban refugees now living in California could not go to Pacific University in Forest Grove, Ore., for graduation exercises, so the university is bringing the commencement to them.

The 14, plus Ricardo Sardian who drove from McMinnville, Ore., were honored Saturday night at the Sheraton Palace Hotel.

Dr. M. A. F. Ritchie, the university president, gave the commencement address.

Most of the refugees were lawyers in Cuba and fled to Miami when Fidel Castro came to power, taking such menial jobs in Miami as doormen, valets and movie ushers.

Thirty of them received an original grant of $150,000 from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for studies at Pacific.

The 15 being honored completed work last summer — at their own expense — for master's degrees in teaching.

Pacific holds only one commencement a year in May, and the teachers could not leave their jobs or families.

Posh Girl School Sit-in Ends

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — About 50 students ended a 10-day sit-in at posh Sarah Lawrence College Friday night, claiming partial victory in their demand to get more poor students admitted.

The demonstrators left the administratinn building after President Esther Rauschenbush agreed to admit as many poor students "as funds will allow." The students had demanded that one-third of future students be from "low income families."

The students also protested plans to raise the annual tuition by $350 to $4,200, but the administration stood by the boost.

The college has about 600 students, including 24 men.

THEFT OF CORPSES' EYES BARED

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Several surgeons at the General Hospital have been selling eyes they removed from the dead, according to the district attorney.

He did not name the surgeons and no charges have been filed.

Authorities said two or three pairs of eyes have been removed from corpses weekly for the past seven months and sold to clinics, principally in Mexico City, for private use, research or further sale.

By their account, the hollows were filled with gas and then sealed by stitching the eyelids before delivery of the bodies to undertakers.

The project was reportedly discovered when a mother insisted on the return of the body of her daughter, victim of an accidental gunshot. Police said the eyes had been removed within two hours of her death.

Cerritos College Manager to Retire

A 42-year career in the educational field of the Southland, most of it in the business management division, will end June 30 for Henry F. Korsmeier, assistant superintendent and business manager of Cerritos College, who will retire.

HENRY KORSMEIR
Educator to Retire

Korsmeier has held his present position since Cerritos College began operation in 1956. In fact, he started his role as business manager of the Cerritos College District before the college was incepted. For more than a year he served in a dual capacity as Assistant Superintendent and Business Manager of Excelsior Union High School District and Business Manager of the college district in its formation stages.

* * * *

AT HOME in the area, Kosmeier started his education career as a physical education instructor and manual arts teacher in the Norwalk School District in 1927. During his tenure in various schools of the area he has seen many students from the area reach international prominence in sports, business, and politics.

Korsmeier left Norwalk School District in 1930 to become superintendent and principal of the Bloomfield School District in the Hawaiian Gardens and South Artesia. From 1943 to 1946, the school administrator served as superintendent of Sierra Madre School District.

However, with the opening of school in September 1946, Korsmeier returned to his home base to become assistant supeintendent in charge of business for Excelsior Union High School District. At that time Excelsior High of Norwalk was the only high school between Whittier and Long Beach. He left the former Excelsior District to assume his present college role.

Korsmeier is a former city councilman and mayor of Sierra Madre, former trustee of the La Verne College, past president of the California Business Officials Association, Southern Section, and a member of the legislative and finance committee of the California Junior College Association, and the junior college research committee of the Association of School Business Officials.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to laying ground and planning for half a dozen high schools in the former Excelsior District, and the assisting in purchasing land and the development of the multimillion dollar Cerritos College Campus, Korsmeier found time to maintain more than 29 years of perfect attendance in the Kiwanis Club.

During 1966 and 1967 he served two terms as Lt. Gov. of District 13, Kiwanis International, which extends from La Mirada to Long Beach.

OPERATION 'BELL JANGLE'

Marines to Storm Southland Beaches

Marines will be literally "wearing the green" Monday when they storm the beaches, one designated "Green" — at Camp Pendleton.

The 1,300 Leathernecks from 5th Division and 3rd Aircraft Wing, El Toro, will come ashore in battle-conditions assault as part of the 1st Fleet exercise, "Bell Jangle."

Vice Adm. Bernard F. Roeder, 1st Fleet commander, is the overall commander of the task force conducting anti-gressor actions on sea and land as part of "Bell Jangle."

The exercise began Thursday when the Navy's 56-unit task force began maneuvers off the coast against a mythical enemy at sea and land in the country of "South Bend."

The friendly government called for help from the U.S. against the aggressors from "North Bend."

War games will last until Friday with conditions geared to simulate those in the Vietnam theater.

Marine assault troops are under the command of Lt. Col. John B. Bany, commanding officer, 2rd Battalion, 28th Marines. Troops are due to the hit the beaches at 8 a.m. Monday.

British to Test-Fire Submarine Missiles

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — Britain's second missile-firing submarine, HMS Repulse, arrived Saturday to test-launch Polaris rockets on the Atlantic range.

The nuclear-powered undersea craft sailed to Cape Kennedy from the U.S. Navy's Polaris missile loading facility at Charleston, S.C., where it picked up Polaris A3 rockets for the tests.

Party Reversal Beats Vote-at-18 Plan

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The Republican administration, which backed the vote for 18 year olds, has beaten down a proposal to allow 19 year olds to vote in Nevada.

The vote in the State Assembly was 15-20, strictly along party lines. Norman Hilbrecht, D-Las Vegas, changed his vote to "no" so he would be on the prevailing side and thus able to seek reconsideration of the action Monday.

Kidney Transplant Patient, 19, Dies

young man who received a kidney transplant in a multiple organ transplant series from a single donor on Feb. 19 died Saturday morning at New York Hospital.

The hospital said the death of Ronald Nelson, 19, was due to complications that did not involve the kidney, which continued to function.

Cerritos College Manager to Retire

A 42-year career in the educational field of the Southland, most of it in the business management division, will end June 30 for Henry F. Korsmeier, assistant superintendent and business manager of Cerritos College, who will retire.

HENRY KORSMEIR
Educator to Retire

Korsmeier has held his present position since Cerritos College began operation in 1956. In fact, he started his role as business manager of the Cerritos College District before the college was incepted. For more than a year he served in a dual capacity as Assistant Superintendent and Business Manager of Excelsior Union High School District and Business Manager of the college district in its formation stages.

* * * *

AT HOME in the area, Kosmeier started his education career as a physical education instructor and manual arts teacher in the Norwalk School District in 1927. During his tenure in various schools of the area he has seen many students from the area reach international prominence in sports, business, and politics.

Korsmeier left Norwalk School District in 1930 to become superintendent and principal of the Bloomfield School District in the Hawaiian Gardens and South Artesia. From 1943 to 1946, the school administrator served as superintendent of Sierra Madre School District.

However, with the opening of school in September 1946, Korsmeier returned to his home base to become assistant supeintendent in charge of business for Excelsior Union High School District. At that time Excelsior High of Norwalk was the only high school between Whittier and Long Beach. He left the former Excelsior District to assume his present college role.

Korsmeier is a former city councilman and mayor of Sierra Madre, former trustee of the La Verne College, past president of the California Business Officials Association, Southern Section, and a member of the legislative and finance committee of the California Junior College Association, and the junior college research committee of the Association of School Business Officials.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to laying ground and planning for half a dozen high schools in the former Excelsior District, and the assisting in purchasing land and the development of the multimillion dollar Cerritos College Campus, Korsmeier found time to maintain more than 29 years of perfect attendance in the Kiwanis Club.

During 1966 and 1967 he served two terms as Lt. Gov. of District 13, Kiwanis International, which extends from La Mirada to Long Beach.

OPERATION 'BELL JANGLE'

Marines to Storm Southland Beaches

Marines will be literally "wearing the green" Monday when they storm the beaches, one designated "Green" — at Camp Pendleton.

The 1,300 Leathernecks from 5th Division and 3rd Aircraft Wing, El Toro, will come ashore in battle-conditions assault as part of the 1st Fleet exercise, "Bell Jangle."

Vice Adm. Bernard F. Roeder, 1st Fleet commander, is the overall commander of the task force conducting anti-gressor actions on sea and land as part of "Bell Jangle."

The exercise began Thursday when the Navy's 56-unit task force began maneuvers off the coast against a mythical enemy at sea and land in the country of "South Bend."

The friendly government called for help from the U.S. against the aggressors from "North Bend."

War games will last until Friday with conditions geared to simulate those in the Vietnam theater.

Marine assault troops are under the command of Lt. Col. John B. Bany, commanding officer, 2rd Battalion, 28th Marines. Troops are due to the hit the beaches at 8 a.m. Monday.

British to Test-Fire Submarine Missiles

CAPE KENNEDY (AP) — Britain's second missile-firing submarine, HMS Repulse, arrived Saturday to test-launch Polaris rockets on the Atlantic range.

The nuclear-powered undersea craft sailed to Cape Kennedy from the U.S. Navy's Polaris missile loading facility at Charleston, S.C., where it picked up Polaris A3 rockets for the tests.

Party Reversal Beats Vote-at-18 Plan

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The Republican administration, which backed the vote for 18 year olds, has beaten down a proposal to allow 19 year olds to vote in Nevada.

The vote in the State Assembly was 15-20, strictly along party lines. Norman Hilbrecht, D-Las Vegas, changed his vote to "no" so he would be on the prevailing side and thus able to seek reconsideration of the action Monday.

Kidney Transplant Patient, 19, Dies

young man who received a kidney transplant in a multiple organ transplant series from a single donor on Feb. 19 died Saturday morning at New York Hospital.

The hospital said the death of Ronald Nelson, 19, was due to complications that did not involve the kidney, which continued to function.

Mayor Wade Will Seek Re-Election

Mayor Edwin W. Wade, three-term representative for the Fifth District and mayor for nine years, has announced his candidacy for re-election to the Long Beach City Council.

Weekford Morgan, chairman of the Wade for Council committee, said the Fifth District "has enjoyed capable and constructive representation through the services of Ed Wade. Its citizens are fortunate he is again making himself available for public service."

Morgan cited street and park improvements as major achievements in Wade's district, noting, "Clark Avenue and Spring Street are being widened, improved and beautified. Final development of El Dorado Park is underway, and arrangements for the Camp Fire Girls day camp in Heartwell Park have been completed.

"Ed Wade's proven ability is needed again as issues of great concern face the voters, such as keeping city taxes to a minimum, preserving law and order and insuring proper airport usage."

Officers and members of the Wade for Council committee announced by Morgan include: James K. (Ken) McCall, vice chairman; Carl E. Gallman and Richard G. Wilson, finance cochairmen; Mrs. Willard Sudenga, treasurer; Mrs. O. W. Connor and Mrs. Carl E. Gallman, in charge of coffee hours.

Spain Fears for Its Nationals in Guinea

MADRID (UPI) — The Spanish government Saturday accused President Francisco Macias Nguema of Equatorial Guinea of refusing to let Spaniards leave the country.

Forgetting the restraint observed in the last few days, the government openly voiced concern over the fate of more than 3,000 Spaniards still living in the former Spanish colony.

Eye Building State Offices in Santa Ana

The Civic Center Commission may be asked to finance construction of a multistory State Building of 90,000 square feet in the Civic Center in Santa Ana.

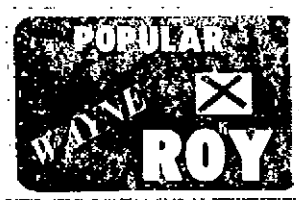

Mayor Thomas McMichael of Santa Ana said that the structure would be at Fifth and Van Ness streets, a block from a federal building planned of about the same size.

Andrew Lolli, director of general services for the state, said that the structure will be needed by mid-1973.

The state now has 487 employes in 14 offices in the county — mostly in the county seat, Santa Ana — and by the year 2000 probably would have 1,000 employes, it was indicated.

Legion's Stamp

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster Gen. Winton M. Blount dedicated Saturday a commemorative stamp in honor of the American Legion's 50th anniversary. Its design is patterned after the official seal of the United States.

National Boys' Club Week Celebration Scheduled

Long Beach area Boys' Clubs today open a celebration of National Boys' Club Week with events scheduled through Saturday.

Highlight of the week will be the introduction of four Boys of the Year at the Wednesday noon Exchange Club meeting in the Lafayette Condominium.

Maurice Bugbee, executive vice president said the program of events for the week is designed to spotlight the way Boys' Clubs "build juvenile decency in the community."

"We hope to show that the same energies which can get a youngster into trouble on the street can be a force for good and lead to productive, responsible pursuits when put to proper use," Bugbee said.

He said more than 8 million youngsters in 500 communities are involved in Boys' Club activities. In Long Beach, more than 3,000 boys are in the program.

Special events during the week will be staged at the East Branch, 1205 Freeman Ave.; Lakewood Branch, 4651 Charlemagne Ave.; West Branch, 1835 Willard St. and the North Branch, 711 Via Wanda.

Dogs Get a Raise

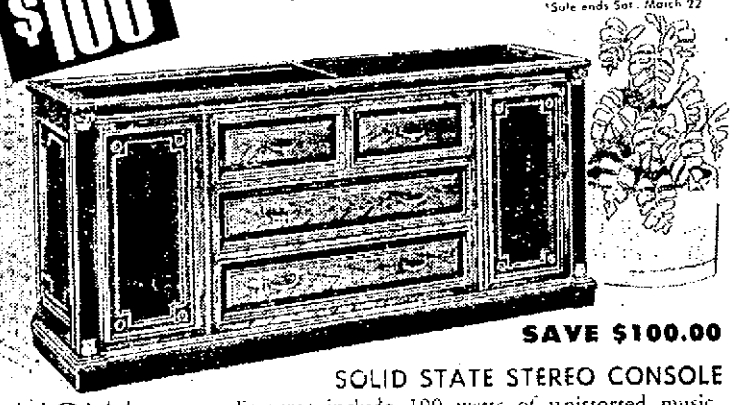

VIENNA (UPI) — Viennese watchdogs have won a pay raise that eliminates discrimination in the Austrian animal world. The dogs employed by the city administration got "per diems" increased by 4 cents. This puts them on the same level as police dogs, city officials said.

Eye Building State Offices in Santa Ana

The Civic Center Commission may be asked to finance construction of a multistory State Building of 90,000 square feet in the Civic Center in Santa Ana.

Mayor Thomas McMichael of Santa Ana said that the structure would be at Fifth and Van Ness streets, a block from a federal building planned of about the same size.

Andrew Lolli, director of general services for the state, said that the structure will be needed by mid-1973.

The state now has 487 employes in 14 offices in the county — mostly in the county seat, Santa Ana — and by the year 2000 probably would have 1,000 employes, it was indicated.

National Boys' Club Week Celebration Scheduled

Long Beach area Boys' Clubs today open a celebration of National Boys' Club Week with events scheduled through Saturday.

Highlight of the week will be the introduction of four Boys of the Year at the Wednesday noon Exchange Club meeting in the Lafayette Condominium.

Maurice Bugbee, executive vice president said the program of events for the week is designed to spotlight the way Boys' Clubs "build juvenile decency in the community."

"We hope to show that the same energies which can get a youngster into trouble on the street can be a force for good and lead to productive, responsible pursuits when put to proper use," Bugbee said.

He said more than 8 million youngsters in 500 communities are involved in Boys' Club activities. In Long Beach, more than 3,000 boys are in the program.

Special events during the week will be staged at the East Branch, 1265 Freeman Ave., Lakewood Branch, 4654 Charlemagne Ave.; West Branch, 1835 Willard St. and the North Branch, 711 Via Wanda.

4 AQUANAUT-SCIENTISTS

2 Mos. Under Sea, All Home Comforts

By MARGARET HYMAN

ST. JOHN, Virgin Islands (UPI) — Four aquanaut-scientists are living in a capsule at the bottom of a shark-infested Caribbean bay and their special equipment includes a guitar, a harmonica, a 60-day supply of snuff and a tortilla press.

Their basic mission is to live longer at the bottom of the sea than any man has done before — 60 days. Since Feb. 15 the U.S. Department of Interior scientists have dwelt at the bottom of Lameshur Bay in the Virgin Islands in a four-chamber, underwater house the size of a 15-by-18-foot room.

Actually their "house" consists of a pair of 18-foot-high steel tanks connected by a tube and jammed with equipment. Their supply link with the surface is a container that sinks to the bottom when full, then is parachuted up to the surface after the chute has been filled with air.

* * * *

THE TEAM CAPTAIN is Richard A. Waller, 34, of Oxon Hill, Md., and their general mission is to see if man can live under water for long periods without serious physical or psychological disabilities.

If confined underwater living is possible, man also can live in the isolated conditions of space, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, one of the undersea project's sponsors, forsees manned research centers floating in space.

Each member of Waller's team — all strangers before their mission began — has a special job.

Geologist H. Edward Clifton, 34, of Los Altos, Calif., is studying the coral sea bottom to discover how it lives and dies, as well as searching for clues to identifying underwater oil deposits.

Fishery biologist John G. Van Der Walker, 32, of Lynwood, Wash., communicates by radio and sonar with some of the 1,000 of more species of marine life that make their home in this part of the sea. He has attached radio transmitters to 16 spiny lobsters (the source of succulent lobster tails). He wants to track them to learn enough about this disappearing delicacy to make possible undersea commercial lobster farms.

* * * *

OCEANOGRAPHER Conrad V. W. Mahnken, 31, of Bainbridge Island, Wash., is concentrating on a study of plankton, the staff of life for marine animals.

The curiosity is not all one-sided. The human intruders at the sea floor are getting the fish - eye from some nosy neighbors, including four yellowtails that keep peering in the windows, and a bell-nosed trumpet fish and a barracuda that stand guard daily over the shark cage that protects the capsule's trapdoor.

Shark suckers — fish that look like small sharks — occasionally try to hitch rides on the aquanats' backs. Real sharks so far have made infrequent and harmless visits to the research site, but each man carries a "bang stick" — a club with a shotgun shell at the end — when he leaves shelter for unprotected underwater work.

* * * *

WHAT THE peeping fish see inside Tektite 1, the $1.5 million habitat adapted for underwater use be General Electric's space capsule designers, includes a laboratory, commercial radio and television, carpeted floors, and a hot shower, as well as necessary furniture.

Aquanaut Clifton sometimes entertains on his guitar or harmonica, and he brought along the tortilla press and special flour to supplement a diet of TV dinners, cake mixes, and other bachelor-adapted dishes stowed in the habitat's freezer.

The 60-day supply of snuff is for Waller, a heavy smoker who can't light a cigaret in the capsule's air. In order to keep the capsule's oxygen at sea level pressure, it was reduced so much it won't support combustion — not even enough to light a match.

To compensate, the nitrogen in the air was increased to the point where the men's bodies were saturated with it 36 hours after entering the capsule. They will have to undergo decompression for 18 hours before they can safely return to the surface.

POWERFUL GROUPS FIGHT DRUG LABELS

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman Robert W. Crown said Saturday that "powerful interests" are lobbying to defeat his bill requiring drug labels to contain a date denoting when the drug becomes ineffective.

The Alameda Democrat said the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, the California Retailers Association and the California Grocers Association are "slated" to oppose the measure when it comes before the Assembly Health and Welfare Committee Tuesday.

He said members of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association are "some of the wealthiest companies in the world." He said drug companies earn an average "18" per cent return on invested capital compared with 8 or 9 per cent for most other major American industries.

He said his measure is backed by the California Medical Association, the California Pharmaceutical Association and the Pharmaceutical Society of California.

'FAIRNESS IS THE KEY'

Youth Office's Daugherty Has Reasons for Optimism

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — "Why, sure, I'm still an optimist," says Bill Daugherty, a raised eyebrow indicating surprise that the question is even asked.

"We can and do help youngsters who need help. Considerably more youngsters could be helped, though," if more individuals and communities would come to believe there is something they can do to keep youngsters from getting into trouble in the first place."

Daugherty, 43, cut short a promising career with the Long Beach Police Department in 1960 to go to work for the California Youth Authority. He now has the title of "Assistant to the Director," with the primary responsibility of helping Director Allen F. Breed develop legislative progams, and of reviewing proposed legislation of interest to the Youth Authority.

* * * *

JUVENILES HAVE been the focus of Bill Daugherty's professonal life since 1952, when he joined the Long Beach Police Dept. and received immediate assignment to the Juvenile Bureau.

Joseph M. Kennick, who now represents Long Beach in the State Senate, headed the bureau then, and Daugherty still regards the senator as "one of the finest, most understanding men I've ever known."

In 1960, mostly out of curiosity, he took an examination offered by the Youth Authority, and wound up becoming the CYA's consultant on juvenile control to local law enforcement agencies.

For six years, he worked out of the authority's Los Angeles office, traveling to various communities in nine counties to advise them on their handling of youngsters in trouble.

In 1966, he came to Sacramento to assume his present position. His wife, Dolores, and 16-year-old daughter, Carol, have also become Sacramento residents, and son Patrick undoubtedly looks forward to joining his family. Right now he's with the Army in Vietnam, and he recently "celebrated" his 21st birthday there.

THE YEARS of concern over the welfare of juveniles has given Daugherty some firm convictions, and it is these convictions which still permit an optimistic outlook.

"Kids can be convinced their treatment is fair, even if it is firm," he says. "But they can recognize a snow job in an awful hurry, and when they do their trust goes out the window.

"Individual attention is absolutely vital when you're dealing with a boy or girl heading for trouble, but time is a problem and so is money.

"The individual attention is especially important when they are at junior high school age. After that, after 14 or 15, it's pretty tough to reach them."

As with so many other social ills, prevention is the key to keeping a juvenile from becoming delinquent, Daugherty says.

"We spend a great deal of money on rehabilitation — and of course it's a necessary expense — but if we could spend more on prevention, perhaps we wouldn't have as high a rehabilitation expense."

JUST WHAT is "prevention"

Daugherty, with a grim shake of the head, says, "We've been trying to define it for years. We know something about how young people think, but obviously not enough.

"We know, for instance, that permissive parents contribute to delinquency. But we also know that overly strict and rigid parents do, too.

"We know it's quite possible that in a family of five kids, two are going to turn out fine, two are going to be hell raisers, and one is going to be a little of each.

"If we can find some sort of common denominator, then we'll have something to attack. Until then, we just do the best we can."

The important thing, he insists, is to keep trying. He thinks the state's current experiment with Youth Service Bureaus — the result of legislation introduced last year by Long Beach Sen. George Deukmejian — has great promise.

* * * *

THE BUREAUS WILL be set up in four communities — Richmond (predominantly black), Yuba City (rural), East Los Angeles (Mexican-American), and the Claremont area of San Diego (upper middle class white families) — and youngsters displaying tendencies known to precede delinquent behavior will be referred there for counseling and any other services the bureaus can provide.

"The object," Daugherty explains, "is to keep the youngster out of the system (the formal judicial process) if we can."

One of the functions of the Youth Service Bureaus will be to disseminate information so that people in schools, churches, YMCAs and similar activities can recognize the warning signs of potential delinquency. Through the Deukmejian bill, the state is kicking in $100,000 each year for three years to see if the idea works.

"People must realize that some young people are going to stub their toes," Daugherty says. "Just naturally, some kids are going to do things they shouldn't. And of course there are always some who just can't be reached, no matter what.

"But most can, and so we've got to keep trying."

* * * *

BILL HAS no hesitation in naming the one thing adults can do which would be the most effective single weapon in the battle against juvenile delinquency.

"Kids ape the adult world," he says. "You know, like that anti-smoking TV commercial, the little boy does what his father does, including picking up a bad habit.

"So the simple answer to the question of getting young people to make the most of their lives is for their parents — all of us — to make sure we're doing what we're supposed to be doing."

Tomb of Unknown to Be Illuminated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier will be bathed in light every night — a gift to the nation from the American Legion.

Legionaires around the country contributed $125,000 to install a sophisticated lighting system, turned on Saturday night, lighting the tomb and the facade of the adjacent Memorial Amphitheater in Arlington National Cemetery.

House Unit Says HEW Lagging in Fight on Pollution

By ERNIE HERNANDEZ
from Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) is lagging in developing new techniques to combat pollution, a House committee charged in a report released Saturday.

The House Government Operations Committee noted that HEW's plan, started in 1968, allows delays in "prototype tests of laboratory proven efficient coal-conversion and flue-gas cleaning processes."

* * * *

THE REPORT was prepared in the 90th Congress by the research and technical programs subcommittee.

It was reviewed and ratified in the current Congress by the conservation and national resources subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, chairman of both subcommittees, said sulphur oxides have caused deaths during air pollution disasters and are suspected of being a major factor in chronic respiratory diseases.

Reuss noted sulphur oxides "now pour into the air at a rate of nearly 30 million tons a year. They are caused by power generation and other indispensable economic activities."

Abatement methods and techniques must be quickly developed, he said.

The report points out the federal government took 13 years simply to draw up a plan to organize research and development work on sulphur oxides.

* * * *

REUSS SAID the HEW plan of 1968 failed to include work of agencies such as the Commerce Department, Atomic Energy Commission, National Science and Space Administration and the National Science Foundation.

"A more judicious selection of research and development projects would permit greater emphasis on needed development projects at the present level of financing," said the report.

Reuss' committee recommended the plan be evaluated by nonfederal as well as federal experts, and that it be expanded to include other federal agencies.

Seminary Closed in Reply to Protest

LEON, Spain (UPI) — The Bishop of Astorga in this central northern Spain province closed the seminary of Astorga Saturday for "ideological, psychological and disciplinary reasons," a note from the rector said.

Church sources said a majority of the 150 to 200 candidates for the Roman Catholic priesthood had been in the habit of going home for weekends and attending public meetings against the discipline of the center.

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — "Why, sure, I'm still an optimist," says Bill Daugherty, a raised eyebrow indicating surprise that the question is even asked.

"We can and do help youngsters who need help. Considerably more youngsters could be helped, though, if more individuals and communities would come to believe there is something they can do to keep youngsters from getting into trouble in the first place."

Daugherty, 43, cut short a promising career with the Long Beach Police Department in 1960 to go to work for the California Youth Authority. He now has the title of "Assistant to the Director," with the primary responsibility of helping Director Allen F. Breed develop legislative progams, and of reviewing proposed legislation of interest to the Youth Authority.

* * * *

JUVENILES HAVE been the focus of Bill Daugherty's professonal life since 1952, when he joined the Long Beach Police Dept. and received immediate assignment to the Juvenile Bureau.

Joseph M. Kennick, who now represents Long Beach in the State Senate, headed the bureau then, and Daugherty still regards the senator as "one of the finest, most understanding men I've ever known."

In 1960, mostly out of curiosity, he took an examination offered by the Youth Authority, and wound up becoming the CYA's consultant on juvenile control to local law enforcement agencies.

For six years, he worked out of the authority's Los Angeles office, traveling to various communities in nine counties to advise them on their handling of youngsters in trouble.

In 1966, he came to Sacramento to assume his present position. His wife, Dolores, and 16-year-old daughter, Carol, have also become Sacramento residents, and son Patrick undoubtedly looks forward to joining his family. Right now he's with the Army in Vietnam, and he recently "celebrated" his 21st birthday there.

THE YEARS of concern over the welfare of juveniles has given Daugherty some firm convictions, and it is these convictions which still permit an optimistic outlook.

"Kids can be convinced their treatment is fair, even if it is firm," he says. "But they can recognize a snow job in an awful hurry, and when they do their trust goes out the window.

"Individual attention is absolutely vital when you're dealing with a boy or girl heading for trouble, but time is a problem and so is money.

"The individual attention is especially important when they are at junior high school age. After that, after 14 or 15, it's pretty tough to reach them."

As with so many other social ills, prevention is the key to keeping a juvenile from becoming delinquent, Daugherty says.

"We spend a great deal of money on rehabilitation — and of course it's a necessary expense — but if we could spend more on prevention, perhaps we wouldn't have as high a rehabilitation expense."

JUST WHAT is "prevention"

Daugherty, with a grim shake of the head, says, "We've been trying to define it for years. We know something about how young people think, but obviously not enough.

"We know, for instance, that permissive parents contribute to delinquency. But we also know that overly strict and rigid parents do, too.

"We know it's quite possible that in a family of five kids, two are going to turn out fine, two are going to be hell raisers, and one is going to be a little of each.

"If we can find some sort of common denominator, then we'll have something to attack. Until then, we just do the best we can."

The important thing, he insists, is to keep trying. He thinks the state's current experiment with Youth Service Bureaus — the result of legislation introduced last year by Long Beach Sen. George Deukmejian — has great promise.

* * * *

THE BUREAUS WILL be set up in four communities — Richmond (predominantly black), Yuba City (rural), East Los Angeles (Mexican-American), and the Clarement area of San Diego (upper middle class white families) — and youngsters displaying tendencies known to precede delinquent behavior will be referred there for counseling and any other services the bureaus can provide.

"The object," Daugherty explains, "is to keep the youngster out of the system (the formal judicial process) if we can."

One of the functions of the Youth Service Bureaus will be to disseminate information so that people in schools, churches, YMCAs and similar activities can recognize the warning signs of potential delinquency. Through the Deukmejian bill, the state is kicking in $100,000 each year for three years to see if the idea works.

"People must realize that some young people are going to stub their toes," Daugherty says. "Just naturally, some kids are going to do things they shouldn't. And of course there are always some who just can't be reached, no matter what.

"But most can, and so we've got to keep trying."

* * * *

BILL HAS no hesitation in naming the one thing adults can do which would be the most effective single weapon in the battle against juvenile delinquency.

"Kids ape the adult world," he says. "You know, like that anti-smoking TV commercial, the little boy does what his father does, including picking up a bad habit.

"So the simple answer to the question of getting young people to make the most of their lives is for their parents — all of us — to make sure we're doing what we're supposed to be doing."

Tomb of Unknown to Be Illuminated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier will be bathed in light every night — a gift to the nation from the American Legion.

Legionaires around the country contributed $125,000 to install a sophisticated lighting system, turned on Saturday night, lighting the tomb and the facade of the adjacent Memorial Amphitheater in Arlington National Cemetery.

House Unit Says HEW Lagging in Fight on Pollution

By ERNIE HERNANDEZ
from Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) is lagging in developing new techniques to combat pollution, a House committee charged in a report released Saturday.

The House Government Operations Committee noted that HEW's plan, started in 1968, allows delays in "prototype tests of laboratory proven efficient coal-conversion and flue-gas cleaning processes."

* * * *

THE REPORT was prepared in the 90th Congress by the research and technical programs subcommittee.

It was reviewed and ratified in the current Congress by the conservation and national resources subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee.

Rep. Henry S. Reuss, chairman of both subcommittees, said sulphur oxides have caused deaths during air pollution disasters and are suspected of being a major factor in chronic respiratory diseases.

Reuss noted sulphur oxides "now pour into the air at a rate of nearly 30 million tons a year. They are caused by power generation and other indispensable economic activities."

Abatement methods and techniques must be quickly developed, he said.

The report points out the federal government took 13 years simply to draw up a plan to organize research and development work on sulphur oxides.

* * * *

REUSS SAID the HEW plan of 1968 failed to include work of agencies such as the Commerce Department, Atomic Energy Commission, National Science and Space Administration and the National Science Foundation.

"A more judicious selection of research and development projects would permit greater emphasis on needed development projects at the present level of financing," said the report.

Reuss' committee recommended the plan be evaluated by nonfederal as well as federal experts, and that it be expanded to include other federal agencies.

Seminary Closed in Reply to Protest

LEON, Spain (AP) — The Bishop of Astorga in this central northern Spain province closed the seminary of Astorga Saturday for "ideological, psychological and disciplinary reasons," a note from the rector said.

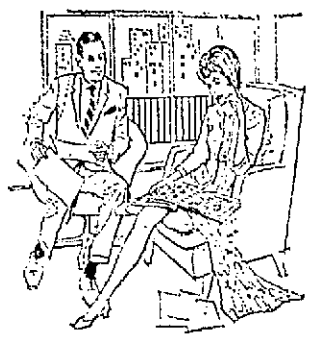

Church sources said a majority of the 150 to 200 candidates for the Roman Catholic priesthood had been in the habit of going home for weekends and attending public meetings against the discipline of the center.

Congress Fight Seen Over OEO

Nixon Seeks to Restrict Jurisdiction

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major political battle between the Nixon administration and Congress is shaping up over the future of the Office of Economic Opportunity and its anti-poverty programs.

President Nixon's plan — to peel off the popular Head Start program and the Job Corps from OEO and leave it with little more than the controversial community action programs — faces strong resistance in the House Education and Labor Committee, which is responsible for the legislation.

Chairman Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., sees the move as an politically inspired decision aimed at killing the OEO but putting the onus on Congress.

* * * *

HE IS convinced the House would never pass a bill prolonging the OEO if the only major program left in its jurisdiction was community action.

"We're going to put Head Start and the Job Corps back in the OEO," he said in an interview. "And we're going to repeal the provision giving the President authority to make transfers out of the OEO without congressional approval."

Perkins is counting on the support of nearly all the Democrats on his committee and thinks he can bring such a bill to the floor.

There the fate of the OEO will probably be determined by the extent to which southern Democrats join up with the Republicans. With a Republican President in the White House and the GOP gathering strength in the South, the southern Democrats might not be quite as willing as in the past to team up in a coalition with their party rivals.

* * * *

EXCEPT for declaring his intention to move Head Start and Job Corps out of the OEO, Nixon has not disclosed his over-all plans for carrying on the campaign against poverty launched by former President Lyndon Johnson.

But Democrats on Capitol Hill report hearing from OEO officials that the administration is planning to cut down sharply on Job Corps operation.

A proposal reportedly has been prepared in the Labor Department to shut down 22 Job Corps centers at a saving of $54 million. Some $12 million of that would be put back into a new program of job skill centers in slum areas. The plan is said to be awaiting Nixon's approval now.

The struggle over the future of OEO should come out into the open in the Education and Labor Committee when Congress comes back from its Easter recess in mid-April.

127,00 in St. Patrick Fete in N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — An estimated 127,000 marchers, stepping to the tunes of more than 160 bands, are scheduled to take part in the 207th St. Patrick's Day Parade up Fifth Avenue Monday.

Early weather forecasts for the traditional "Great Day for the Irish" are fair, but windy and cold — not at all bothersome to the sons and daughters of Erin and their marching cohorts.

The parade will be reviewed by Archbishop Terence J. Cooke and other members of the clergy from the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Political figures and other dignitaries will watch form the official reviewing stand at 64th Street.

GONDOLAMOBILE AHOY!

Rap 'Disgrace' of Politics in Hunger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Herbert G. Klein, President Nixon's communications director, said Saturday it is disgraceful that Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., and others in Congress made a political issue of hunger in America.

Klein told a luncheon session of the annual Young Republican Leadership School that everyone is concerned about hunger but that the problem will not be solved "by traipsing around the country with television cameras."

"I think one disgrace of the moment is for Sen. McGovern and others to make hunger a political cause," he said. Klein said the problem called for a study in depth before solutions could be offered.

He expressed the belief that the nation is now beginning what will be "a new Republican era." The next GOP goal, he said, must be to elect a Republican majority in Congress.

Klein praised a speech made before the same group two days ago by Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., who said "too many Republicans are complaining when they should be applauding."

In a country with a two-party system, Klein said, there is room for debate within a party, "but don't expect everything to happen at once. We have to pull together."

Klein said the country should not look just at messages the Administration is sending to Congress "but what we're doing to make government move forward."

He said it takes time to choose highly qualified people to fill policy-making jobs.

"Let us take the challenge to give you an Administration you can be proud of," he said.

Bombing Unsolved

OSLO (UPI) — Police said Saturday they had made no arrests following the explosion of two smoke bombs at the doors of th Soviet embassy late Friday. The doors were blackened, but there were no injuries.

TASK FORCE ON RURAL POVERTY

Redistributing Population, Industry Urged by Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Chamber of Commerce task force on rural poverty urged Saturday that a bipartisan commission consider whether the nation should have a policy of encouraging a more even distribution of population and industry.

"A national locational dispersal policy should be approached with respect and caution," the group said. "The stakes are too great to decide lightly."

* * * *

THE PROPOSAL that Congress name a commission to examine reasons for heavy concentrations of population and industry in some areas and their absence in others was one of 18 made by the Task Force on Economic Growth and Opportunity in a report entitled "Rural Poverty and Regional Progress in an Urban Society."

Headed by Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor and a former President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the task force is made up of 100 business executives

* * * *

THE CHAMBER noted the task force's recommendations were "not necessarily in agreement or disagreement with National Chamber policy declarations."

The task force charged the formula determining distribution of funds under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act is "inequitable and ineffectual."

* * * *

ITS BASIC flaw, the report said, is that grants are made to school districts on the basis of how many poor children they have enrolled, without regard to the affluence of the districts.

Since "every district has at least a few disadvantaged families and children," the report said, many wealthy school districts receive at least some aid under the program.

A more sensible method, it said, would be to cut off aid to districts with only a few poor children and concentrate the money in districts where a substantial percentage are needy.

Hovercraft Views Given by Inventor

By MARIS ROSS

LONDON (UPI) — In the tradition of hard-up investors, Sir Christopher Cockerell started to experiment with a small, flat-bottomed boat, his wife's vacuum cleaner and a $20 mechanical fan.

So the Hovercraft was born, a new type of vehicle that could ride over land or sea on a cushion of air like a skimming saucer.

Ten years after the launching of the first hovercraft, this British invention has entered ferry services in half a dozen countries, gone up the Amazon, over Arctic ice, across desert and into the Vietnam war.

At the moment, the hovercraft is still in its childhood, still having teething problems, still has to satisfy doubters of its profitability and versatility.

* * * *

"THIS IS, of course, an enormous project and like the development of the airplane will take a long time before it is fully exploited," Cockerell told UPI in an interview.

"This year there will be four SRN4 hovercraft, each capable of carrying 250 people and 30 automobiles, in operation across the English Channel but even so this is only the beginning. Hovercraft in their present form have no more than reached the biplane stage in the development of aircraft.

"Like any major development, it is not going ahead as fast as it could do because it takes time for confidence to ripple out."

Mindful of export possibilities, the 58-year-old Cockerell did not want to voice for foreign publication the fears he has expressed in the past that Britain might lose its hovercraft lead to the United States.

But three years ago he resigned as technical director of the officially backed Hovercraft Development Co. to protest what he called stultifying government policy and granting of licenses to U.S. and Japanese companies to build hovercraft, "thus helping our worst competitors into the business."

* * * *

NOW COCKERELL would like the British research effort stepped up 10 times to exploit the hovercraft's potential.

"I think one has first got to run the thing in terms of economy, got to make it pay," he said. "The easiest place is on ferry routes. As time goes by, it will move out into other fields and even eventually be something for the oceans of the world.

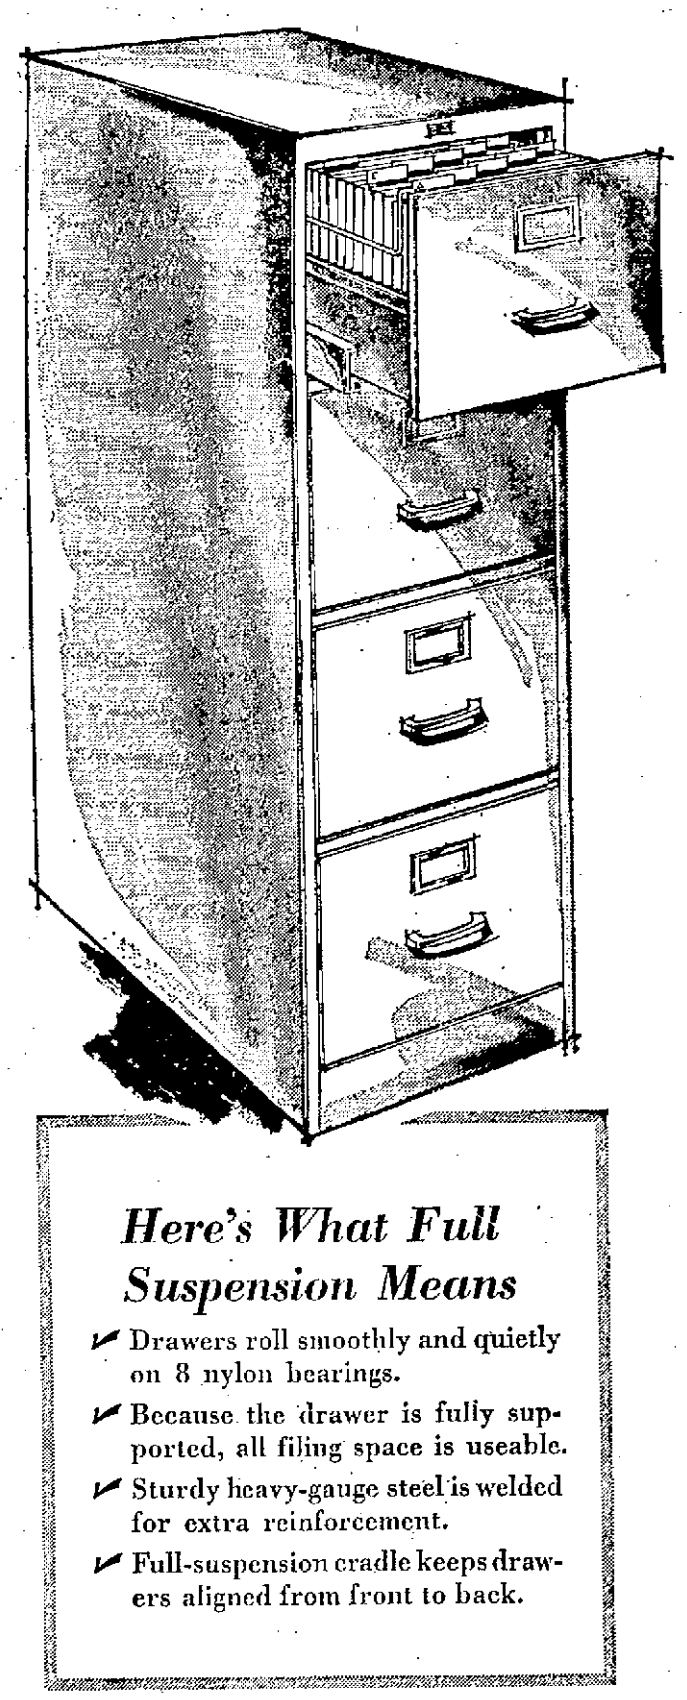

"It is the only vehicle which can really make use of an atomic power unit, which is too heavy for the airplane and can offer only improved economy for ordinary ships. But with the hovercraft, an atomic engine offers increased speed and unlimited range."

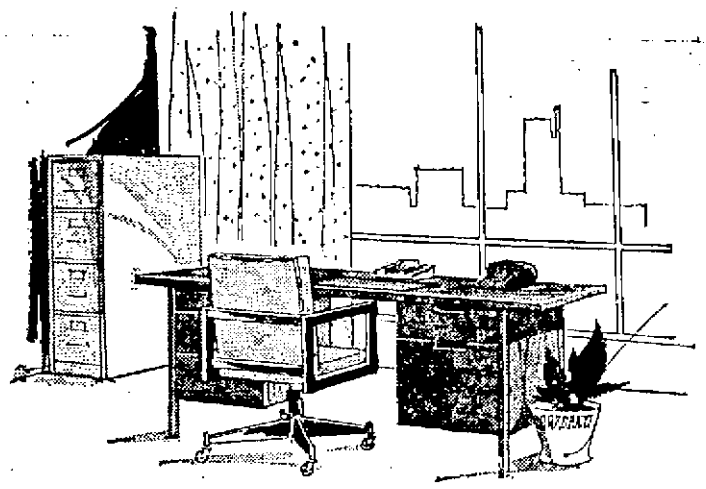

The concept of hovercraft is a vehicle capable of speeding up both sea and overland travel, of crossing terrain like swamps, river rapids and ice with which other forms of transport cannot cope. The air cushion created by a fan pushes the craft off the ground and conventional aircraft engines with the propellors mounted on top of the craft move them along. Atomic engines for them have only been studied on paper.

Congress Fight Seen Over OEO

Nixon Seeks to Restrict Jurisdiction

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A major political battle between the Nixon administration and Congress is shaping up over the future of the Office of Economic Opportunity and its anti-poverty programs.

President Nixon's plan — to peel off the popular Head Start program and the Job Corps from OEO and leave it with little more than the controversial community action programs — faces strong resistance in the House Education and Labor Committee, which is responsible for the legislation.

Chairman Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., sees the move as a politically inspired decision aimed at killing the OEO but putting the onus on Congress.

* * * *

HE IS convinced the House would never pass a bill prolonging the OEO if the only major program left in its jurisdiction was community action.

"We're going to put Head Start and the Job Corps back in the OEO," he said in an interview. "And we're going to repeal the provision giving the President authority to make transfers out of the OEO without congressional approval."

Perkins is counting on the support of nearly all the Democrats on his committee and thinks he can bring such a bill to the floor.

There the fate of the OEO will probably be determined by the extent to which southern Democrats join up with the Republicans. With a Republican President in the White House and the GOP gathering strength in the South, the southern Democrats might not be quite as willing as in the past to team up in a coalition with their party rivals.

* * * *

EXCEPT for declaring his intention to move Head Start and Job Corps out of the OEO, Nixon has not disclosed his over-all plans for carrying on the campaign against poverty launched by former President Lyndon Johnson.

But Democrats on Capitol Hill report hearing from OEO officials that the administration is planning to cut down sharply on Job Corps operation.

A proposal reportedly has been prepared in the Labor Department to shut down 22 Job Corps centers at a saving of $54 million. Some $12 million of that would be put back into a new program of job skill centers in slum areas. The plan is said to be awaiting Nixon's approval now.

The struggle over the future of OEO should come out into the open in the Education and Labor Committee when Congress comes back from its Easter recess in mid-April.

127,00 in St. Patrick Fete in N.Y.

NEW YORK (UPI) — An estimated 127,000 marchers, stepping to the tunes of more than 160 bands, are scheduled to take part in the 207th St. Patrick's Day Parade up Fifth Avenue Monday.

Early weather forecasts for the traditional "Great Day for the Irish" are fair, but windy and cold — not at all bothersome to the sons and daughters of Erin and their marching cohorts.

The parade will be reviewed by Archbishop Terence J. Cooke and other members of the clergy from the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Political figures and other dignitaries will watch form the official reviewing stand at 64th Street.

Rap 'Disgrace' of Politics in Hunger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Herbert G. Klein, President Nixon's communications director, said Saturday it is disgraceful that Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., and others in Congress made a political issue of hunger in America.

Klein told a luncheon session of the annual Young Republican Leadership School that everyone is concerned about hunger but that the problem will not be solved "by traipsing around the country with television cameras."

"I think one disgrace of the moment is for Sen. McGovern and others to make hunger a political cause," he said. Klein said the problem called for a study in depth before solutions could be offered.

He expressed the belief that the nation is now beginning what will be "a new Republican era." The next GOP goal, he said, must be to elect a Republican majority in Congress.

Klein praised a speech made before the same group two days ago by Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., who said "too many Republicans are complaining when they should be applauding."

In a country with a two-party system, Klein said, there is room for debate within a party, "but don't expect everything to happen at once. We have to pull together."

Klein said the country should not look just at messages the Administration is sending to Congress "but what we're doing to make government move forward."

He said it takes time to choose highly qualified people to fill policy-making jobs.

"Let us take the challenge to give you an Administration you can be proud of," he said.

OSLO (UPI) — Police said Saturday they had made no arrests following the explosion of two smoke bombs at the doors of th Soviet embassy late Friday. The doors were blackened, but there were no injuries.

TASK FORCE ON RURAL POVERTY

Redistributing Population, Industry Urged by Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Chamber of Commerce task force on rural poverty urged Saturday that a bipartisan commission consider whether the nation should have a policy of encouraging a more even distribution of population and industry.

"A national locational dispersal policy should be approached with respect and caution," the group said. "The stakes are too great to decide lightly."

* * * *

THE PROPOSAL that Congress name a commission to examine reasons for heavy concentrations of population and industry in some areas and their absence in others was one of 18 made by the Task Force on Economic Growth and Opportunity in a report entitled "Rural Poverty and Regional Progress in an Urban Society."

Headed by Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor and a former President of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the task force is made up of 100 business executives

* * * *

THE CHAMBER noted the task force's recommendations were "not necessarily in agreement or disagreement with National Chamber policy declarations."

The task force charged the formula determining distribution of funds under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act is "inequitable and ineffectual."

* * * *

ITS BASIC flaw, the report said, is that grants are made to school districts on the basis of how many poor children they have enrolled, without regard to the affluence of the districts.

Since "every district has at least a few disadvantaged families and children," the report said, many wealthy school districts receive at least some aid under the program.

Son Clark Gable Never Saw Now 8

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The son Clark Gable never lived to see will be 8 years old this week and as shielded from the public eye as his mother can manage.

Tough Gable died of a heart attack in November, 1960, millions of persons across the country have seen him this year as Rhett Butler in the re-release of MGM's "Gone with the Wind."

But young John Clark Gable, born four months after his father's death, watches his dad's films at home.

"I run some of Clark's old pictures often on the weekends," said Kay Gable, the actor's widow. "John's face shines with pride and he'll say, 'That's my father.'"

Kay, blonde and youthful in appearance, has never remarried. Her children by a previous marriage — Joan and Bunker — are off at college. John Clark is a good student at a private school and spends his afternoons tearing around the 22-acre estate in the San Fernando Valley that his father loved so well.

* * * *

FORTUNATELY, Mrs. Gable has a live-in servant who is the mother of a seven-year-old. He and John are great pals.

Until recently John Clark has received a 25-cent-a-week allowance. Now he wants a raise to $1 a week.

"He has his heart set on buying a minibike by the time he's 10 years old," Kay explained. "I told him he would have to earn the money. So now he does odd jobs, hoping to earn $1 a week for 100 weeks, enough to buy a $100 minibike.

"But I have news for him. He's not getting a minibike until he's 14. When I told him that John said he would buy the bike for his friend here at the house, Mark."

Kay laughed. "You know who would be doing all the riding."

When news reached John Clark, who is the image of his dashing father, that the motorized mini had been reduced to $99, he decided he would work only 99 weeks instead of the originally scheduled 100.

* * * *

JOHN'S CHORES consist of sweeping and cleaning up around the property and, recently, shoveling mud from the heavy downpours.

"Every once in a while John will tell me he wishes he could see his father," Kay said sadly. "But I tell him to keep saying his prayers every night."

Kay will take John Clark and eight other youngsters to Disneyland to celebrate his birthday. Kay will go along but plans to take it easy. She suffered a coronary herself two years ago.

The house and grounds remain very much the same as they were when Gable was alive and "king" of Hollywood. There's a masculine feeling to the estate and home, almost as if Gable might walk in the door at any time.

It is in this atmosphere that John Clark is being reared.

He is 100 per cent all boy, charging in and out of the house, climbing on the roof, shinnying up trees and engaging in loud arguments with his buddy, Mark.

* * * *

AT THE same time Kay has seen to his manners. He shakes hands manfully and responds to questions with a directness that reminds one of his father.

Kay is at pains not to talk show business with her son, nor does she attempt to guide him into the acting business.

John Clark Gable could not be more removed from the glamor and tinsel of Hollywood than if he were being reared in Danville, Ill.

"I don't want John to grow up with the wrong values," his mother said. "I'm asked all the time by various publications for stories about John and for picture layouts.

"I refuse them all. I want him to enjoy a normal childhood and grow up to be a healthy well-adjusted young man."

For eight years Kay Gable has been highly successful. But she has her own emotions to deal with too, and her eyes became a little misty at times.

"It's startling how much John looks more and more like his father," she said. Then Kay stopped talking and looked away.

Bomb Explodes, Mangling Carrier

CAB THO, South Vietnam (UPI) — A woman who screamed her hatred of Americans after an explosive charge hidden in her handbag exploded was in serious condition Saturday.

National police, who listed the woman as a Viet Cong suspect, said the explosion occurred Thursday night in a crowded street outside an American military compound, mangling her legs below the knee.

THOUSAND TIMES BETTER THAN TELESCOPES

Close-up Telecasts of Distant Planets Set by NASA Probes

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — You'll be seeing close-up telecasts of planets now visible only as fuzzy orbs through powerful telescopes under an ambitious program begun by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The program includes lauching of "compact model" spacecraft that will enable thousands of young scientists to participate in sophisticated planetary investigations.

NASA'S plans to take television pictures of three distant planets — torrid Mercury, cloudy Venus and giant Jupiter — were outlined last week by Donald P. Hearth, director of the agency's planetary program, who pointed out that Mars is the only planet thus far photographed close-up.

He said that craft to carry high-resolution cameras close to the planets are being designed by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory and the Ames Research Center, with the first launches slated in four years.

Venus and Mercury will be photographed from the same Mariner-type spacecraft to be launched in 1973, when their relative locations will give the gird a boost towards Mercury through Venus' gravitational force.

NASA and JPL scientists doubt that the cameras will be able to penetrate Venus' thick cloud cover, but the pictures are expected to give earthlings a better idea of the character of the planet's opaque shroud as the Mariner passes within 2,000 miles.

In views of Mercury from only 1,500 miles, however, the pictures are expected to give a thousand times better look at the tiny planet than is now possible from terrestial telescopes because of its closeness to the sun. The cameras, similar to those mounted on Mariners being sent past Mars this year, are expected to be able to pick up objects the size of the Capitol.

Two pioneer missions to Jupiter will go within 100,000 miles of the planet after a two-year voyage starting in 1972 and 1973, assuming that craft are able to penetrate the rocky asteroid belt. The cameras are expeced to give man a 10 times better look than before of the huge planet — 300 times larger than Earth and so active that it radiates more energy than it receives from the sun.

* * * *

THAT PIONEER study of Jupiter is a vital prelude to a proposed "grand tour" of the outer planets in the 1980s, when it is hoped to use the immense planet's influence to swing a space craft on to Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto in much the same manner as the Venus-Mercury trip.

Besides the television cameras, the planetary craft will carry various other instruments to gauge characteristics such as atmosphere and radiation belts of the planets. In some cases readings will be taken of the interplanetary space. This is particularly desirable in the case of the Jupiter mission, since the Pioneer is expected to go beyond the sun's radiation and into galectic space.

Hearth unveiled plans for economy model spacecraft that the agency plans to send into orbits about Venus and Mars starting in 1972.

The craft, sophisticated versions of the nearly two score explorers that have served well for a decade, will have scientific packages of 50 pounds or less — compared to 125 pounds for the more sophisticated Mariners of the Venus-Mercury fly-by and two orbitings of Mars in 1971. The latter program is a prelude to a Martian landing in 1973.

But, Hearth pointed out, they will be able to perform experiments not possible on the Mariners because their less complicated power equipment exudes less interference. Also, they can be launched by Thedelta rockets that are far less costly than the boosters such as the Titans and Atlas Centaurs suited for the other programs.

"These low cost missions will make it possible to involve more scientists, young researchers and graduate students in planetary research," Hearth told a House subcommittee headed by Rep. Joseph Karth, D-Minn. "This is vital if we are to maintain high scientific excellence in our future planetary program."

He pointed out that they will greatly shorten the time needed to prepare for a planetary mission and thus provide better response when required by new and unexpected data.

* * * *

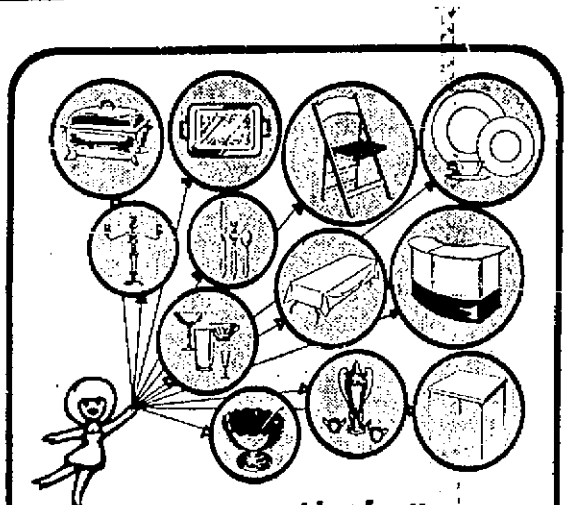

INTERPLANETARY activities during the first half of the next decade will include a joint enterprise with West Germany to send spacecraft close to the sun in 1974-75. The mission, known as Helios, will follow the placing of a Pioneer craft in solar orbit this year to monitor the sun's affect upon Earth.

The program was outlined by Hearth as NASA's planetary program received a budgetary boost after three years of reductions brought on by the demands of the costly Apollo manned lunar program and the Vietnam war.

Although the increases contained in the budget for the next fiscal year are being reviewed by the Nixon Administration, presidential science advisor Lee A. Bubridge has promised that the program into the next decade "will be a balanced one."

The expectation is that this will see a larger share of the space budget going to, in Hearth's words, "Increasing our understanding of the planet Earth, how it has evolved and how it may evolve in the future through a comparative study of the other planets."

Building Owners Fight 'Earthquake Proofing'

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM
SUNDAY, MARCH 16, 1969 SECTION B—PAGE B-1

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Long Beach building owners who charge the city is "virtually confiscating" their property through "arbitrary and merciless enforcement" of building codes are organizing this week to fight city hall.

Their target is a 1959 amendment to the city building code requiring pre-1934 structures of unreinforced masonry and brick to be "earthquake-proofed."

They will also seek relief for building owners whose structures are being condemned by the city because they haven't been brought up to code standards.

"I DON'T feel there's much danger of an earthquake shaking these buildings down," says Mrs. Louise White, a real estate broker and apartment owner who organized the group.

"Properly owners face a far more imminent disaster if they're forced to make costly, unnecessary repairs, or have their condemned buildings torn down."

Wallace for re-election to the Board of Education of the Long Beach Unified School District at the school election on Friday, April 4.

"We are pleased and proud to join with other community groups in endorsing Mrs. Wallace and Duncan and in urging all citizens interested in good schools to support them at the coming nonpartisan election," said Clarence B. Gariss, secretary of the council.

"We believe that it would be highly detrimental to the efficiency of our schools and to the best interest of the citizenry if the district were deprived of their valuable experience and complete understanding on matters affecting public education, including vocational education," the Trades Council endorsement stated.

"The local school system has earned national recognition as one of the outstanding public school districts in the United States. Mrs. Wallace and Duncan have contributed outstandingly to the development of our superior school system.

"THEY HAVE always strongly supported an effective and diverse program in vocational education as well as an excellent academic and general education program within the Long Beach Unified School District."

L.B. Dockworker Showdown Looms

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Harry Bridges' International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union stands poised today on the brink of a showdown with the Pacific maritime industry on the explosive issue of containerized cargo handling.

The dockworkers plan to make their first moves Monday, but the union is keeping the nature of its strategy secret.

Privately, it was hinted that the union might vary its tactics from port to port. There was also talk of work stoppages at selected container ships.

THE UNION appears to have ruled out a general work stoppage, although waterfront observers concede that a coastwide tieup could easily result if the Pacific Maritime Association takes predictable counteraction.

The container issue has been building up for the past few years on the West Coast. But in recent months, it reached the proportions of a major crisis as the longshoremen saw their jurisdiction on the piers being threatened by new cargo-handling methods.

TRADITIONALLY, cargo is loaded or unloaded from ships in piecemeal fashion. Containerization is changing that pattern, however. In many cases now, the cargo is packed into huge box-like vans and then placed aboard ship in a single mechanized maneuver that eliminates the need for many dockworkers.

It's estimated that 15 per cent of ship cargo is now containerized, but authorities say the figure could reach 80 per cent in the years ahead.

Thus, while the longshoremen have more work

BEACH COMBING

MALCOLM EPLEY

THE RING of the woodsman's axe is hardly a familiar sound in these urban environs. Hearing it coming from my back yard no doubt has inspired among neighbors some such question as to "what d'yu suppose that odd-ball newspaper columnist is doing now?"

Getting right to the answer, I've been chopping up a tree, and incidentally proving there's something to the old cliche that "you can take the boy out of the country, but . . ." That's the one, paraphrased, that's about to drive tv viewers crazy.

It appears I've got as much of the country in me as those danged cigarettes — maybe more.

IT ALL BEGAN when, summoned home one day, I found a tree in my swimming pool.

It was the tree that hosted a hummingbird nest, mentioned here a while back. It was about 30 feet tall, and lying in the pool it extended from side to side.

We had argued about that tree. I wouldn't sacrifice it and everybody else said I was nuts having a tree like that dropping trash in the water, with roots pushing up the pool deck and threatening to punch a hole in the plaster.

The wind had settled the argument.

MY WIFE and I surveyed the disaster "I'll get right at it," I said quietly.

Jane looked at me in amazement. "Listen," she said. "Get a tree man. You've always claimed you were inept with tools, and I've seen you operate a screwdriver with something less than brilliance. Just last week you refused to try to replace that bum light switch in the hall."

"Okay, okay," I said. "But you forget that I'm an axe man. I grew up in the Oregon woods, you know. For me, this job has meaning and I'll handle it, all right."

SHE looked dubious as I went to work. On her advice, I attached a rope to each limb before sawing it off. I then dragged it through the water and out on the decking. That continued until I had the whole tree out of the water and was ready for that exhilarating attack with our rusty old axe.

Frankly, I wasn't too confident when I decided to section off the trunk in firewood lengths with the axe instead of the saw.

But boyhood skills, learned in cutting firewood and in summer stints at a logging camp, came to my aid. By golly, I could still swing an axe, accurately enough to sever a tree trunk 8 to 10 inches in diameter.

It was nostalgic and fascinating, and I worked into the night, no doubt disturbing and puzzling neighbors. After the trunk, the limb work was easy and I'm still doing some of that.

NICE THING about it is that there won't be any need for axe work often, if ever again, around our place. I've proved my talent with one tool, and I'm determined that's it.

Now I can go back to being unhandy with screwdrivers, hammers, drills, planes, etc., thus avoiding those "odd jobs around the place" for which, in our case, neighbors and relatives are summoned.

The tree was a challenge from out of the past. It did something to me. But, I'm not letting what happened interfere with my lifetime objective of being helpless in the face of irksome and trivial tasks.

Cut up a tree — yes. But for the life of me, I can't mount a curtain rod.

RIVERSIDE — Two "musts" for the U.S. and a comment on the F-111 were outlined Saturday by the recently retired commander of the Air Defense Command at Hamilton AFB (4th Air Force).

Maj. Gen. Carroll W. McColpin said the nation must maintain a solid antimissile system, develop a fractional orbital bombardment system (FOBS) and added the F-111 was a victim of an excess in technology.

THE GENERAL is also president of the Eagles Squadrons Association, which met at the Mission Inn in their second annual convention.

These aviators flew with the RAF in England from 1940 until America's entry in World War II.

Of the 297 original officers there are 148 deceased, 90 are in the association and search is on to determine the status of the final 59.

The 30th anniversary of the Eagles's founding will find the group meeting in England.

Gen. McColpin said the F-111 "had too many missions crammed into it" and thus was "unable to prove itself 100 per cent in a specific one."

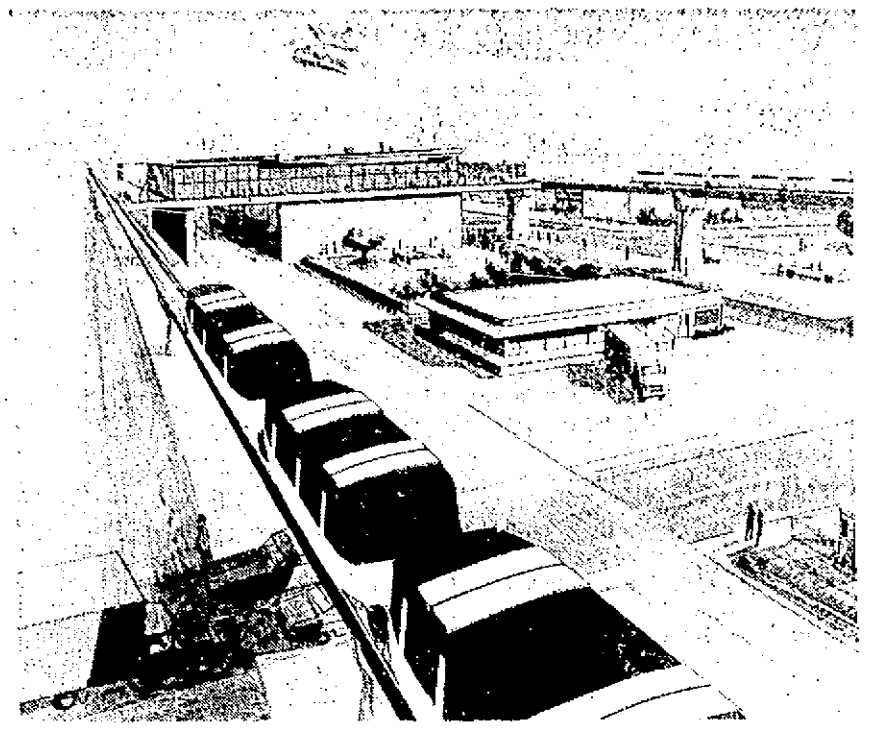

He said, though, it is going to be a good airplane.

The FOBS "must be effective from all directions. Russia has already tested this capability of launching missiles from an orbiting platform," he said.

"That makes the necessity of a good antimissile system even more evident for it will have to be good enough to handle an attack coming from any direction," the general added.

NEW TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM: UP, DOWN, AND SIDEWAYS

A system designed for industrial use may eventually provide an answer to man's rising problem of moving people . . .

Eye Cargo Mover for Moving People

By HERB SHANNON

An all-pupose transporation system developed in a Gardena laboratory and resembling a roller coaster may be the ultimate solution to the critical problem of ground congestion at major airports across the nation, including Los Angeles International.

Originally designed for bulk-loading industrial purposes, the system has been adapted to move passengers, baggage and freight around airport complexes to eliminate traffic jams and parking difficulties.

Individual cars or trains used in the Dashaveyor system are locked on dual rails for safety in high-speed operation and travel horizontally, vertically and even upside down if required. An industrial pilot model for mining operations performs a loop-the-loop for ease in unloading ore at the top.

After the pilot model was moved from the Gardena workshop to the mine at White Pine, Mich., transporation experts realized its advantages as a people-mover. Interchangeable passenger-freight car designs were added to the basic power unit and the company was awarded design contracts to install the system at the new Dallas-Ft. Worth Regional Airport in Texas and Seattle-Tacoma International Airport in Washington.

Suspended Torrance City Engineer Walter M. Nollac specifically denied Saturday having done any favors for land developer Kenneth Battrum.

City Manager Edward J. Ferraro filed the charges and suspended Nollac from his $25,000-a-year post Dec. 6. The hearings began Jan. 24 and have continued on successive Monday nights with occasional Saturday sessions.

Anderson recalled Glenn Weaver, acting city engineer, as the last prosecution witness Saturday but dismissed him and rested the city's case when Anderson and Weaver could not agree on the accuracy of an affidavit on the contents of 33 grading permit files.

In a little more than two hours, defense attorney Walter Young led his client through the basic defense testimony on the first five charges and plunged into the sixth.

On charges 1(a) and 3, Nollac denied doing any favors for Battrum with whom he had held joint ownership of a small fishing boat.

Nollac defined "favor" as meaning "doing something for someone that you would not do for someone else." He said that he would think Battrum would "have cause for complaint" if he had not been issued a grading permit when the only technicality to be completed

Long Beach building owners who charge the city is "virtually confiscating" their property through "arbitrary and merciless enforcement" of building codes are organizing this week to fight city hall.

Their target is a 1959 amendment to the city building code requiring pre-1934 structures of unreinforced masonry and brick to be "earthquake-proofed."

They will also seek relief for building owners whose structures are being condemned by the city because they haven't been brought up to code standards.

"I DON'T feel there's much danger of an earthquake shaking these buildings down," says Mrs. Louise White, a real estate broker and apartment owner who organized the group.

"Property owners face a far more imminent disaster if they're forced to make costly, unnecessary repairs, or have their condemned buildings torn down."

Impacted school funds under fire in House

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — A House committee is studying a proposal that would cost California school districts — and their taxpayers — millions of dollars.

Under study by the House Education and Labor Committee is a proposal that would change the formula for allotment of impacted funds, given to school districts with many children whose parents are employed at tax-exempt federal facilities.

THE FORMULA advanced by Rep. Albert Quie, R-Minn., proposed that children would not be counted next year whose parents work outside the county in which they live or whose income exceeds $12,000 annually. The income level cut-off would be reduced to $8,000 annually in three years. Funds saved would be diverted to districts with large public housing projects.

For school districts in California, which will receive an estimated $78 million in impacted funds this year, the effects could range from aggravating to nearly catastrophic.

It probably would have slight affect in districts where most of the funds are apportioned for the children of servicemen, since few of these attain the income levels.

But it could be severe, to the point of requiring either tax increases or reductions in educational services, in areas where much of the work force consists of highly skilled technicians working in defense facilities or in "bedroom" districts located just across a county line from a defense activity.

THEORETICALLY, under the Quie formula, such districts could lose their entitlement should the number of eligible students drop below the 3 per cent of enrollment required for most jurisdictions. And some districts derive up to 20 per cent of their revenues from the 19-year-old program.

In making his proposal, Quie ignored a plea from HEW Secretary Robert Finch that the formula remain unchanged until completion of a review being made by the Battelle Institute.

The review of the program, which certainly has many imperfections, is due late this year and hopefully will suggest alternatives that will avoid hardship on the affected districts.

Luckily, the committee is not likely to approve the formula proposed by Quie, whose largely rural district receives virtually no impacted funds.

REP. JOHN Tunney, D-Riverside, last week erased any lingering doubts that he's running hard for the Senate seat occupied by Republican Sen. George Murphy, who's expected to seek re-election next year.

Barely had Murphy voted against ratification of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty than Tunney's efficient public relations operation issued an indignent denunciation of the senator's position.

Murphy explained that he felt the pact doesn't contain enough safeguards to protect American security, but Tunney charged that the senator's vote "goes against the best interests of California, of the United States and of humanity."

Nixon takes a compromise ABM position

MR. NIXON'S decision on the antiballistic missile system will not satisfy partisans on either extreme. If accepted by Congress, it will reactivate the ABM program, with modifications and subject to periodical review.

It is the decision of a President who has found it necessary to listen to two voices: the outcries of protest from the cities and his own constant self-reminders that, as he told his press conference Friday, his first duty is to provide for the security of the United States.

HE PROPOSES to move the Sentinel away from the major cities, where some site preparation is already under way. The new locations will be chosen for maximum protection of the existing nuclear retaliatory weaponry in continental U.S. — principally 1,000 Minuteman and 54 Titan II ICBMs, plus strategic Air Force bases.

In passing, the President noted that there is no way to defend the cities against unacceptable loss of life in nuclear attacks. This is the consensus of scientific opinion, whatever the Department of Defense may say.

Again and again the President emphasized the intention to refrain from provocation, to confine the ABM project to safeguarding deterrence.

Moreover, he ruled out a fixed deployment schedule. The deployment will be reviewed annually, he said, in the light of three developing factors which cannot be evaluated now: threats from abroad, the course of peace talks and advances in ballistic missile technique.

Mr. Nixon's refusal to delay the modified project for even six months will displease Chairman J. William Fulbright of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, along with many of the 82 other senators who voted Thursday to ratify the nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

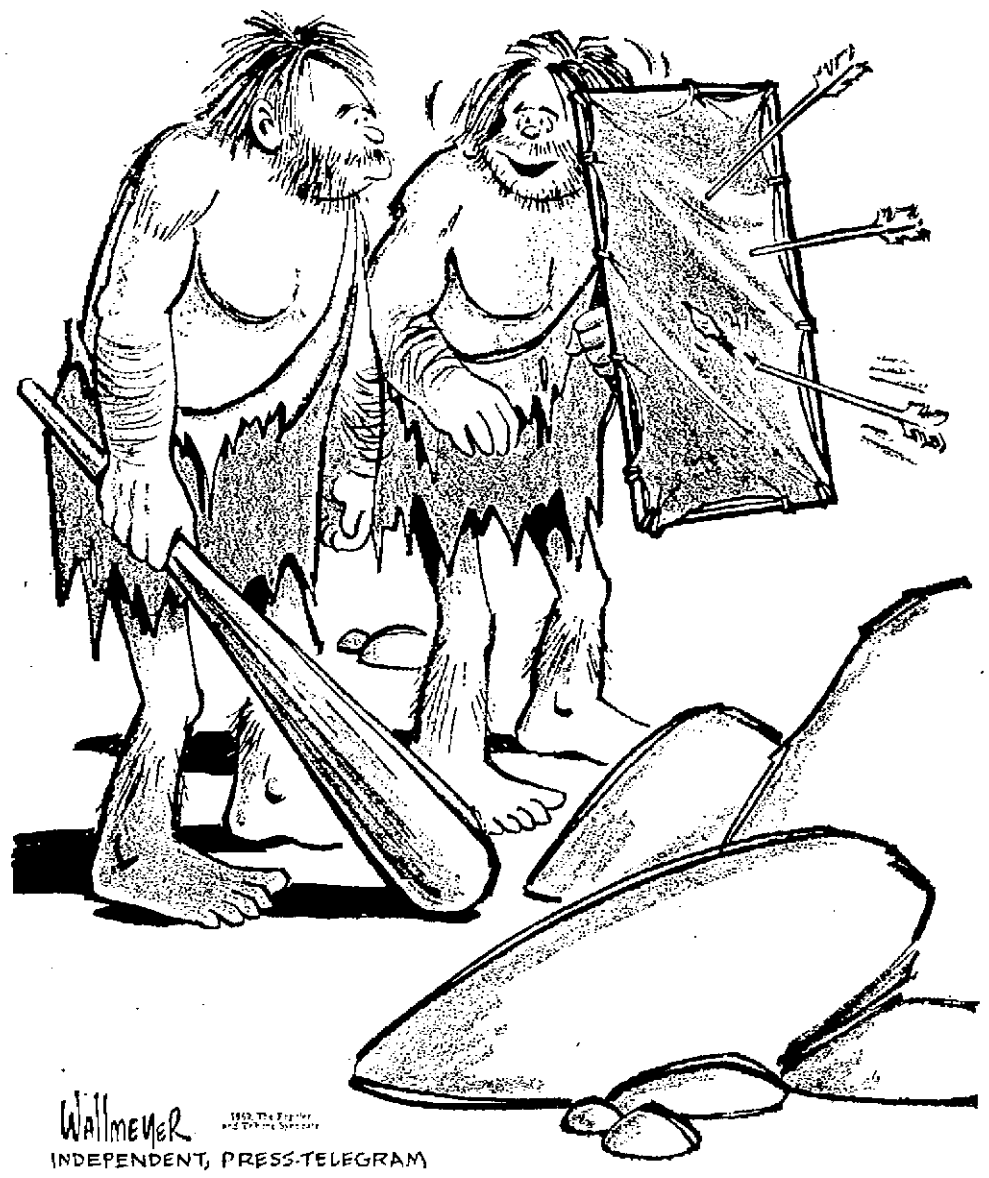

As Fulbright noted, the treaty's Article VI calls for negotiations to end the arms race. The groundwork is now being laid for such talks with the Soviet Union. Mr. Nixon expressed hope that his decision will not impede these negotiations. This was one of the risks he took in refusing to junk the ABM program.

Yet he had to overrule one faction of hawks in the Defense Department and in his own party to move away from the implicit prospect of endlessly increased nuclear warheads poised in huge centers of population.

THE PEOPLE of the principal cities can thank their own noisy objections for averting that invitation to holocaust from accident or provocation. They can also thank the President's keen sense of political feasibility at home.

The critical question during the next few months will be whether this sense extends as strongly to the politics of peacemaking. If the Soviet negotiations proceed on schedule, with good results, and if no more pressing threat appears from China, the ABM deployment could be quietly dropped. President Nixon has left such a choice open. It remains for public opinion to keep him reminded of the option and to insist that he adopt it when the national safety will permit.

'It's something new---an antimissile defense shield . . .'

Morale boost for mankind

LIKE confident professionals in any line of work, the three astronauts who spun around the earth 151 times in 10 days made the Apollo 9 mission look easy. One news report said they had more trouble getting into the helicopter, after splashdown, than at any time during a journey of more than four million miles.

But it wasn't that easy. It demanded the highest degree of courage, stamina and skill from James A. McDivitt, David R. Scott and Russell Schweickart. They carried it off in a deliberately casual way, even though at the critical point in their descent they were literally surrounded by flame.

The same precision, without the rewards of personal public acclaim, was required of hundreds of planners and skilled workers in many categories who conceived and directed the mission, designed and constructed the space craft, and thus enabled the pilots to travel in safety.

EACH OF THESE successful space flights, the latest always more complex and difficult than the one before, serves as a morale builder for us all. Most of the time we live amid bother and alarm, seeing indisputable evidence of ignorance and conflict. Then a new Apollo rises majestically as a signal that we are still capable of the highest order of imagination and teamwork.

Apollo 9 seems to prove, too, that the first manned landing on the moon is very close in time, probably before midsummer. If it follows the pattern of the space voyages thus far, it will brighten one of the planet Earth's darker eras.

That's still big money

SYLVIA PORTER, whose finance column appears in this newspaper ,has been relating the inside story behind the big pay raises oredered this year for high government officials, including the President and members of Congress.

A member of former President Johnson's Advisory Committee on Top Federal Salaries, which laid the groundwork for the increases, she naturally defends them. As a knowledgeable writer, she even makes them sound acceptable.

But we are not persuaded. In particular, we take exception to her point that the raises add up to a "minor cost" — between $25 million and $30 million a year.

THAT'S NOT hay, ma'am, even though it may seem so to one who toils in the golden canyons of Wall Street. True, it comes to only a small fraction of one per cent of the federal budget. But the budget is made up of a great number of items, many of them even smaller. And congressmen who concur in a 41 per cent increase for themselves (along with added fringe benefits) are in no position to speak plausibly for fiscal moderation in other respects.

Of course, we all admire Sylvia, a lady who more than holds her own in competition with the men in a rough field, that of keeping informed on the shenanigans in the western world's money capital. There's a good bit of country west of Manhattan, though, and the inhabitants in most of it consider $25-$30 million a year something more than small change.

Fair housing gets muscles

The city's antipoverty agency has agreed to spend $28,500 for the services of the Fair Housing Foundation in a move that could have important implications for the future of open housing in Long Beach.

The poverty agency — formally known as the Economic Opportunities Commission — signed a service contract with the foundation that will enable the private non-profit group to operate on a full-time basis with a paid director and office staff. As the foundation is now set up, it operates part time with volunteers.

THE CONTRACT will carry the foundation on an expanded basis for a year only, but both foundation and poverty officials feel it may give the organization the time it needs to secure a more permanent source of funding and possibly even persuade the city to reverse an earlier decision not to subsidize the group.

Last July, the foundation went before the City Council in a bid to be included in the city budget, but was turned down without discussion.

In its four years of existence, the foundation has quietly tried to help minority group members — mostly Negroes — find housing in otherwise all-white areas of Long Beach. Its records show that it has helped place more than 170 families.

But even as it helped its clients, the demand for its services increased. And by last year, it became clear that private contributions alone could not support an open housing effort equal to that demand. For that reason, the volunteer group started looking elsewhere for money.

In the minds of fair housing people, there was also a question of how much longer the organization "could or should attempt to function without any full-time professional staff." Moreover, it was felt that open housing in a city that prided itself on its cosmopolitan status deserved a larger civic commitment than it was receiving.

In putting the foundation's case before the council, Mrs. Shirley Blumberg said the group had many families listed with it whom it couldn't serve because of insufficient staff and funds.

"BECAUSE OF this," she declared, "we (in the foundation) have come to feel that a really effective open housing program in Long Beach can be achieved only with the public support of the city government of Long Beach.

"This requires not only the public endorsement of open housing, which you have already had the vision to give," she told the councilmen, "but also requires financial support to make real the American promise of equal opportunity."

With the poverty agency having now stepped in, the foundation has been given a boost that could put it in business on a full-time basis for good. It's still a big question mark, though.

It's also a question whether the housing group will be able to do much for minority families in the poverty bracket. Thus far, largely because low-income housing has been terribly scarce in Long Beach, the foundation has been able to help only professional and working class people.

It's been suggested that the foundation's middle-class focus, in fact, would seem to place it outside the purview of the poverty war. But antipoverty officials argue otherwise.

THEY SEE BOTH obvious and subtle correlations between housing discrimination and poverty. "Housing," said Richard Finder, program developer for the Economic Opportunities Commission, "is often a condition of poverty." Moreover, by opening up residential opportunities even for middle-income black people, poor blacks would be encouraged to seek a way out of poverty themselves, he added.

Blocked opportunities at any level, he indicated, merely lead to apathy and despair. And apathy and despair are part and parcel of the poverty syndrome.

But beyond that, Finder added, the foundation is expected to extend its services to the poor in a direct way.

He said the foundation will work closely with the city's new housing authority, which will administer the federally subsidized rent supplement and leased housing programs for the poor. And, according to Myron Blumberg, chairman of the private housing group, the foundation will also set up outpost offices in central and east Long Beach, where poor black and Mexican-American families are concentrated.

BLUMBERG SAID the foundation will make no special effort to place minority families outside the two districts. "If black people want to live in black communities, that's their free choice." But, he added, black people "should also have a free choice to live wherever their means permit them to live."

The principal objective of the organization, he took pains to explain, is not integration. "We're not integrationists. Nor are we anti-integrationists. Our objective is to eliminate existing racial (and ethnic) barriers so we have free choice in our society.

"If that objective were reached in Long Beach, the Fair Housing Foundation would cease to exist," he said.

Public funds for political campaigning?

NO NOMINEE for the presidency in the last election represented the choice of his own party.

Harry Ashmore, of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, made that statement recently at a Democratic party seminar as preface to a discussion on reform of America's electoral process.

Ashmore was joined by other panelists in a recommendation that campaigns of serious candidates be paid for at public expense.

He said the presidential race was a Madison Avenue campaign, using advertising techniques rather than a diffusion of information. It is a serious threat, Ashmore said, when the voters are abandoned to a decision on the basis of an advertised package rather than on a comparison of ideas frankly submitted by all candidates.

The Democratic party seminar, and most panelists, had electoral college reform or abolition on the tip of their tongues, but Ashmore said the reform needed to start in the nominating process. He did not seem to be optimistic about change in view of America's "monumental capacity for having a short memory" of the demonstrated failures of our electoral process.

THE ELECTORAL college, he said, is the last concern; the first is the nominating process. There are three large problems, he said:

(1) The party should be organized so that its popular vote is genuinely reflected. This was not true of either party last year.

(2) The search for campaign money is a genuine source of corruption; the only answer is to finance all campaigns from public funds.

(3) The media, TV especially, shape politics to their own end instead of being employed by politics for genuine public dialogue.

Assemblywoman Yvonne Brathwaite, another panelist, noted that some Assembly campaigns cost from $50,000 to $100,000 and asked, "Where do you get this kind of money in a poverty district?"

SHE WOULD eliminate all "snipe sheets" and posters which clutter the election year landscape and, seemingly, forever thereafter. She would eliminate campaign mailers — "how many read that stuff?"

Mrs. Brathwaite said campaigns should be run on a personal basis, door to door, in the marketplace. The money difference in campaigns should be eliminated. And finally, a statement by each candidate on his qualifications, on issues positions, should be provided the voter along with his ballot.

Congressman George E. Brown Jr. echoed Ashmore's note that at the Chicago Democratic convention "the voice of the people was almost totally disregarded."

"How did we get so mixed up?" former National Committeeman Paul Ziffren asked. People need to know what government is doing and how they can participate. A National Committee with two from each state is no longer pertinent, he said. He suggested election of committeemen from each congressional district. Because that would be unwieldy, that group should further elect two from each of 10 U.S. regions to serve on a decision making executive committee.

"TV and radio time should be available to all candidates, but none should be allowed to buy any time. Spot announcements are allright for cornflakes and detergent, but not for political issues," Ziffren said.

Nixon takes a compromise ABM position

MR. NIXON'S decision on the antiballistic missile system will not satisfy partisans on either extreme. If accepted by Congress, it will reactivate the ABM program, with modifications and subject to periodical review.

It is the decision of a President who has found it necessary to listen to two voices: the outcries of protest from the cities and his own constant self-reminders that, as he told his press conference Friday, his first duty is to provide for the security of the United States.

HE PROPOSES to move the Sentinel away from the major cities, where some site preparation is already under way. The new locations will be chosen for maximum protection of the existing nuclear retaliatory weaponry in continental U.S. — principally 1,000 Minuteman and 54 Titan II ICBMs, plus strategic Air Force bases.

In passing, the President noted that there is no way to defend the cities against unacceptable loss of life in nuclear attacks. This is the consensus of scientific opinion, whatever the Department of Defense may say.

Again and again the President emphasized the intention to refrain from provocation, to confine the ABM project to safeguarding deterrence.

Moreover, he ruled out a fixed deployment schedule. The deployment will be reviewed annually, he said, in the light of three developing factors which cannot be evaluated now: threats from abroad, the course of peace talks and advances in ballistic missile technique.

Mr. Nixon's refusal to delay the modified project for even six months will displease Chairman J. William Fulbright of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, along with many of the 82 other senators who voted Thursday to ratify the nuclear nonproliferation treaty.

As Fulbright noted, the treaty's Article VI calls for negotiations to end the arms race. The groundwork is now being laid for such talks with the Soviet Union. Mr. Nixon expressed hope that his decision will not impede these negotiations. This was one of the risks he took in refusing to junk the ABM program.

Yet he had to overrule one faction of hawks in the Defense Department and in his own party to move away from the implicit prospect of endlessly increased nuclear warheads poised in huge centers of population.

THE PEOPLE of the principal cities can thank their own noisy objections for averting that invitation to holocaust from accident or provocation. They can also thank the President's keen sense of political feasibility at home.

The critical question during the next few months will be whether this sense extends as strongly to the politics of peacemaking. If the Soviet negotiations proceed on schedule, with good results, and if no more pressing threat appears from China, the ABM deployment could be quietly dropped. President Nixon has left such a choice open. It remains for public opinion to keep him reminded of the option and to insist that he adopt it when the national safety will permit.

Morale boost for mankind

LIKE confident professionals in any line of work, the three astronauts who spun around the earth 151 times in 10 days made the Apollo 9 mission look easy. One news report said they had more trouble getting into the helicopter, after splashdown, than at any time during a journey of more than four million miles.

But it wasn't that easy. It demanded the highest degree of courage, stamina and skill from James A. McDivitt, David R. Scott and Russell Schweickart. They carried it off in a deliberately casual way, even though at the critical point in their descent they were literally surrounded by flame.

The same precision, without the rewards of personal public acclaim, was required of hundreds of planners and skilled workers in many categories who conceived and directed the mission, designed and constructed the space craft, and thus enabled the pilots to travel in safety.

EACH OF THESE successful space flights, the latest always more complex and difficult than the one before, serves as a morale builder for us all. Most of the time we live amid bother and alarm, seeing indisputable evidence of ignorance and conflict. Then a new Apollo rises majestically as a signal that we are still capable of the highest order of imagination and teamwork.

Apollo 9 seems to prove, too, that the first manned landing on the moon is very close in time, probably before midsummer. If it follows the pattern of the space voyages thus far, it will brighten one of the planet Earth's darker eras.

That's still big money

SYLVIA PORTER, whose finance column appears in this newspaper ,has been relating the inside story behind the big pay raises oredered this year for high government officials, including the President and members of Congress.

A member of former President Johnson's Advisory Committee on Top Federal Salaries, which laid the groundwork for the increases, she naturally defends them. As a knowledgeable writer, she even makes them sound acceptable.

But we are not persuaded. In particular, we take exception to her point that the raises add up to a "minor cost" — between $25 million and $30 million a year.

THAT'S NOT hay, ma'am, even though it may seem so to one who toils in the golden canyons of Wall Street. True, it comes to only a small fraction of one per cent of the federal budget. But the budget is made up of a great number of items, many of them even smaller. And congressmen who concur in a 41 per cent increase for themselves (along with added fringe benefits) are in no position to speak plausibly for fiscal moderation in other respects.

Of course, we all admire Sylvia, a lady who more than holds her own in competition with the men in a rough field, that of keeping informed on the shenanigans in the western world's money capital. There's a good bit of country west of Manhattan, though, and the inhabitants in most of it consider $25-$30 million a year something more than small change.

Impacted school funds under fire in House

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — A House committee is studying a proposal that would cost California school districts — and their taxpayers — millions of dollars.

Under study by the House Education and Labor Committee is a proposal that would change the formula for allotment of impacted funds, given to school districts with many children whose parents are employed at tax-exempt federal facilities.

THE FORMULA advanced by Rep. Albert Quie, R-Minn., proposed that children would not be counted next year whose parents work outside the county in which they live or whose income exceeds $12,000 annually. The income level cut-off would be reduced to $8,000 annually in three years. Funds saved would be diverted to districts with large public housing projects.

For school districts in California, which will receive an estimated $78 million in impacted funds this year, the effects could range from aggravating to nearly catastrophic.

It probably would have slight affect in districts where most of the funds are apportioned for the children of servicemen, since few of these attain the income levels.

BAXTER OMOHUNDRO

But it could be severe, to the point of requiring either tax increases or reductions in educational services, in areas where much of the work force consists of highly skilled technicians working in defense facilities or in "bedroom" districts located just across a county line from a defense activity.

THEORETICALLY, under the Quie formula, such districts could lose their entitlement should the number of eligible students drop below the 3 per cent of enrollment required for most jurisdictions. And some districts derive up to 20 per cent of their revenues from the 19-year-old program.

In making his proposal, Quie ignored a plea from HEW Secretary Robert Finch that the formula remain unchanged until completion of a review being made by the Battelle Institute.

The review of the program, which certainly has many imperfections, is due late this year and hopefully will suggest alternatives that will avoid hardship on the affected districts.

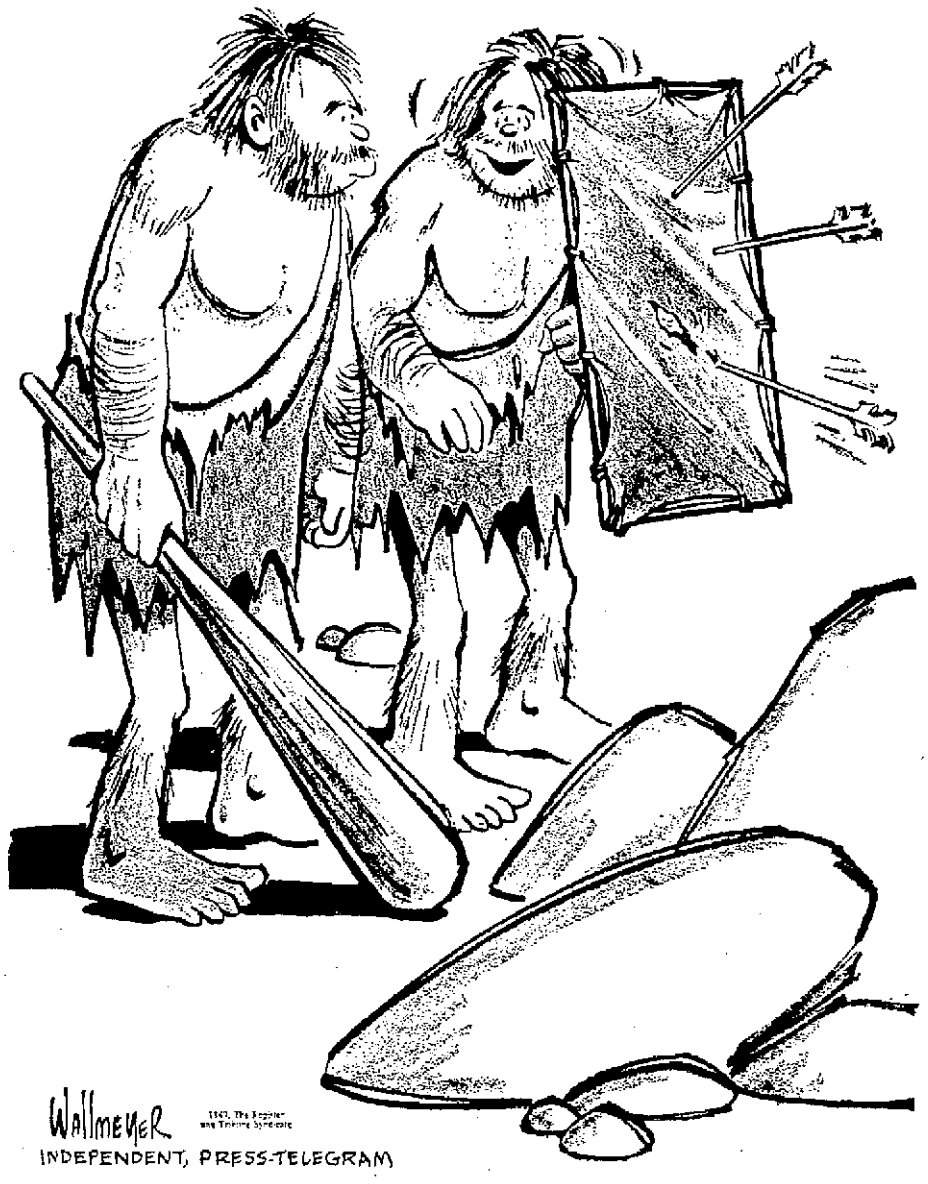

Luckily, the committee is not likely to approve the formula proposed by Quie, whose largely rural district receives virtually no impacted funds.

REP. JOHN Tunney, D-Riverside, last week erased any lingering doubts that he's running hard for the Senate seat occupied by Republican Sen. George Murphy, who's expected to seek re-election next year.

Barely had Murphy voted against ratification of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty than Tunney's efficient public relations operation issued an indignent denunciation of the senator's position.

Murphy explained that he felt the pact doesn't contain enough safeguards to protect American security, but Tunney charged that the senator's vote "goes against the best interests of California, of the United States and of humanity."

'It's something new---an antimissile defense shield . . .'

Fair housing gets muscles

The city's antipoverty agency has agreed to spend $28,500 for the services of the Fair Housing Foundation in a move that could have important implications for the future of open housing in Long Beach.

The poverty agency — formally known as the Economic Opportunities Commission — signed a service contract with the foundation that will enable the private non-profit group to operate on a full-time basis with a paid director and office staff. As the foundation is now set up, it operates part time with volunteers.

THE CONTRACT will carry the foundation on an expanded basis for a year only, but both foundation and poverty officials feel it may give the organization the time it needs to secure a more permanent source of funding and possibly even persuade the city to reverse an earlier decision not to subsidize the group.

Last July, the foundation went before the City Council in a bid to be included in the city budget, but was turned down without discussion.

In its four years of existence, the foundation has quietly tried to help minority group members — mostly Negroes — find housing in otherwise all-white areas of Long Beach. Its records show that it has helped place more than 170 families.

But even as it helped its clients, the demand for its services increased. And by last year, it became clear that private contributions alone could not support an open housing effort equal to that demand. For that reason, the volunteer group started looking elsewhere for money.

In the minds of fair housing people, there was also a question of how much longer the organization "could or should attempt to function without any full-time professional staff." Moreover, it was felt that open housing in a city that prided itself on its cosmopolitan status deserved a larger civic commitment than it was receiving.

In putting the foundation's case before the council, Mrs. Shirley Blumberg said the group had many families listed with it whom it couldn't serve because of insufficient staff and funds.

"BECAUSE OF this," she declared, "we (in the foundation) have come to feel that a really effective open housing program in Long Beach can be achieved only with the public support of the city government of Long Beach.

"This requires not only the public endorsement of open housing, which you have already had the vision to give," she told the councilmen, "but also requires financial support to make real the American promise of equal opportunity."

L. A. C. SAYS

Tax-free funds come under fire

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

UNDER THE ABOVE heading a U. S. News article tells of the changes being considered to close the income tax gap which allows foundations and individuals to escape paying any income tax on large incomes. It is in line with the congressional Ways and Means Committee working on an overhaul of our total income tax system. It tells of some 30,000 separate foundations which earn hundreds of millions of dollars annually without any tax liability. It also tells of individuals with very large incomes who pay no income taxes.

There are certainly some chiselers involved in some of these cases. But on the whole the great majority of foundations are operated for the benefit of educational and charitable institutions which probably do more for humanity than would the same amount of money going to government.

A RECENT STORY in this paper told of the testimony of John D. Rockefeller III before the House committee. He said he paid no income tax under the law—but he paid a token tax voluntarily because he felt everyone should pay something in taxes. The reason he does not have to pay an income tax is because he annually donates 90 per cent or more of his income to non-taxed charities. Most of us have understood that we could not deduct more than 30 per cent of our income for charitable purposes. But I am informed that if an individual has contributed 90 per cent of his income in income taxes and donations for eight of the preceeding 10 years he may avoid all income tax liability if the donations continue to equal 90 per cent of his income. This is the reason Mr. Rockefeller, as an individual, is not required to pay an income tax.

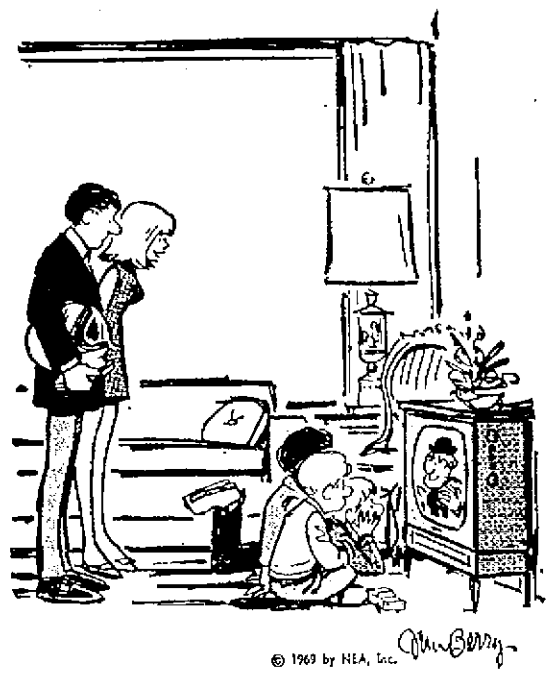

The Treasury Department reported that in 1968 some 155 persons with incomes over $200,000 a year—including 26 with incomes over a million dollars—paid no income taxes. It is assumed a large portion of these individuals earned their incomes from tax exempt municipal and other such bonds. The reason these incomes are tax exempt is because they pay a very small interest rate and are used by city and county governments for local projects. The person who gets 4 per cent on such bonds in the 77 per cent income tax bracket is receiving the equivalent of 16 per cent. But the local areas are saving money for their taxpayers because otherwise to pay for the improvements—for which the bonds are issued—the higher interest rates would have to be paid and thereby passed on to all property taxpayers.

In a recent news letter Congressman Craig Hosmer tells of some ideas being discussed in the House committee. One is that everyone would pay a flat one-third of their income in income taxes—after crediting $750 for each member of his family. He would get the $750 per person credit regardless of his income. If he earned no income a family of four would receive $3,000 a year to live on. Presumably this would be used to replace the welfare programs.

IT IS A complex problem which may come out as a reform in the system. But it would be unfortunate if the system of exempting income from municipal bonds was discarded. It would be equally unfortunate if honestly operated foundations were not permitted to continue their very wonderful charitable enterprises. Those not properly operated certainly should be corrected. But when we view the splendid activities sponsored by the Ford, Rockefeller, Carnegie and other large foundations it is probable the great majority of our people approve of tax exemption for such foundations.

As to the tax exempt municipal bonds it should be realized that while they save the investor high taxes—those bonds will be repaid 20 or more years later in the same number of dollars invested. At our present rate of inflation that could mean that money may be worth half as much as when it was invested.

A long, polite talk with Hanoi's envoy in Paris

FLORA LEWIS

PARIS — The North Vietnamese delegation here is no longer shy. Apart from official appearances, they do see foreigners, including American correspondents, without much fuss. And with as full a display of scented oriental courtesy as of firm adherence to Hanoi's stand.

Eleven months of talks in a western capital have made some difference. The North Vietnamese delegates, unlike the Viet Cong representatives who only arrived last November, show a degree of relaxed self-confidence in dealing with an American visitor.

"HOW IS your health?" the spokesman asked first, his bony, taut-skinned face opened in a widely demonstrative smile. He offered cigarettes (English), honey and nut candy (Vietnamese), tea (Chinese), and port wine (Portuguese).

"We are not hostile to the United States or the people of the United States," he said. "I am not hostile to you."

It seemed a fair beginning. There was the familiar lecture on the "war of aggression" and the sovereign "national rights of the people of Vietnam." That is part of the game, a challenge to match the host's quiet-voiced patience. Eventually, there was an opening for questions.

At my request, there was a long series of dates, places, names offered to back Hanoi's claim that President Nixon's administration has not just maintained but stiffened the U.S. war effort in Vietnam.

That part was business-like, no smiles, no peroration, except for a moment when I asked whether the B-52 raids charged in February might have been mistakes of pilots who thought themselves over Laos, where U.S. bombing has increased.

"It makes no difference. The U.S. has no right to bomb the sovereign territory of my country . . ." The harsh look again, the tense mouth.

And what would North Vietnam do if President Nixon ordered bombing in retaliation for the shelling of South Vietnamese cities?

"IF THE U.S. WANTS to find peace with respect for the fundamental rights of the Vietnamese people, we can find a correct solution. If not, we must exercise our right of self-defense."

In other words, Hanoi, like Nixon with his vague warning of "appropriate response," was holding its options open. It wasn't, at this point, about to threaten a walk-out from Paris that would foreclose future decisions. But that was never said. It took nearly 20 minutes worth of other words.

Once again came the long, familiar lecture of the conference room. It is tedious and repetitious. My mind wandered. I heard him saying something about "unconditional withdrawal of American troops" and my attention snapped back.

Had I understood quite correctly, withdrawal without any questions? Because in that case there wouldn't be anything to negotiate. The U.S. doesn't need Hanoi's permission to withdraw.

"If the U.S. withdraws, we will create conditions to facilitate it. We will even give your soldiers a red carpet and flowers."

That, I mentioned, isn't what the U.S. most wants. Was unconditional withdrawal still a precondition for real negotiating

THIS TIME he answered very carefully. "On the basis of withdrawal, we can discuss other matters." Condition and precondition were bad words for him. He avoided them.

So it went, for a full two hours. There was a lot more. What did it mean?

My impression was that he was trying to say Hanoi does want a negotiated settlement, but it is feeling its way with utmost caution. It is afraid to be considered as negotiating from weakness. But I can't prove that, though other bits and pieces seemed to support it. That's the way the official talks go too. That's one reason why it's so hard to get down to serious bargaining. As Churchill said, jaw-jaw is better than war-war, but it isn't necessarily easier.

North Korean 'defector' fools U.S. intelligence

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — There will be some red faces in the Pentagon when South Korea goes into court with one of the most bizarre spy cases to come out of the Far East. The details have been buried for two years in a secret Pentagon file, but will be revealed later this year.

On March 22, 1967, the American and North Korean truce teams met at Panmunjom for another of their intermittent battles of wits. Maj. Gen. Richard G. Ciccolella, then chief American negotiator, was listening wearily to a routine communist harangue when a note was slipped to him.

"THERE IS North Korean who wants to defect," reported the note. "Request instructions."

Ciccolella asked whether the defector was important and got back an affirmative answer. A man of action, he whispered terse orders for his subordinates to load the North Korean into a car and make a dash for freedom.

North Korean guards fired at the fleeing car.

The defector turned out to be Sukun Yi, vice chief of North Korea's Central News Agency, whose dramatic escape made him the toast of South Korea. But South Korean Intelligence, taking no one for granted, carefully reviewed an 8 mm film taken of his defection. This showed that the North Korean guards, known to be crack shots, had aimed their guns awry.

RESULT: Yi was kept under quiet surveillance.

Apparently he discovered he was being watched and made elaborate preparations to escape by assuming the identity of a friend with business in Thailand.

Disguising himself with a fake moustache, wig and spectacles, Yi gave his watchdogs the slip on January 27 and used his friend's passport to catch a plane bound for Phnom Penh, Cambodia. The South Korean agents, however, weren't fooled for long and gave chase. They intercepted him at the Hong Kong airport where Yi's plane made a stop.

Their attempt to grab Yi created a scuffle, which attracted Hong Kong police. They held him for two days of questioning, then turned him loose. But unfortunately for the double agent, his plane to Phnom Penh made another stop in Saigon.

The anti-communist South Vietnamese cheerfully turned him over to the South Koreans, who whisked him back to Seoul for trial. The expected testimony, on top of the Pueblo affair, will disclose that Americans have been humiliated again by the North Koreans.

A personal insult?

EDITOR:

It was with a great sigh of relief that I read Mr. Harris' keenly insighted article on the supposition that the "Public Encourages Crime."

For now all seriously concerned citizens, awake to the raising tide of crime, can know the reason behind this nationwide scandle.

For you see, according to the self-esteemed Mr. Harris, it seems that I am responsible for this terrible up-surge in criminal behavior. This, I might hastenly add, is only because I fall into the astucious category of "citizen."

Consequently:

I, am "psychologically part of the whole criminal process."

I, harbor feelings of "grudging admiration and unconscientious envy" for crime and its perpetrators.

I, am then "forced to punish" myself by "imposing harsh penalities" upon these hapless victims of society.

The naive Mr. Harris, in his typical pseudo-intellectual and slanted style, attempts to document his injudicious statements with a reference to a supposedly incontestable dictum about stiff penalties not deterring the apparently heinous crime of "bad check writing," thus attempting to use this bit of trivia to encompass the entire scope of criminal psychology, (both petty and felonious yet).

In ending, Mr. Harris then draws the incapacious conclusion that we shouldn't bother to punish anyone for anything because it doesn't do any good anyway.

I, for one, refuse to be chastised and de-graded by the omnisicent Mr. Harris and his inept conclusions. I, feel his article was an affront to my intelligence and a personal insult to my dignity.

The noisy bells

EDITOR:

As a property owner and a taxpayer in the eighth district for eighteen years, I would like to register a complaint about an unbearable noise.

The carillons on Community Savings and Loan at 3901 Atlantic Avenue are totally lacking in quality and good taste. According to the manager, Mr. Swetech, the carillons were installed on a temporary basis December 16, 1968. Now, we are told that the carillons will be a permanent part of our daily lives.

How any one organization can take upon themselves to broadcast trite selections such as "The Good Old Summertime," on the coldest day of the year and "The Old Gray Mare," to a sophisticated neighborhood is beyond my reasoning. What right does Community Savings have to fill the air with the din of artificial bells?

As a private citizen I am sure that I would not be permitted to install enormous speakers on top of my home and broadcast my choice of musical selections indiscriminately to the neighborhood.

L. A. C. SAYS

Tax-free funds come under fire

By L. A. COLLINS Sr.

UNDER THE ABOVE heading a U. S. News article tells of the changes being considered to close the income tax gap which allows foundations and individuals to escape paying any income tax on large incomes. It is in line with the congressional Ways and Means Committee working on an overhaul of our total income tax system. It tells of some 30,000 separate foundations which earn hundreds of millions of dollars annually without any tax liability. It also tells of individuals with very large incomes who pay no income taxes.

There are certainly some chiselers involved in some of these cases. But on the whole the great majority of foundations are operated for the benefit of educational and charitable institutions which probably do more for humanity than would the same amount of money going to government.

A RECENT STORY in this paper told of the testimony of John D. Rockefeller III before the House committee. He said he paid no income tax under the law—but he paid a token tax voluntarily because he felt everyone should pay something in taxes. The reason he does not have to pay an income tax is because he annually donates 90 per cent or more of his income to non-taxed charities. Most of us have understood that we could not deduct more than 30 per cent of our income for charitable purposes. But I am informed that if an individual has contributed 90 per cent of his income in income taxes and donations for eight of the preceeding 10 years he may avoid all income tax liability if the donations continue to equal 90 per cent of his income. This is the reason Mr. Rockefeller, as an individual, is not required to pay an income tax.

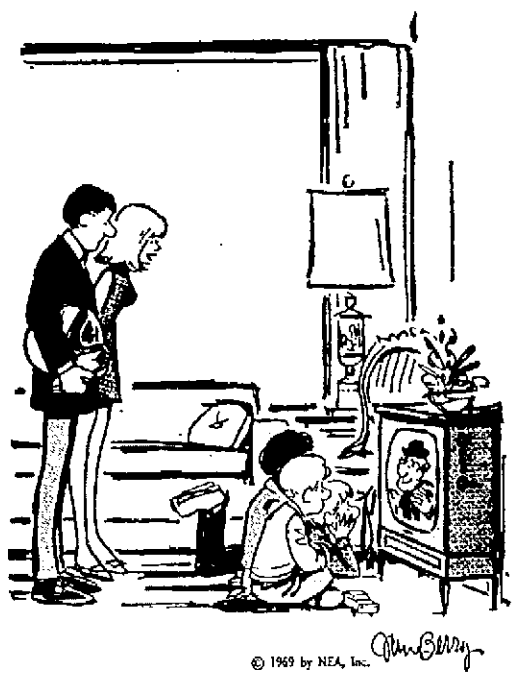

The Treasury Department reported that in 1968 some 155 persons with incomes over $200,000 a year—including 26 with incomes over a million dollars—paid no income taxes. It is assumed a large portion of these individuals earned their incomes from tax exempt municipal and other such bonds. The reason these incomes are tax exempt is because they pay a very small interest rate and are used by city and county governments for local projects. The person who gets 4 per cent on such bonds in the 77 per cent income tax bracket is receiving the equivalent of 16 per cent. But the local areas are saving money for their taxpayers because otherwise to pay for the improvements—for which the bonds are issued—the higher interest rates would have to be paid and thereby passed on to all property taxpayers.

In a recent news letter Congressman Craig Hosmer tells of some ideas being discussed in the House committee. One is that everyone would pay a flat one-third of their income in income taxes—after crediting $750 for each member of his family. He would get the $750 per person credit regardless of his income. If he earned no income a family of four would receive $3,000 a year to live on. Presumably this would be used to replace the welfare programs.

IT IS A complex problem which may come out as a reform in the system. But it would be unfortunate if the system of exempting income from municipal bonds was discarded. It would be equally unfortunate if honestly operated foundations were not permitted to continue their very wonderful charitable enterprises. Those not properly operated certainly should be corrected. But when we view the splendid activities sponsored by the Ford, Rockefeller, Carnegie and other large foundations it is probable the great majority of our people approve of tax exemption for such foundations.

As to the tax exempt municipal bonds it should be realized that while they save the investor high taxes—those bonds will be repaid 20 or more years later in the same number of dollars invested. At our present rate of inflation that could mean that money may be worth half as much as when it was invested.

A long, polite talk with Hanoi's envoy in Paris

FLORA LEWIS

PARIS — The North Vietnamese delegation here is no longer shy. Apart from official appearances, they do see foreigners, including American correspondents, without much fuss. And with as full a display of scented oriental courtesy as of firm adherence to Hanoi's stand.

Eleven months of talks in a western capital have made some difference. The North Vietnamese delegates, unlike the Viet Cong representatives who only arrived last November, show a degree of relaxed self-confidence in dealing with an American visitor.

"HOW IS your health?" the spokesman asked first, his bony, taut-skinned face opened in a widely demonstrative smile. He offered cigarettes (English), honey and nut candy (Vietnamese), tea (Chinese), and port wine (Portuguese).

"We are not hostile to the United States or the people of the United States," he said. "I am not hostile to you."

It seemed a fair beginning. There was the familiar lecture on the "war of aggression" and the sovereign "national rights of the people of Vietnam." That is part of the game, a challenge to match the host's quiet-voiced patience. Eventually, there was an opening for questions.

At my request, there was a long series of dates, places, names offered to back Hanoi's claim that President Nixon's administration has not just maintained but stiffened the U.S. war effort in Vietnam.

That part was business-like, no smiles, no peroration, except for a moment when I asked whether the B-52 raids charged in February might have been mistakes of pilots who thought themselves over Laos, where U.S. bombing has increased.

"It makes no difference. The U.S. has no right to bomb the sovereign territory of my country . . ." The harsh look again, the tense mouth.

And what would North Vietnam do if President Nixon ordered bombing in retaliation for the shelling of South Vietnamese cities?

"IF THE U.S. WANTS to find peace with respect for the fundamental rights of the Vietnamese people, we can find a correct solution. If not, we must exercise our right of self-defense."

In other words, Hanoi, like Nixon with his vague warning of "appropriate response," was holding its options open. It wasn't, at this point, about to threaten a walk-out from Paris that would foreclose future decisions. But that was never said. It took nearly 20 minutes worth of other words.

Once again came the long, familiar lecture of the conference room. It is tedious and repetitious. My mind wandered. I heard him saying something about "unconditional withdrawal of American troops" and my attention snapped back.

Had I understood quite correctly, withdrawal without any questions? Because in that case there wouldn't be anything to negotiate. The U.S. doesn't need Hanoi's permission to withdraw.

"If the U.S. withdraws, we will create conditions to facilitate it. We will even give your soldiers a red carpet and flowers."

That, I mentioned, isn't what the U.S. most wants. Was unconditional withdrawal still a precondition for real negotiating

THIS TIME he answered very carefully. "On the basis of withdrawal, we can discuss other matters." Condition and precondition were bad words for him. He avoided them.

So it went, for a full two hours. There was a lot more. What did it mean?

My impression was that he was trying to say Hanoi does want a negotiated settlement, but it is feeling its way with utmost caution. It is afraid to be considered as negotiating from weakness. But I can't prove that, though other bits and pieces seemed to support it. That's the way the official talks go too. That's one reason why it's so hard to get down to serious bargaining. As Churchill said, jaw-jaw is better than war-war, but it isn't necessarily easier.

North Korean 'defector' fools U.S. intelligence

DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — There will be some red faces in the Pentagon when South Korea goes into court with one of the most bizarre spy cases to come out of the Far East. The details have been buried for two years in a secret Pentagon file, but will be revealed later this year.

On March 22, 1967, the American and North Korean truce teams met at Panmunjom for another of their intermittent battles of wits. Maj. Gen. Richard G. Ciccolella, then chief American negotiator, was listening wearily to a routine communist harangue when a note was slipped to him.

"THERE IS North Korean who wants to defect," reported the note. "Request instructions."

Ciccolella asked whether the defector was important and got back an affirmative answer. A man of action, he whispered terse orders for his subordinates to load the North Korean into a car and make a dash for freedom.

North Korean guards fired at the fleeing car.

The defector turned out to be Sukun Yi, vice chief of North Korea's Central News Agency, whose dramatic escape made him the toast of South Korea. But South Korean Intelligence, taking no one for granted, carefully reviewed an 8 mm film taken of his defection. This showed that the North Korean guards, known to be crack shots, had aimed their guns awry.

RESULT: Yi was kept under quiet surveillance.

Apparently he discovered he was being watched and made elaborate preparations to escape by assuming the identity of a friend with business in Thailand.

Disguising himself with a fake moustache, wig and spectacles, Yi gave his watchdogs the slip on January 27 and used his friend's passport to catch a plane bound for Phnom Penh, Cambodia. The South Korean agents, however, weren't fooled for long and gave chase. They intercepted him at the Hong Kong airport where Yi's plane made a stop.

Their attempt to grab Yi created a scuffle, which attracted Hong Kong police. They held him for two days of questioning, then turned him loose. But unfortunately for the double agent, his plane to Phnom Penh made another stop in Saigon.

The anti-communist South Vietnamese cheerfully turned him over to the South Koreans, who whisked him back to Seoul for trial. The expected testimony, on top of the Pueblo affair, will disclose that Americans have been humiliated again by the North Koreans.

OPEN FORUM

A personal insult?

EDITOR:

It was with a great sigh of relief that I read Mr. Harris' keenly insighted article on the supposition that the "Public Encourages Crime."

For now all seriously concerned citizens, awake to the raising tide of crime, can know the reason behind this nationwide scandle.

For you see, according to the self-esteemed Mr. Harris, it seems that I am responsible for this terrible up-surge in criminal behavior. This, I might hastenly add, is only because I fall into the astucious category of "citizen."

Consequently:

I, am "psychologically part of the whole criminal process."

I, harbor feelings of "grudging admiration and unconscientious envy" for crime and its perpetrators.

I, am then "forced to punish" myself by "imposing harsh penalities" upon these hapless victims of society.

The naive Mr. Harris, in his typical pseudo-intellectual and slanted style, attempts to document his injudicious statements with a reference to a supposedly incontestable dictum about stiff penalties not deterring the apparently heinous crime of "bad check writing," thus attempting to use this bit of trivia to encompass the entire scope of criminal psychology, (both petty and felonious yet).

In ending, Mr. Harris then draws the incapacious conclusion that we shouldn't bother to punish anyone for anything because it doesn't do any good anyway.

I, for one, refuse to be chastised and de-graded by the omnisicent Mr. Harris and his inept conclusions. I, feel his article was an affront to my intelligence and a personal insult to my dignity.

Long Beach BOB HOFFMAN

The noisy bells

EDITOR:

As a property owner and a taxpayer in the eighth district for eighteen years, I would like to register a complaint about an unbearable noise.

The carillons on Community Savings and Loan at 3901 Atlantic Avenue are totally lacking in quality and good taste. According to the manager, Mr. Swetech, the carillons were installed on a temporary basis December 16, 1968. Now, we are told that the carillons will be a permanent part of our daily lives.

How any one organization can take upon themselves to broadcast trite selections such as "The Good Old Summertime," on the coldest day of the year and "The Old Gray Mare," to a sophisticated neighborhood is beyond my reasoning. What right does Community Savings have to fill the air with the din of artificial bells?

As a private citizen I am sure that I would not be permitted to install enormous speakers on top of my home and broadcast my choice of musical selections indiscriminately to the neighborhood.

TRANSIT

A proposal to install the system at Los Angeles International is under consideration. Because it also has the capability to be adapted further for mass rapid transit, the Dashaveyor system is being studied by the city planners of Pomona, and Anaheim, as well as Nassau County, N.Y.

Designer Stanley A. Dashew, who heads the manufacturing firm now headquartered in Venice, claims the system can be used for elevated, surface or underground transportation.

Dashew, who came out of retirement for the third time after separate careers in designing and manufacturing business machines and marine terminal equipment, also emphasizes automation as a feature of the transit system.

A special control system operates the working model according to demand without a computer. Simplified mechanical devices automatically control traffic, clean the cars, inspect them while in motion and shunt them to a maintenance shed if necessary.

IF A DEFECTIVE car is removed for repairs, the system automatically replaces it with one in working order to maintain capacity.

Dashew has been joined in the transit system venture by a blue-ribbon panel of executives, including Adm. Arthur W. Radford (USN-Ret.), former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Robert Anderson, former Secretary of the Treasury in the Eisenhower administration.

TOAST TO THESPIANS

Council members gathered in a special 40th anniversary salute to the theatrical group.

NOLLAC HEARING

was the physical presence of a surety bond.

On charges 1(b) and 4, that Nollac allowed a subdivider to begin grading without a permit, he said that was the result of failure to issue the permit on the part of Ray Saukkola.

Saukkola was then a clerk in the engineering department, but is now working in the city attorney's office and has served the function of Anderson's law clerk during the hearing.

ON CHARGES 1(c) and 5, that Nollac "improperly" relieved a land developer of 90 per cent compaction requirements on portions of the yard areas of residential lots, Nollac testified that city ordinances give him and him alone the authority to determine if the requirements are a hardship.

Nollac cited a number of factors, including excess moisture content, high interest charges, the unlikelihood of additions to the large homes being built on the lots and six months of experimentation in an attempt to achieve the 90 per cent requirement—as indications of hardship on the builder.

He said there are instances of cracking in the foundations of structures in the portions of the lots where the 90 per cent requirement was met as well as where it was not fully achieved.

"THAT IS understandable with this type of soil," Nollac said. "I live in the area and I know it can and will happen. My neighbors homes have experienced some cracking and mine has done the same thing."

On charge five, that Nollac testified falsely at earlier Civil Service Commission hearings in which he was cleared of misconduct in joint ownership of the boat with Battrum, Nollac said he paid his proper share of all mooring fees even though only $75 was paid by check during a six month period.

During that time his full share would have been $225. As offsetting contributions, Nollac cited some $400 worth of repairs and improvements to the craft.

PROPERTY

owners met at Wilson High School Friday night to map initial plans against the city, which has stepped up inspections of buildings constructed before the distrous 1933 earthquake that leveled parts of Long Beach.

At the meeting, city officials explained that an ordinance was passed after the earthquake, requiring walls, ceilings and floors to be more heavily reinforced or "earthquake-proofed."

BUT IT WAS only in 1959, they said, that the building code was amended to require pre-1934 buildings to be brought up to modern standards.

City officials say they fear an earthquake of greater magnitude than the 1933 quake could collapse many of the older buildings, resulting in great loss of life or injury.

Thus, particularly in the last year, building inspectors have been taking a closer look at older buildings and ordering owners to have them reinforced or torn down.

They've also cited other hazards such as doors which swing inwards, frayed electrical wiring, lack of fireproofing, poor plumbing or dangerous stairways.

Mrs. White, who said many apartment owners have retained attorneys and structural engineers to aid them, said repairs the city has ordered would cost building owners millions of dollars.

"Most of these people are small apartment house or commercial building owners, and just can't afford it," she says. "When these buildings were built, they met the city code. The least the city could do would be to aid us financially, or give us more time, in making the changes."

She charged there's no guarantee that after required changes are made — at severe expense to owners — the city man pass stiffer ordinances and require more changes.

AT LBCC THEATER

'Dad' Staging Exemplary

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

"Oh, Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling so Sad" is its title — and let's pause briefly for breath.

This short vehicle with the long name is Long Beach City College theater arts department's current offering, being done rather intimately on a stage within the main auditorium stage.

With but one immediately fixable exception, it is an exemplary piece of work.

The single basic set — depicting a luxury suite in a Caribbean Island hotel — is tastefully opulent. Special effects coming into full play late in the show function most admirably.

Were I to fault the total effort it would be in somewhat erratic voice projections by an otherwise able cast. On occasion I found myself straining somewhat to catch a line here or there. This situation, undoubtedly, has by now been corrected.

As to the Arthur Kopits vehicle itself: Its classification must depend largely on the individual viewer's age.

Those who are slightly beyond the exuberance of youth may see it as a surrealistic updating of the ancient Oedipus legend. Certainly the "silver cord" binding young Jonathan to his black-widowish mother, Madame Rosepettle, has been transformed through years of his involuntary servitude into something more resembling a silver chain.

Youngsters, on the other hand, could well consider "Dad" to be a modern, allegorical "black comedy" illustrating age's alleged tryranny over youth. This is a valid point-of-view, I suspect, since Jonathan's brief rebellion against Mama inevitably is crushed.

I hesitate to discuss the plotline in any detail since, as indicated, I'm not precisely certain what the playwright is saying. And, more importantly, such delineation weakens for first-time viewers the rather carefully created suspense.

Suffice it to say that in the space of three scenes comprising the whole, Madame R. and Jonathan check into the hotel, browbeating bellboys who must lug up a full-size coffin, assorted collections and a flesh-eating piranha fish.

Characterizations are carefully drawn, with an ominous, brooding mood set for a coming conflict involving mamma, son and a beautiful babysitter. There is a somber-funny climax that shouldn't be missed.

NOLLAC HEARING

was the physical presence of a surety bond.

On charges 1(b) and 4, that Nollac allowed a subdivider to begin grading without a permit, he said that was the result of failure to issue the permit on the part of Ray Saukkola.

Saukkola was then a clerk in the engineering department, but is now working in the city attorney's office and has served the function of Anderson's law clerk during the hearing.

ON CHARGES 1(c) and 5, that Nollac "improperly" relieved a land developer of 90 per cent compaction requirements on portions of the yard areas of residential lots, Nollac testified that city ordinances give him and him alone the authority to determine if the requirements are a hardship.

Nollac cited a number of factors, including excess moisture content, high interest charges, the unlikelihood of additions to the large homes being built on the lots and six months of experimentation in an attempt to achieve the 90 per cent requirement—as indications of hardship on the builder.

He said there are instances of cracking in the foundations of structures in the portions of the lots where the 90 per cent requirement was met as well as where it was not fully achieved.

"THAT IS understandable with this type of soil," Nollac said. "I live in the area and I know it can and will happen. My neighbors homes have experienced some cracking and mine has done the same thing."

On charge five, that Nollac testified falsely at earlier Civil Service Commission hearings in which he was cleared of misconduct in joint ownership of the boat with Battrum, Nollac said he paid his proper share of all mooring fees even though only $75 was paid by check during a six month period.

During that time his full share would have been $225. As offsetting contributions, Nollac cited some $400 worth of repairs and improvements to the craft.

owners met at Wilson High School Friday night to map initial plans against the city, which has stepped up inspections of buildings constructed before the distrous 1933 earthquake that leveled parts of Long Beach.

At the meeting, city officials explained that an ordinance was passed after the earthquake, requiring walls, ceilings and floors to be more heavily reinforced or "earthquake-proofed."

BUT IT WAS only in 1959, they said, that the building code was amended to require pre-1934 buildings to be brought up to modern standards.

City officials say they fear an earthquake of greater magnitude than the 1933 quake could collapse many of the older buildings, resulting in great loss of life or injury.

Thus, particularly in the last year, building inspectors have been taking a closer look at older buildings and ordering owners to have them reinforced or torn down.

They've also cited other hazards such as doors which swing inwards, frayed electrical wiring, lack of fireproofing, poor plumbing or dangerous stairways.

Mrs. White, who said many apartment owners have retained attorneys and structural engineers to aid them, said repairs the city has ordered would cost building owners millions of dollars.

"Most of these people are small apartment house or commercial building owners, and just can't afford it," she says. "When these buildings were built, they met the city code. The least the city could do would be to aid us financially, or give us more time, in making the changes."

She charged there's no guarantee that after required changes are made — at severe expense to owners — the city man pass stiffer ordinances and require more changes.

TRANSIT

A proposal to install the system at Los Angeles International is under consideration. Because it also has the capability to be adapted further for mass rapid transit, the Dashaveyor system is being studied by the city planners of Pomona, and Anaheim, as well as Nassau County, N.Y.

Designer Stanley A. Dashew, who heads the manufacturing firm now headquartered in Venice, claims the system can be used for elevated, surface or underground transportation.

Dashew, who came out of retirement for the third time after separate careers in designing and manufacturing business machines and marine terminal equipment, also emphasizes automation as a feature of the transit system.

A special control system operates the working model according to demand without a computer. Simplified mechanical devices automatically control traffic, clean the cars, inspect them while in motion and shunt them to a maintenance shed if necessary.

IF A DEFECTIVE car is removed for repairs, the system automatically replaces it with one in working order to maintain capacity.

Dashew has been joined in the transit system venture by a blue-ribbon panel of executives, including Adm. Arthur W. Radford (USN-Ret.), former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Robert Anderson, former Secretary of the Treasury in the Eisenhower administration.

AT LBCC THEATER

'Dad' Staging Exemplary

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic

"Oh, Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling so Sad" is its title — and let's pause briefly for breath.

This short vehicle with the long name is Long Beach City College theater arts department's current offering, being done rather intimately on a stage within the main auditorium stage.

With but one immediately fixable exception, it is an exemplary piece of work.

The single basic set — depicting a luxury suite in a Caribbean Island hotel — is tastefully opulent. Special effects coming into full play late in the show function most admirably.

Were I to fault the total effort it would be in somewhat erratic voice projections by an otherwise able cast. On occasion I found myself straining somewhat to catch a line here or there. This situation, undoubtedly, has by now been corrected.

As to the Arthur Kopits vehicle itself: Its classification must depend largely on the individual viewer's age.

Those who are slightly beyond the exuberance of youth may see it as a surrealistic updating of the ancient Oedipus legend. Certainly the "silver cord" binding young Jonathan to his black-widowish mother, Madame Rosepettle, has been transformed through years of his involuntary servitude into something more resembling a silver chain.

Youngsters, on the other hand, could well consider "Dad" to be a modern, allegorical "black comedy" illustrating age's alleged tryranny over youth. This is a valid point-of-view, I suspect, since Jonathan's brief rebellion against Mama inevitably is crushed.

Final performances Thursday through March 23, 8:30 p.m., LBCC auditorium, 4901 Carson Ave.

I hesitate to discuss the plotline in any detail since, as indicated, I'm not precisely certain what the playwright is saying. And, more importantly, such delineation weakens for first-time viewers the rather carefully created suspense.

Suffice it to say that in the space of three scenes comprising the whole, Madame R. and Jonathan check into the hotel, browbeating bellboys who must lug up a full-size coffin, assorted collections and a flesh-eating piranha fish.

Characterizations are carefully drawn, with an ominous, brooding mood set for a coming conflict involving mamma, son and a beautiful babysitter. There is a somber-funny climax that shouldn't be missed.

PARAMOUNT JAYCEES TO STAGE PLAY

The Paramount Jay-Cees and Jay-C-Ettes will present "Around the World in Sixty Minutes," a variety show, March 28 at 8:30 p.m. at the Paramount Junior High School Auditorium.

Banned Rock Music Group Sues to Appear in Ohio City

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The local promoters of a concert by "The Doods," a rock music group, filed a $1.2 million damage suit Saturday against Mary Eugene Ruehlmann, City Safety Director Henry Sandman, and the three members of the Music Hall Association.

The suit, filed in U.S. district court, sought an injunction to force the association to permit the concert, scheduled in Music Hall March 30.

The association had refused the group a permit for use of the city-owned Music Hall because of an allegedly obscene performance by "The Doors" in Miami, Fla., this month. The action by the association was unanimously approved by the city council Wednesday.

The promoters, Squack Productions and Belkin Productions, Inc., asked $20,000 in actual damages and $1 million in punitive damages.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

Dangerfield—'Don't Get No Respect'

NEW YORK — "I don't get no respect," is the catchphrase that comedian Rodney Dangerfield happened onto, but he's right . . . he don't get no respect.

We met in Gallagher's and immediately the barmen started slamming in the ice for the night so we couldn't hear. The former Jack Roy, who gave up being a paint salesman to go into comedianing at 43, incurring a $20,000 deficit at the same time, shrugged it off.

"That's me. I don't get no respect," Rodney said. "I took my daughter to Central Park and helped her on and off the merry-go-round. One of my old friends sees me and says, 'Are you all right? Is this a side job for you?' One night I'm leaving the Living Room feeling very proud of being the star there. A guy in a bagel truck says, 'Get in, Rodney, I'll give you a lift to the subway.'"

One reason, he supposes, that he don't get no respect, is that he's a Jewish comedian.

"The Jewish comedian is always the last one to get the girl. First the Italian singer gets her, then the Negro drummer, then the Puerto Rican bongo player, then the Polish garbage man, then when she's broke and depressed and old, she comes to the Jewish comedian.

"Little things get me — pressures," Rodney explained.

"I GO INTO a gas station to go to the men's room. The door is locked in the men's room. They tell me to go into the front and get the key. The cash register is open, the safe is open, but the men's room is locked. Pressures, pressures. When I walk into a diner, it's always time to mop the place. Why do they always mop it when I come in?"

Just then Rodney got a call. He was directed to a fake phone in an icebox at Gallagher's which they use as a practical joke for visitors. "I don't get no respect," he said.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Jim Mulholland thinks his girl friend's taking advantage of him. "I invited her to dinner and a show — and she asked if she could bring a date."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Betting is like liquor. You can make it illegal, but you can't make it unpopular. — Arthur Baer.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Everything is relative. A minute is a short moment, unless you're holding your breath."

EARL'S PEARLS: A man grumbled about his wife's cooking: "When she wants to punish the kids she sends them to bed with dinner."

MGM boss Bo Polk — who resembles Charlton Heston — heard of the fan who told Jeff Chandler he liked him in "Ben-Hur." Chandler explained he wasn't in "Ben-Hur." "Well," said the fan angrily, "if you ain't Burt Lancaster, then who the hell are you?" That's earl, brother.

We met in Gallagher's and immediately the barmen started slamming in the ice for the night so we couldn't hear. The former Jack Roy, who gave up being a paint salesman to go into comedianing at 43, incurring a $20,000 deficit at the same time, shrugged it off.

"That's me, I don't get no respect," Rodney said. "I took my daughter to Central Park and helped her on and off the merry-go-round. One of my old friends sees me and says, 'Are you all right? Is this a side job for you?' One night I'm leaving the Living Room feeling very proud of being the star there. A guy in a bagel truck says, 'Get in, Rodney, I'll give you a lift to the subway.'"

One reason, he supposes, that he don't get no respect, is that he's a Jewish comedian.

"The Jewish comedian is always the last one to get the girl. First the Italian singer gets her, then the Negro drummer, then the Puerto Rican bongo player, then the Polish garbage man, then when she's broke and depressed and old, she comes to the Jewish comedian.

"Little things get me — pressures," Rodney explained.

* * * *

"I GO INTO a gas station to go to the men's room. The door is locked in the men's room. They tell me to go into the front and get the key. The cash register is open, the safe is open, but the men's room is locked. Pressures, pressures. When I walk into a diner, it's always time to mop the place. Why do they always mop it when I come in?"

Just then Rodney got a call. He was directed to a fake phone in an icebox at Gallagher's which they use as a practical joke for visitors. "I don't get no respect," he said.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Jim Mulholland thinks his girl friend's taking advantage of him. "I invited her to dinner and a show — and she asked if she could bring a date."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Betting is like liquor. You can make it illegal, but you can't make it unpopular. — Arthur Baer.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Everything is relative. A minute is a short moment, unless you're holding your breath."

EARL'S PEARLS: A man grumbled about his wife's cooking: "When she wants to punish the kids she sends them to bed with dinner."

MGM boss Bo Polk — who resembles Charlton Heston — heard of the fan who told Jeff Chandler he liked him in "Ben-Hur." Chandler explained he wasn't in "Ben-Hur." "Well," said the fan angrily, "if you ain't Burt Lancaster, then who the hell are you?" That's earl, brother.

Banned Rock Music Group Sues to Appear in Ohio City

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The local promoters of a concert by "The Doods," a rock music group, filed a $1.2 million damage suit Saturday against Mary Eugene Ruehlmann, City Safety Director Henry Sandman, and the three members of the Music Hall Association.

The suit, filed in U.S. district court, sought an injunction to force the association to permit the concert, scheduled in Music Hall March 30.

The association had refused the group a permit for use of the city-owned Music Hall because of an allegedly obscene performance by "The Doors" in Miami, Fla., this month. The action by the association was unanimously approved by the city council Wednesday.

The promoters, Squack Productions and Belkin Productions, Inc., asked $20,000 in actual damages and $1 million in punitive damages.

SON'S SURVIVAL CHANCES SLIM

Parents Seek Hit-and-Run Driver

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

A distraught mother and father, showing the strain of countless hours at the bedside of their coma-ridden son, today appealed for help in finding the hit-and-run driver responsible for his massive head injuries.

On Jan. 27 at 9:25 p.m., John L. "Joru" Ruffins III, 21, and a companion, Joyce F. Sayrick, 31, of Dana Point, were struck by an auto and knocked from his motorcycle at the corner of Orange Ave. and 21st St.

Miss Sayrick, who is recuperating at her mother's home at Big Bear Lake, can't recall the accident.

JORU HASN'T regained consciousness. Doctors at Memorial Hospital say he has a two per cent chance of living — as a human vegetable. He has one-half of one per cent chance of becoming a functional human being.

Police have spent many hours trying to find the driver who backed up and fled the scene. They are stuck and have been unable to find a single witness who can or will tell them how many persons were in the auto or even give them the haziest description of the driver or other persons who were in the vehicle.

The parents, Mrs. Kathrine Ruffins, a nurse, and Lt. John L. Ruffins Jr., of the New York City Fire Department, are hoping to succeed where the police have tried and failed.

"We don't want anything like revenge," Mrs. Ruffins said. "We feel it would be some consolation if the person who is responsible were found and prevented from doing the same thing to another person."

The Ruffins, who came to Long Beach immediately after the accident were unable, because of the cost and of their other eight children in New York, to remain.

Fellow firemen in New York took up a collection and they arrived again last Monday and will be here until next Wednesday.

"We have and will continue to check with residents in the area in an effort to get some lead to find the driver and we are staying with a Morehouse college classmate of Lt. Ruffins, Joseph Brooks at 2380 Delta Ave. We would surely appreciate any information."

Joru was a community coordinator for Project Action and Career Training, a federal program.

"He was doing a good job helping central area residents get jobs and better jobs and better housing," Charles Eure, an executive of the Office of Economic Opportunity, said.

"The accident occurred in our area and I am hoping that we can assist the Ruffins," Eure declared.

Sgt. John F. Brogan, head of the police traffic investigation detail, said the car which struck the young man's motorbike was a stolen auto. It had been stolen Jan. 20 from Mrs. Evelyn L. Duke, 5132 Gardenia Ave. The car was found abandoned in front of 1209 E. 16th St. the morning after the accident.

THE CAR HAD been carefully wiped and police were unable to find a single fingerprint.

Sgt. Brogan said the stolen auto, a 1959 two-door, bronze Pontiac sped through a stop sign at the dead end of 21st St. and struck the motorcycle which was travelling south on Orange Ave.

"We believe the car backed west on 21st St. to Cerritos, a distance of one block, backed south on Cerritos and into a driveway and turned around and went south on Cerritos to 20th St. and then west on 20th St.," Sgt. Brogan said.

Other drivers who were behind the motorcycle were able to tell police only that they believed there were "numerous persons" in the vehicle.

"The accident occurred in our area and I am hoping that we can assist the Ruffins," Eure declared.

Sgt. John F. Brogan, head of the police traffic investigation detail, said the car which struck the young man's motorbike was a stolen auto. It had been stolen Jan. 20 from Mrs. Evelyn L. Duke, 5132 Gardenia Ave. The car was found abandoned in front of 1209 E. 16th St. the morning after the accident.

THE CAR HAD been carefully wiped and police were unable to find a single fingerprint.

Sgt. Brogan said the stolen auto, a 1959 two-door, bronze Pontiac sped through a stop sign at the dead end of 21st St. and struck the motorcycle which was travelling south on Orange Ave.

"We believe the car backed west on 21st St. to Cerritos, a distance of one block, backed south on Cerritos and into a driveway and turned around and went south on Cerritos to 20th St. and then west on 20th St.," Sgt. Brogan said.

Other drivers who were behind the motorcycle were able to tell police only that they believed there were "numerous persons" in the vehicle.

PRICELESS CRYSTAL SAVED IN FLOODS

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

The story of how a priceless collection of 400 pieces of cut crystal was saved from loss in the raging floods which reduced Silverado Canyon to a shambles in last month's flood came to light Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore L. Thal, who fled their palatial home at 27246 Silverado Canyon Road to escape the onrush of the flood-swollen creek, learned to their surprise that doughty neighbors had rescued their treasures.

NOT A PIECE was lost, and none was even chipped, as a dozen volunteers cradled the Thal pieces in their arms to battle their way to sanctuary.

There was little ceremony in their act — and no time for it, either.

The salvage operaton began within minutes after word got around that Mr. and Mrs. Thal had to abandon their home — and the precious pieces they had collected during a lifetime.

The neighbors "borrowed" all the linens and anything they could find to cradle the crystal for its evacuation through the rain and flood.

It was days before Mr. and Mrs. Thal found out that their home in the canyon had withstood the battering of rocks and debris roaring down the flood-swollen creek — and that their collection was intact.

Thal, apprenticed at 12 to a glass maker, spent his working years in the business; he now is 70 years old, and he put together the most-prized collection of cut or crystal known to be in private ownership.

One punchbowl, for instance, is insured for $24,000. A vase is valued at $1,600.

TO THEM, it was "almost unbelievable" that their neighbors, with salvage and survival troubles of their own in the unprecedented fury of the flood, would think of their collection — and save it.

Their prizes are now safely in storage.

They know now that danger forges a common bond between friend and stranger, and that one man's trouble is everybody's concern.

FARMER, CARPENTER, TEACHER

He Combines Hobbies, Jobs

By RALPH McCLURG
Staff Writer

Congenial Fred B. (Carp) Carpenter, 78, of Bellflower is a hobbiest as well as a professional in the varied careers he has followed since his youthful days on the farm near his native town of Sleepy Eye, Minn.

Although Carp, as he is known by his many friends, has had the teaching of agriculture and animal husbandry as one of his prime interests. He has had experience as manager of the University of Minnesota agriculture experimental farm, operation of his own farm and sheep ranch in Montana. He has been a long time dairy operator in the Long Beach area. And he spent 17 years as teacher and administrative assistant at Excelsior Adult School.

Carpenter by name, he is also a carpenter by trade and hobby. He has his own workshop filled with wood as well as metal working tools. The shop also includes a large walk-in ice box, formerly used in his dairy business. It has been transformed into a lab, since photography is another of his many hobbies.

Carpenter is a charter member of the Bellflower Kiwanis Club that was organized in 1933. He is still active in the club, serves as its official photographer, and has been chairman of the club's agriculture and Conservation Committee for more years than anyone else in the club can remember.

THE CARPENTER family came to Long Beach in 1923, and the following year purchased and started operating a 19-cow dairy a short distance southwest of the present Traffic Circle at Lakewood Boulevard and Pacific Coast Highway.

However, Carpenter moved the Long Beach dairy before the thoroughfares were laid out and the Long Beach Community Hospital was constructed.

"The hospital was built shortly after we moved to the dairy and our milking barn was so close to it we could hear the babies crying in the maternity wards while we were milking our cows," Carpenter said.

In 1928, the Carpenter's moved to larger acreage "near Bellflower." A new dairy was constructed and the family operated it until 1945 when they sold a portion of the property. The "Bellflower Ranch," which has been subdivided with the exception of the original Carpenter homesite, is located at 17818 Carpentero Ave., Bellflower, which is approximately ½ mile north of Mayfair High School in Lakewood.

After selling his dairy business which included retail deliveries in Long Beach and Bellflower, Carpenter spent a year at the carpentry trade. In 1947 he joined the Excelsior Union High School Adult School staff where he served as instructor and administrative assistant until he retired on Jan. 1, 1965.

CARPENTER MADE front page news in the St. Paul Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn., in 1914, the early stages of his educational career, when a "dubious board of regents, routed by Minnesota Farm College instructors won their declaration that the institution is turning out young men who can farm and farm profitably."

The annual report of the college noted that the student training farm — run as an experiment — operated at a profit. News coverage at the time pointed out that Fred B. Carpenter, a junior student in the college, was given management of a 320-acre farm near Winthrop, Minn., At the end of the first year, the close of his training perod, Carpenter had earned $811.45 for himself, paid all his living expenses and turned over $211.45 to the university.

It was during the same year Carpenter married his late wife, Ruth.

The following year Carpenter taught agriculture and animal husbandry at Aberdeen, S.D., High School. From there he went to Helena, Mont., where he served as county agent in Lewis and Clark County for a short time.

In 1916 he leased a 2,000-acre general farm, hog, and sheep ranch near Helena which he operated for eight years. His experiences on that ranch included the purchase of 3,000 head of sheep from one of the Ringling brothers of Ringling Bros. Circus fame.

"The purchase price was $39,000 and was all borrowed money," Carp said. He noted that he sold wool for as high as 64 cents per pound and as low as 16 cents. He went out of the wool and sheep business in 1922, the year before he came to California.

CARPENTER HAS just completed one of his workshop hobby projects. It was the refinishing of one of his antiques, a four-drawer bureau well over 100 years old. He said it was bought second-hand by his grandfather who gave it to his grandmother as a wedding gift. They were married around 1868, shortly after the Civil War, Carpenter said.

Carpenter has restored the chest of drawers that he brought to Long Beach in a Model "T" Ford to as close to its original stage as possible. He's not sure what kind of wood it is made from, but thinks the frame is Red Cherry and the top and drawers pine or cottonwood.

Carpenter has four children, all married. They are Philip, a script writer, of Torrance; Roger, a civil engineer, of Napa; Ruthann Hawes of Brea, and Joyce Do Drotin of San Dimas.

Youth, 17, Seizes Gang

PISMO BEACH (AP) — A 17-year-old youth returned home Friday night to find a teen-age gang ransacking the house and loading the loot into an automobile parked in the driveway.

After blocking the driveway with his own car, Larry Cooper entered the house from the rear and telephoned police.

Grabbing a shotgun, he covered the gang of four boys and three girls.

"I just told them to return everything as it was," he said. The Cooper home was back in order when police arrived to take the gang into custody.

PRICELESS CRYSTAL SAVED IN FLOODS

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

The story of how a priceless collection of 400 pieces of cut crystal was saved from loss in the raging floods which reduced Silverado Canyon to a shambles in last month's flood came to light Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore L. Thal, who fled their palatial home at 27246 Silverado Canyon Road to escape the onrush of the flood-swollen creek, learned to their surprise that doughty neighbors had rescued their treasures.

NOT A PIECE was lost, and none was even chipped, as a dozen volunteers cradled the Thal pieces in their arms to battle their way to sanctuary.

There was little ceremony in their act — and no time for it, either.

The salvage operaton began within minutes after word got around that Mr. and Mrs. Thal had to abandon their home — and the precious pieces they had collected during a lifetime.

The neighbors "borrowed" all the linens and anything they could find to cradle the crystal for its evacuation through the rain and flood.

It was days before Mr. and Mrs. Thal found out that their home in the canyon had withstood the battering of rocks and debris roaring down the flood-swollen creek — and that their collection was intact.

Thal, apprenticed at 12 to a glass maker, spent his working years in the business; he now is 70 years old, and he put together the most-prized collection of cut or crystal known to be in private ownership.

One punchbowl, for instance, is insured for $24,000. A vase is valued at $1,600.

TO THEM, it was "almost unbelievable" that their neighbors, with salvage and survival troubles of their own in the unprecedented fury of the flood, would think of their collection — and save it.

Their prizes are now safely in storage.

They know now that danger forges a common bond between friend and stranger, and that one man's trouble is everybody's concern.

FARMER, CARPENTER, TEACHER
He Combines Hobbies, Jobs

By RALPH McCLURG
Staff Writer

Congenial Fred B. (Carp) Carpenter, 78, of Bellflower is a hobbiest as well as a professional in the varied careers he has followed since his youthful days on the farm near his native town of Sleepy Eye, Minn.

Although Carp, as he is known by his many friends, has had the teaching of agriculture and animal husbandry as one of his prime interests. He has had experience as manager of the University of Minnesota agriculture experimental farm, operation of his own farm and sheep ranch in Montana. He has been a long time dairy operator in the Long Beach area. And he spent 17 years as teacher and administrative assistant at Excelsior Adult School.

Carpenter by name, he is also a carpenter by trade and hobby. He has his own workshop filled with wood as well as metal working tools. The shop also includes a large walk-in ice box, formerly used in his dairy business. It has been transformed into a lab, since photography is another of his many hobbies.

Carpenter is a charter member of the Bellflower Kiwanis Club that was organized in 1933. He is still active in the club, serves as its official photographer, and has been chairman of the club's agriculture and Conservation Committee for more years than anyone else in the club can remember.

THE CARPENTER family came to Long Beach in 1923, and the following year purchased and started operating a 19-cow dairy a short distance southwest of the present Traffic Circle at Lakewood Boulevard and Pacific Coast Highway.

However, Carpenter moved the Long Beach dairy before the thoroughfares were laid out and the Long Beach Community Hospital was constructed.

"The hospital was built shortly after we moved to the dairy and our milking barn was so close to it we could hear the babies crying in the maternity wards while we were milking our cows," Carpenter said.

In 1928, the Carpenter's moved to larger acreage "near Bellflower." A new dairy was constructed and the family operated it until 1945 when they sold a portion of the property. The "Bellflower Ranch," which has been subdivided with the exception of the original Carpenter homesite, is located at 17818 Carpentero Ave., Bellflower, which is approximately ½ mile north of Mayfair High School in Lakewood.

After selling his dairy business which included retail deliveries in Long Beach and Bellflower, Carpenter spent a year at the carpentry trade. In 1947 he joined the Excelsior Union High School Adult School staff where he served as instructor and administrative assistant until he retired on Jan. 1, 1965.

CARPENTER MADE front page news in the St. Paul Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn., in 1914, the early stages of his educational career, when a "dubious board of regents, routed by Minnesota Farm College instructors won their declaration that the institution is turning out young men who can farm and farm profitably."

The annual report of the college noted that the student training farm — run as an experiment — operated at a profit. News coverage at the time pointed out that Fred B. Carpenter, a junior student in the college, was given management of a 320-acre farm near Winthrop, Minn., At the end of the first year, the close of his training perod, Carpenter had earned $811.45 for himself, paid all his living expenses and turned over $211.45 to the university.

It was during the same year Carpenter married his late wife, Ruth.

The following year Carpenter taught agriculture and animal husbandry at Aberdeen, S.D., High School. From there he went to Helena, Mont., where he served as county agent in Lewis and Clark County for a short time.

In 1916 he leased a 2,000-acre general farm, hog, and sheep ranch near Helena which he operated for eight years. His experiences on that ranch included the purchase of 3,000 head of sheep from one of the Ringling brothers of Ringling Bros. Circus fame.

"The purchase price was $39,000 and was all borrowed money," Carp said. He noted that he sold wool for as high as 64 cents per pound and as low as 16 cents. He went out of the wool and sheep business in 1922, the year before he came to California.

CARPENTER HAS just completed one of his workshop hobby projects. It was the refinishing of one of his antiques, a four-drawer bureau well over 100 years old. He said it was bought second-hand by his grandfather who gave it to his grandmother as a wedding gift. They were married around 1868, shortly after the Civil War, Carpenter said.

Carpenter has restored the chest of drawers that he brought to Long Beach in a Model "T" Ford to as close to its original stage as possible. He's not sure what kind of wood it is made from, but thinks the frame is Red Cherry and the top and drawers pine or cottonwood.

Carpenter has four children, all married. They are Philip, a script writer, of Torrance; Roger, a civil engineer, of Napa; Ruthann Hawes of Brea, and Joyce Do Drotin of San Dimas.

N.Y. Film Critic Will Be Speaker at LBCC

Originally scheduled for April, New York Times film critic Robert Windeler will be the second speaker in the "Insights into the American Scene" series at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Long Beach City College auditorium, Harvey Way near Clark Avenue. His topic is "The Comtemporary Scene in Cinema."

Windeler switched lecture dates with TV correspondent Clete Roberts, who was recently sent on a special assignment to cover the latest Middle East crisis.

Presently the West Coast motion picture and entertainment correspondent for the New York Times, Windeler is a former staff writer for Time magazine. He has written cover stories on many of the leading personalities in the entertainment world and is personally acquainted with many of the pace-setting film directors in the United States and abroad.

Wednesday night's lecture will be illustrated by excerpts from experimental films. Both general admission and season tickets will be available at the auditorium box office.

Perfect Mission, Perfect Ending

By DON HASTINGS

A perfect 10-day space mission ended with a perfect splashdown in the Atlantic Thursday and National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said everything is "go" for a moon flight in May. Dr. George E. Mueller, associated director for manned space flight, said, "Apollo 9 was as successful a flight as any of us could ever wish for, as well as being as successful as any of us has ever seen."

The astronauts, Col. James McDivitt, Col. David Scott and Russell Schweickart, reported in excellent condition when they were taken to the recovery ship, flew home to their families in Houston Friday evening.

A "SAFEGUARD" SYSTEM of antiballistic missiles was proposed Friday by President Richard Nixon. The system, a modification of the Johnson Administration's Sentinel ABM plan, was described by the President as "vital for the security and defense of the United States and also in the interest of peace throughout the world." He said the "thin" ABM shield — with only two launch sites, at the start, near U.S. missile bases rather than 15 batteries mostly near cities — could not be interpreted by the Soviet Union as an escalation of the arms race.

WITH THE PLEA AND SENTENCE worked out in advance between the prosecution and defense, James Earl Ray appeared in a Memphis, Tenn., court Monday and pleaded guilty to a state charge of murder for the assassination of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. He was sentenced immediately to 99 years in prison and began serving the term the next day. Ray hinted in court that others were involved in the slaying and the U.S. Justice Department said it is continuing to investigate a possible conspiracy.

THE SENATE RATIFIED the international agreement to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons, and speedy U.S. ratification is expected. The treaty becomes effective when it has been ratified by the United States, Russia, Britain and 40 other nations. It has so far been ratified by 10 nations, including Britain.

CAMPUS TURMOIL spread to junior and senior highs in Los Angeles last week and forced temporary closures at six schools. Fires were started, furniture overturned and windows broken in the protests, most of which were blamed on police "over-reaction" during an incident at Los Angeles' Carver Junior High School the preceding week. An apparent dispute between protesters resulted in the shooting of a Black Panther member outside a South-Central Los Angeles church Friday where militants were discussing a school boycott. Critically wounded was Ronald Freeman, 24. Sought were four members of the US organization.

THE NAVY BOARD OF INQUIRY investigating the capture of the spy ship Pueblo and the imprisonment of its crew concluded its probe in Coronado Thursday after hearing the captain of the vessel, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher state that the vessel was not heavily enough armed to prevent seizure and was not equipped to quickly destroy secret documents which fell into North Korean hands. He also recommended a review of the Military Code of Conduct for captured servicemen.

THE WORLD

As Israeli and Egyptian artillery duelled across the Suez Canal, Mrs. Golda Meir, former Milwaukee schoolteacher, accepted the leadership of the Israeli government. The 74-year-old former foreign minister made it clear that as prime minister she will be a hard-liner on holding occupied Arab territory.

President Zalman Shazar announced the mandate of the ruling party in Israel that Mrs. Meir form a new government and serve until a general election in November. Mrs. Meir said she will follow the policies of the late Prime Minister Levi Eshkol, preferably with the same ministers.

HIJACKING OF AN AIRLINER was foiled in Colombia last week, but not before the flight mechanic was killed. The hijacker, Juan Montoya, 18, a student was captured. The mechanic, Carlos Carceres, was slain by police and soldiers who had surrounded the airliner at Crespo Airport in Cartagena. They mistook Carceres for the hijacker when he leaped from the cockpit of the plane.

A ONE-DAY GENERAL STRIKE was conducted quietly in France with none of the disorders and violence of last May's walkout. The threat to the franc also appeared to be easing as the price of gold leveled off in European markets.

THE WAR

President Nixon said Friday he sees no prospect of withdrawing American troops from Vietnam in the foreseeable future and that he expects peace to be achieved through secret negotiations with the Communists. On a forces cut, the President appeared to differ with Administration sources who said earlier in the week that Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird was considering recalling 40,000 to 50,000 combat and support troops.

Discussing the Red offensive in Vietnam, the President recalled that he had warned on March 4 that he would take an "appropriate response" if he found it necessary to protect American lives. "My policy . . . will be to issue a warning only once," he said. "There will be no additional warning."

CASUALTIES DECREASED on the battlefronts during the second week of the Viet Cong spring offensive, but still ran far ahead of weekly tolls before the enemy drive. The Allied commands in Saigon reported 336 Americans, 259 South Vietnamese troops and 4,063 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed during the seven-day period ended March 8. The totals for the preceding week were 453 Americans, 521 South Viet and 6,813 enemy killed. The U.S. Command also announced 1,694 Americans wounded in the second week of the Red drive.

AT HUNTINGTON BEACH

Police Chief Retiring

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

CHIEF SELTZER . . . A Career Ends

'Way back in 1937 the city of Huntington Beach hired a new police patrolman.

There were only seven members of the police department in those days and they worked six days a week for $135 a month and no extra for overtime.

It was a pretty good move for the city because that patrolman will retire July 1 this year — as the city's chief of police since 1964.

He is John Seltzer, an affable man of 64 who has been active in the city's civic affairs and, while chief of police, upgraded the department into what the Criminology Department of California State College at Long Beach has called "one of the two best police departments in Orange County."

"I've spent half my lifetime on this department," Seltzer says, referring to his 32 years of continuous service, "and a lot of things — a lot of good things — have happened while I've been here."

Some of the "good" things that have happened to the police department have happened because John Seltzer was chief of Police.

These include the "plain clothes" — meaning bathing trunks and towel — patrol on the beaches to keep the rowdy elements in line.

Seltzer took some criticism for this innovation nicknamed "Seltzer's Ad-men," a few years ago, but it has worked out. The patrol is now part of the summer operation when the beaches get crowded.

Another is the requirement that police officers take police science courses offered at the Orange County Peace Officers Academy in conjunction with Orange Coast College. Huntington Beach was the seventh department in the state to comply with this recommendation of the California Commission on Peace Officers Standards and Training.

"Right now our average educational level stands at just under two years of college," Seltzer says with some pride.

The latest innovation Seltzer has spearheaded in Huntington Beach is the helicopter patrol.

One he is still working on is improvement in the jail facilities, which the City Council recently approved.

Born in Denver, Colo., Seltzer moved with his family to Los Angeles in 1915 and to Huntington Beach in 1920. He has been there ever since.

His father, a broom maker, moved the family back to Los Angeles in 1925, but young John decided to stay in Huntington Beach.

"I liked it here," he says. "And I still do."

What is he going to do after he retires?

"Well, I don't know for sure," he says. "I think I'll just play it by ear for a while."

Then he tells you about his pride and joy, a pure-bred Kellogg Arabian horse — named Meseyn — which he has ridden in the gala Huntington Beach Fourth of July Parade.

"I'll still be riding Meseyn," he points out. "It's one of my hobbies."

Another one is a mining claim he has up between Inyokern and Ransburg, off Route 395.

"I bought it in 1940," he says, "and built a cabin on it in 1946. I'll probably spend some time up there."

He also operates as a rock hound, and one of his favorite spots is Wiley Well, about 20 miles south of Blythe.

So, if his past career on the police department, where he organized the city's first detective detail, headed it up for seven years and then became the department's first captain, is any indication, he'll keep busy after he retires.

than they can handle right now — shipping being quite heavy on the West Coast — Bridges' men are fearful their ranks will be reduced to a mere handful within a few years.

For that reason, they're trying to get the maritime industry to establish its hegemony over all container work, on or off the wharves.

This would enable the dockworker to establish jurisdiction over all van-stuffing operations.

The rub is that the container stations are usually operated by trucking firms that have labor contracts with the Teamsters Union. Moreover, while the trucking firms are often closely linked to the maritime companies, they pay less than longshore scale.

Thus, if the shipowners were to take over container operations and employ longshoremen to do the work, their labor bill would go up, and they're naturally reluctant to see that happen.

Underlying the longshoremen's position is the feeling that the cargo vans are actually parts of a ship. "They're a hunk of the hatch," says Sidney Roger, public relations chief for the union.

"IN TAKING container work away from the docks," he says, the employers in effect have "taken a piece of our factory away from us.

"We think it's smarter to bring the factory back down to the docks, but if they want it off the docks, that's their business. In either case, they should use longshoremen to do the work."

The Teamsters are sympathetic to the dockers' plight, but they feel they have a legitimate stake in container work, too. A Teamster spokesman says his union is not about to give away the container jobs. The Teamsters received them not by connivance or raiding, but in the normal course of affairs.

MOREOVER, say many Teamsters, both unions agreed some time ago that the Teamsters would handle container operations off the piers. "Take the Sea-Land (container) operation here," says local Teamster official Joseph Perkins, "Harry (Bridges) and Jimmy (Hoffa) worked it out in 1962. No one, of course, dreamed then that the container program would grow and expand the way it has."

Thus far, the two unions have been meeting amicably on the issue in an effort to find a mutually acceptable solution. But their talks have been no more successful than the longshoremen's discussions with the maritime industry.

The industry had been meeting with Bridges and his aides for five months; but the negotiations reached an impasse and were broken off a little over a week ago.

Police Chief Retiring

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

'Way back in 1937 the city of Huntington Beach hired a new police patrolman.

There were only seven members of the police department in those days and they worked six days a week for $135 a month and no extra for overtime.

It was a pretty good move for the city because that patrolman will retire July 1 this year — as the city's chief of police since 1964.

He is John Seltzer, an affable man of 64 who has been active in the city's civic affairs and, while chief of police, upgraded the department into what the Criminology Department of California State College at Long Beach has called "one of the two best police departments in Orange County."

"I've spent half my lifetime on this department," Seltzer says, referring to his 32 years of continuous service, "and a lot of things — a lot of good things — have happened while I've been here."

Some of the "good" things that have happened to the police department have happened because John Seltzer was chief of Police.

These include the "plain clothes" — meaning bathing trunks and towel — patrol on the beaches to keep the rowdy elements in line.

Seltzer took some criticism for this innovation nicknamed "Seltzer's Ad-men," a few years ago, but it has worked out. The patrol is now part of the summer operation when the beaches get crowded.

Another is the requirement that police officers take police science courses offered at the Orange County Peace Officers Academy in conjunction with Orange Coast College. Huntington Beach was the seventh department in the state to comply with this recommendation of the California Commission on Peace Officers Standards and Training.

Garibaldi Concedes Third Title to UCLA

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

For a coach whose team had suffered one of the most humiliating defeats in NCAA playoff history, Santa Clara's Dick Garibaldi was calm, cool and collected after the 90-52 trouncing administered by UCLA Saturday.

"Their zone press fooled us completely," said Garibaldi. "I guess they haven't used that in a long time. We certainly didn't expect it.

"The Bruins certainly got us rattled with that defense from the very start, and obviously we never recovered. Everything went wrong for us. The bottom fell out completely. Even when UCLA wasn't pressing us, we were throwing one pass after another away.

"We were as bad as bad can be."

Garibaldi thought he should receive a Bruin letter for inspiration. "We pepped them up the same as we did last year (the Bruins also routed the Broncos in last year's Western NCAA finals). UCLA was jittery until today. But today's game gave them confidence and momentum. UCLA didn't play like this Thursday night against New Mexico State! Now I think they have the confidence to go all the way at Lousville next week.

"The opposition makes a team look great. We were so pathetic that we made UCLA look like a super team today. I honestly believe they weren't until today."

The Bronco coach said he thought the game's pivotal point was very early in the first quarter when the Bruins jumped to a 7-0 lead. "We had to desert our game and try to stop them before the rains came. But we couldn't. We never got to play our part of the game and instead had to play theirs the whole way.

"UCLA got loose fast and simply chewed us to ribbons."

Did any particular Bruins hurt the Broncos?

"They ALL hurt us," shot back Garibaldi. "Alcindor especially. He completely dominated our very fine center (6-9½ Dennis Awtrey) and took our big man away from us. Lew mentally and, of course, physically wrecked us as he's done to everybody else."

Garibaldi shouldered blame for the thundering defeat. "When a team plays real bad, a coach has to accept the responsibility. I guess I just didn't get them ready. But we don't have any alibis."

The Bronco mentor again stressed his team's futility. "I'll dream about all those mistakes for a long time. Just think, we got off only 21 shots in the first half and turned over the ball 16 times. If we'd have been able to shoot and make our shots those 16 times, we might have had 32 points!"

What did Garibaddi say to his players?

"Well, before the game I told them we could beat UCLA if they didn't make the same mistakes they made against them last year," sighed Garibaldi. "So what happens? We make twice as many mistakes.

"After the game I didn't say a thing to them. I let them alone. They were all very sick boys. I felt sorry for the players, especially for those seniors. I hope this game doesn't affect them, but I don't think it will. I hate to think that one game wrecked our fine season."

Garibaldi refused to compare this Bruin team with the one that won last season's NCAA championship, but he did comment that the 1968-69 Uclans "were definitely better physically."

How does he think Johnny Wooden's charges will fare in the Louisville games this coming week?

"I guess Drake's win was a break for UCLA as the Bruins meet them in their first game and Drake isn't as strong as, say, Purdue," replied Garibaldi. "Purdue should be the toughest game. But UCLA should win it all again, thanks in a good part to the incentive we gave them today."

UCLA '64 Weapon Terrorizes Broncs

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

It was sort of like Frankenstein vs. Soupy Sales.

Without the laughs.

UCLA's 90-52 destruction of Santa Clara Saturday in the Western Region basketball final at Pauley Pavilion will go down in the records as a mercy killing that was completed in 4 minutes and 13 seconds.

By that time the Bruins had an 11-0 lead and the Broncos were broken.

Santa Clara was terrorized by an old weapon everyone thought UCLA coach John Wooden had thrown out for junk.

For the first time this season, the Wizard of Westwood employed a full-court zone press of the type that had panicked foes since 1963.

It worked beautifully. Santa Clara had five turnovers in the first five minutes, 16 by halftime and 30 for the game.

"It was the same zone press I used in 1964," grinned Wooden. "We've lined up like this before this year, but then dropped off to a man-to-man press."

Now it's on to Louisville for Lew Alcindor & Co. Unless the form charts are wrong, it should be a third successive national championship for the Bruins.

They face Midwest tourney winner Drake (24-4) at 6:05 (PST) Thursday night. Eastern champion North Carolina (27-3) and Mideast winner Purdue (22-4) clash in the opening game.

The championship will be decided Saturday afternoon.

Santa Clara, ranked third in the nation, was expected to furnish tougher opposition for the Bruins, who have been wobbling in recent weeks.

But the Broncos weren't prepared for the full-court press and were totally intimidated around the basket by the 7-1½ Alcindor.

Santa Clara didn't score until center Dennis Awtrey looped a shot over Alcindor after 4:32 of action, and it didn't get another field goal until 8:41 had elapsed.

At that juncture UCLA held an 18-4 lead, and the Bruins increased their margin to 32-13 with 5:09 left in the half.

There was so little doubt about the outcome that Wooden lifted starters Alcindor, Lynn Shackelford and Kenny Heitz at that point.

The Bruins held a 46-25 halftime advantage and ran off 10 consecutive points at the start of the second half to turn the game into a total rout.

UCLA's biggest lead came near the end at 83-43.

The Broncos' Awtrey, who carried a 21.7 scoring average into the tourney, was held to 14, eight coming with Alcindor on the sidelines. The high-scoring Ogden brothers, Bud and Ralph, were limited to nine and four points, respectively.

UCLA shot an amazing .790 per cent in the first half and wound up at .569 on 37 of 65 attempts. Santa Clara hit .357 per cent of its shots, 20 of 56.

All Bruins seniors — Alcindor, Shackelford, Heitz and Bill Sweek — were given standing ovations by the crowd of 12,812 when they left the game. Alcindor led the UCLA scoring with 17 points.

Alcindor, whose mother, Cora, had been taken to UCLA Medical Center Friday with a vein inflammation, said he "was surprised the win was so easy."

"The zone press made the difference," he added.

Teammates Shackelford and Heitz agreed.

"When we first went into the zone press, Santa Clara's guards waved their teammates down the floor as though they could bring the ball up the floor themselves," said Shackelford. "I don't think they realized we were using a zone.

"When they found out what was happening, they were so startled they never did recover."

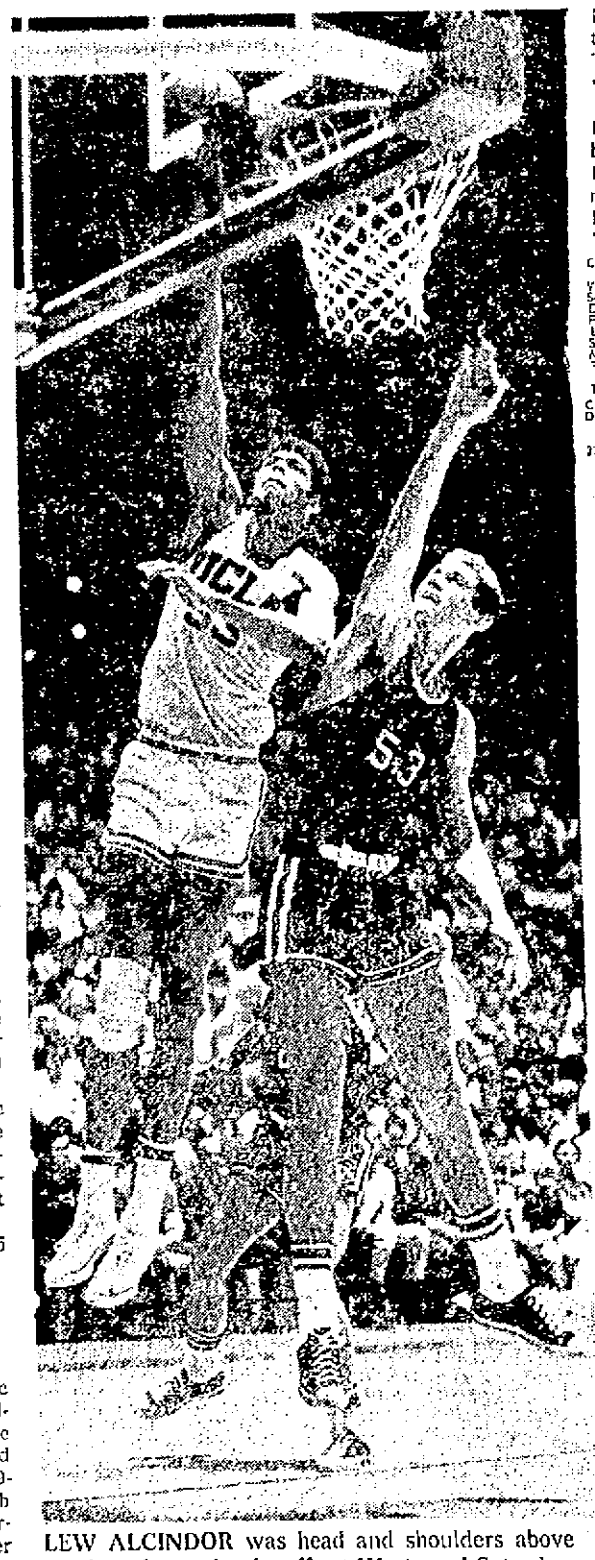

"Our backcourt pressure did it," said Heitz. "And our outside shooting drove them out of their zone."

Wooden revealed the Bruins had been working on the zone press in practice, awaiting the most important moment in which to employ it.

Asked if he intended to MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Rick Mount sank a 20-foot jumper from the corner with two seconds remaining in overtime Saturday to give Purdue a 75-73 victory over Marquette in the title game of the NCAA Mideast Regional basketball tournament.

Herman Gilliam, playing in his first games since Feb. 25, sent Purdue out front in the extra sessions by sinking two free throws.

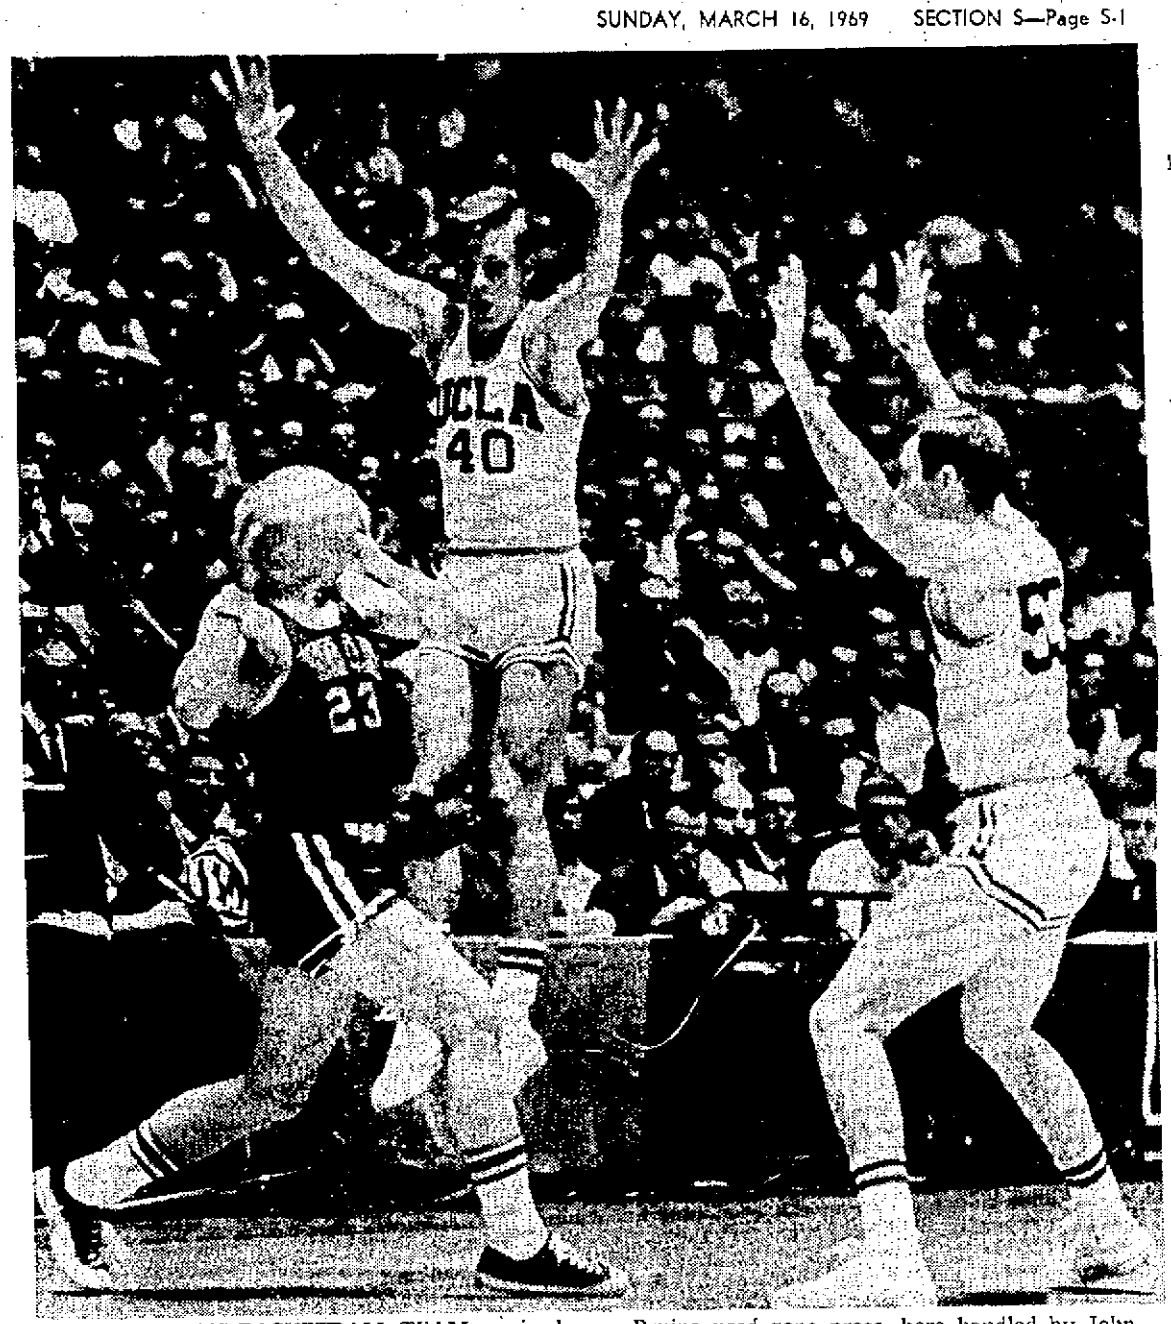

Larry Weatherford gave the Big Ten champions a four-point lead, 69-65, by being on the scoring end of a fast break, then put Purdue ahead again 71-69 with a jump shot from the corner.

After Dean Meminger's short jumper knotted the count again, Mount hit his first of two one-handers from the corner.

S. Carolina, Army Log NIT Wins

NEW YORK (AP) — Red hot John Roche and South Carolina piled up a big halftime lead and then held off fast-closing Southern Illinois 72-63 Saturday night in the continuing first round of the National Invitation Basketball Tournament.

In the first game of the Madison Square Garden doubleheader, Army's ball-control offense survived a desperate bid by Wyoming and the Cadets beat the Cowboys 51-49.

With Roche, a 6-foot-2 guard with a 24-point average, hitting seven of 12 from the field and 18 points, South Carolina scored the first six points, increased its lead to 25-10 and finally 42-28 at intermission.

The Gamecocks hit 16 of 29 from the field in the half against cold SIU before the Salukis had their moment in the second half.

Russell Diving Into Church Work

Officers of the Phillips 66 Swim Club, working furiously on details involved in sponsorship of the National AAU Short Course Swimming and Diving Championships April 4-13 at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, received disappointing news this week when the parents of one of America's top divers notified them that their son would not be competing here.

Keith Russell, who won the platform event and finished second in three-meter springboard competition in the Olympic Trials at Belmont Plaza last fall, is out of bigtime diving for at least two years.

In a letter to Dr. Gus Gossick, co-diving director for the National AAU meet, was this explanation by Mr. and Mrs. Cy Russell:

"Keith is in Chile on a mission for the Mormon Church. He will be back in a little less than two years. He spent three months at Brigham Young University at a language training school for Spanish. He loves his work and says he's never been happier.

"He isn't allowed to swim or dive while on his mission, but he took along his suit in case they change their minds. He plans on diving when he returns home. Best of luck for the championships in Long Beach."

Loss of Russell to the meet dims the diving competition somewhat, but it's expected that Bernie Wrightson, third in the springboard event at Long Beach with a great final dive in the Trials and then first at Mexico City, will be competing.

Meet manager Parker Kemp reports that ticket information is available by writing AAU Swim Championships at P.O. Box 3803, Long Beach 90803. Computicket outlets also are handling tickets.

MEET OFFICIALS received another blow when they learned that ABC will NOT televise the meet nationally, as expected. The problem was the same one that's plaguing all sports these days — money. AAU officials and network officials in New York couldn't see eye-to-eye on financial aspects of the Long Beach meet.

Also involved were long-standing differences between the TV people and the AAU. Which is par for the course, short or long.

Several Long Beach people are working with an independent network in an attempt to do something with television.

Life's problems seem to get bigger and more numerous.

THE SWITCH from the Catholic League to the rugged Angelus League has proven a hit rough for the St. Anthony athletes, thus the barriers have fallen and for the first time the Saints boast a booster club.

The club will be known as the Sahibs, short but a rather nifty contraction for St. Anthony High Booster Club.

President Jack Senske, a former Saint football and basketball player of note, has scheduled a meeting for 8 p.m. Tuesday in the St. Anthony cafeteria, Sixth and Alamitos. On hand will be the Rams' Jack Snow, who will present Ram films.

"We need help in competing in a tough league, so we figured the best way we could help the kids would be to form the Sahibs," said Senske, who mentioned also that the Tuesday affair is open to everybody. Dues will be $10, but that first sawbuck will entitle members to a purple-and-white Saint jacket, which is priced at about $7.50.

Other officers are Cal Lenzen, vice president; Don McCoy, secretary; Bill Mais, treasurer, and Ed Hoener, membership chairman.

JIM STANGELAND, the new football boss at Cal State L.B., hopes he has as much success in directing his incoming quarterback from U. of Washington, Shawn McKinney, as his former USC coach, John McKay.

"McKay is the greatest in the world at handling quarterbacks," enthused Jim the other day. "I was with him four years and he got great mileage out of the talents of Troy Winslow and Steve Sogge. And before that he handled Craig Fertig, Bill Nelsen and Pete Beathard. I just hope I can do a similar job with Shawn."

Incidentally, Stangeland warned our collegiate chronicler Loel Schrader that USC would take one of the two basketball games last weekend against UCLA. "He laughed me out of the office, but I got the last laugh," chortled Jim. You didn't tell me about that, Loel.

GRABBING THE BRASS RINGS:

. . . Scrap Iron Johnson, the popular Olympic Auditorium favorite who will meet Sonny Liston April 21 in Las Vegas, will be working out daily — starting today — at Harbor Gym, 1585 Chestnut Ave. His Sunday drills will be at 2 p.m., the others at 5 p.m. The dictionary defines scrap iron as old pieces of iron suitable for reworking. That's old Scrap all the way.

. . . Lou Henson, coach of New Mexico State's Aggies who were drubbed by UCLA at Pauley Pavilion Thursday night, claims that only a team like Purdue would have a chance against the Bruins, disregarding the USC upset eight days ago. "Purdue is a good outside-shooting club," explained Henson. "You can't go inside against UCLA, you just can't. Lew Alcindor's always there."

. . . Led by Alcindor, the Bruins used a little psychology during the Santa Clara-Weber State first game Thursday night. To the thunderous roar of the crowd the Bruins marched the length of the pavilion to their dressing quarters. The game halted and the Broncos just stared in awe. John Wooden misses no bets.

Kings Put Penguins Out of Misery, 3-1

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Whether or not the Kings are getting enough rest, their fans are.

Especially the ones who watched them put the Pittsburgh Penguins to sleep, 3-1, at the Forum Saturday night.

Lowell MacDonald, Bill Flett and Ed Joyal scored the goals.

The Kings, supposedly invigorated by two days of loafing after two days on Howard Schnellenberger's rockpile, were considerably livelier than the pain-wracked stiffs who blew Wednesday's game to Toronto, 4-0.

But in assessing the test of theories between coach Red Kelly and general manager Larry Regan, a disparity in the opposition should be noted. While Toronto is on the upsurge in the National Hockey League's East Division, the Penguins are all but out of their misery in the West.

The Kings, who had managed only three ties in their previous eight games and hadn't won their last six in the Forum, were in fourth place when the game started because Philadelphia tied Minnesota back East.

But they were third again when it ended, MacDonald leading it on a rare feat of determination early in the second period.

MacDonald, who has scored seven goals in the last eight games, saw his 20-foot shot go off Les Binkley's pads but followed it up tenaciously, tripping over defenseman Dunc McCallum and clawing and digging until he had poked it under the goaltender.

Lowell's linemates, Jimmy Peters and Ted Irvine, assisted. They have accounted for 11 of the Kings' last 17 goals.

The Kings were still fresh as daisies in the third period, securing the win on Flett's goal. Binkley was floundering on the ice from shots by Joyal and Real Lemieux when the Cowboy flicked it in.

The Kings' beleagured rookie goalie, Gerry Desjardins, deserved his fifth shutout but lost it with 57 seconds remaining after Penguin coach Red Sullivan, who has nothing more to lose, pulled Binkley for an extra skater.

Keith McCreary powered a shot past Desjardins from close in, but with Binkley still gone Joyal hit an empty net to forestall further shenanigans.

The shot put Joyal in the NHL's exclusive 30-goal club and he said, "I never thought I'd get it on an open net . . . but I'll take it."

Kelly, who plans to resume regular workouts today and Monday said, "I think you could see the difference tonight."

Most of his players preferred to let the matter lie rather than get involved in the split between Kelly and Regan, but Lemieux offered this in his expressive French accent:

"For that game with Toronto we were up but the legs would not go. Tonight we were ready. We were strong."

Regan shrugged and said, "It doesn't prove a thing. I still think they're not in shape."

BLUE LINES: The Kings' next game is Tuesday night at the Forum against Oakland. It will be another banner night for the fans, if not for the Kings. Andra Kelly, wife of a well-known coach will select the best three sheets expressing support of the Kings—if she can find that many—Center Billy Inglis was back in uniform after a chest injury but left wing Gary Croteau was still healing his shoulder . . . Former L.A. Blade Willie O'Ree scored four goals for the San Diego Gulls in a 7-6 win over Denver Friday night.

HOUSTON (AP) — Goerge Lehmann streaked for the Stars' last 12 points Saturday night as the Stars emerged with a 121-119 American Basketball Assn. victory over Houston.

Wooden said the Bruins "weren't laggard in any part of our play."

"I think it was obvious we are sharp again," he said. "But this tournament is history. Now we must look to Louisville."

Weber State staged a strong comeback in the second half to defeat New Mexico State, 58-56, and win third place.

Reserve guard Rich Nielsen's two free throws with 25 seconds remaining provided the margin of victory for the Wildcats.

Weber State trailed by 29-23 at halftime.

Lancers Victim No. 62

By EARL WEBB

Reynaldo Brown scored three points and Keith Lee two in the final minute Saturday night to give Compton High School a 59-55 triumph over Sunny Hills in the CIF AAAA championship basketball game at the L.A. Sports Arena.

The triumph enabled the Tarbabes to become the first team in CIF history to complete successive undefeated seasons. The win over Sunny Hills, concluding a 30-0 season, was the 62nd in a row for Compton, a record.

Compton had to work to give the crown to coach Bill Armstrong. Larry Hollyfield, who has played in all of the winning games, fouled out with 3:42 remaining and the Lancers, who had trailed throughout the game, challenged strongly.

The score was 52-47 when Hollyfield exited. Three points by Frank Dehn made it 52-50 with 3:21 remaining.

Sunny Hills finally tied the contest at 54-54 on four free throws by Brad McNamara and Kim Swaim.

Lee made two free throws with 43 seconds remaining to put Compton ahead to stay and Brown wrapped things up with a tip-in and free throw.

A crowd of 7,150 saw Hollyfield named tournament MVP. Teammate Donald Womack was selected to the all-tourney team.

Others on the all-tourney club were McNamara and Don Paul of Sunny Hills, John Roth of Santa Maria, Bob Sherwin of Katella, Keith Batiste of Verbum Dei, Bud Fablan of Notre Dame and Jim Tough of Beverly Hills.

Beverly Hills captured the 3-A crown by defeating Santa Maria, 74-62.

Keith Batiste scored 33 points as Verbum Dei fought off a last quarter rally to nip Katella 90-87 for the 2-A basketball championship at the L.A. Sports Arena.

Trojan Netters Routed by Stars

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — A squad of tennis all-stars won three of four singles matches Saturday against University of Southern California players in their annual two-day event.

Alex Olmedo of Los Angeles defeated Bob Lutz 6-1, 6-2, Tom Gorman of Seattle topped Steve Avoyer 6-4, 6-2 and Hugh Stewart of Balboa outplayed George Taylor 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. The only Southern Cal winner, Marcelo Lara, upset Carl Eltzholtz of San Diego 6-4, 6-2.

New Mexico Team Claims NAIA Crown

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dale Severson, a junior who had hit only 19 points in four previous tournament games, was the winning spark Saturday night as Eastern New Mexico rolled over Maryland State 99-76 to win the championship of the 32nd NAIA basketball tournament.

A lean, bespectacled lad from DeKalb, Ill., Severson fired a first-half Eastern New Mexico comeback that erased a 10-point Maryland State lead. Severson hit 15 in the first half and added 10 after intermission for 25 points and scoring honors.

Central Washington defeated Elizabeth City 96-82 to make third place in the week-long, 32-team tourney.

Debbie Beaten Twice; Atwood Churns to Win

Linda Gustavson of the Santa Clara Swim Club churned a 1:58.4 performance in the womens' 200-yard freestyle Saturday, easily beating Olympic triple gold medalist Debbie Meyer at City of Commerce.

Miss Meyer, recipient of the 1969 Sullivan Award, placed third behind Pokey Watson of the Santa Clara Swim Club. Miss Watson swam the course in 1:58.8 and Miss Meyer had a 1:59.0.

It was Debbie's second third-place finish in the Southern California Invitational Swim Meet. In the women's 400-yard individual medley, Sue Atwood, of the Lakewood Aquatic Club, stroked to a 4:39.6 victory, followed by Lynn Vidali, Santa Clara SC, 4:40.8, and Debbie with a 4:41.6.

Neither Debbie nor her coach at the Arden Hills Swim Club, Sherman Chavoor, was obviously disappointed by the losses.

"I'm not concerned because I got beat tonight," she told newsmen. "I'm working up to a peak in the indoor season which will be at the national indoor meet in Long Beach in three weeks.

"By then I should be in much better shape. I have gotten a slow start this season after the Olympics but I have done it on purpose because I'm also thinking about the big outdoor season."

Chavoor said the losses were expectable "considering such a long lay off after the Olympics. I think her progress is very good. Before the season is out she will be better than ever."

L.B. Masters, PCC Tie for 3rd

The Long Beach Masters and Pacific Coast Club tied for third place in the Class A men's volleyball tournament at Santa Monica City College Saturday.

The Maccabeahs defeated Santa Monica in the finals, 15-4, 4-15, 15-7.

Russell Diving Into Church Work

Officers of the Phillips 66 Swim Club, working furiously on details involved in sponsorship of the National AAU Short Course Swimming and Diving Championships April 4-13 at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool, received disappointing news this week when the parents of one of America's top divers notified them that their son would not be competing here.

Keith Russell, who won the platform event and finished second in three-meter springboard competition in the Olympic Trials at Belmont Plaza last fall, is out of bigtime diving for at least two years.

In a letter to Dr. Gus Gossick, co-diving director for the National AAU meet, was this explanation by Mr. and Mrs. Cy Russell:

"Keith is in Chile on a mission for the Mormon Church. He will be back in a little less than two years. He spent three months at Brigham Young University at a language training school for Spanish. He loves his work and says he's never been happier.

"He isn't allowed to swim or dive while on his mission, but he took along his suit in case they change their minds. He plans on diving when he returns home. Best of luck for the championships in Long Beach."

Loss of Russell to the meet dims the diving competition somewhat, but it's expected that Bernie Wrightson, third in the springboard event at Long Beach with a great final dive in the Trials and then first at Mexico City, will be competing.

Meet manager Parker Kemp reports that ticket information is available by writing AAU Swim Championships at P.O. Box 3803, Long Beach 90803. Computicket outlets also are handling tickets.

MEET OFFICIALS received another blow when they learned that ABC will NOT televise the meet nationally, as expected. The problem was the same one that's plaguing all sports these days — money. AAU officials and network officials in New York couldn't see eye-to-eye on financial aspects of the Long Beach meet.

Also involved were long-standing differences between the TV people and the AAU. Which is par for the course, short or long.

Several Long Beach people are working with an independent network in an attempt to do something with television.

Life's problems seem to get bigger and more numerous.

THE SWITCH from the Catholic League to the rugged Angelus League has proven a bit rough for the St. Anthony athletes; thus the barriers have fallen and for the first time the Saints boast a booster club.

The club will be known as the Sahibs, short but a rather nifty contraction for St. Anthony High Booster Club.

President Jack Senske, a former Saint football and basketball player of note, has scheduled a meeting for 8 p.m. Tuesday in the St. Anthony cafeteria, Sixth and Alamitos. On hand will be the Rams' Jack Snow, who will present Ram films.

"We need help in competing in a tough league, so we figured the best way we could help the kids would be to form the Sahibs," said Senske, who mentioned also that the Tuesday affair is open to everybody. Dues will be $10, but that first sawbuck will entitle members to a purple-and-white Saint jacket, which is priced at about $7.50.

Other officers are Cal Lenzen, vice president; Don McCoy, secretary; Bill Mais, treasurer, and Ed Hoener, membership chairman.

JIM STANGELAND, the new football boss at Cal State L.B., hopes he has as much success in directing his incoming quarterback from U. of Washington, Shawn McKinney, as his former USC coach, John McKay.

"McKay is the greatest in the world at handling quarterbacks," enthused Jim the other day. "I was with him four years and he got great mileage out of the talents of Troy Winslow and Steve Sogge. And before that he handled Craig Fertig, Bill Nelsen and Pete Beathard. I just hope I can do a similar job with Shawn."

Incidentally, Stangeland warned our collegiate chronicler Loel Schrader that USC would take one of the two basketball games last weekend against UCLA. "He laughed me out of the office, but I got the last laugh," chortled Jim. You didn't tell me about that, Loel.

GRABBING THE BRASS RINGS:

. . . Scrap Iron Johnson, the popular Olympic Auditorium favorite who will meet Sonny Liston April 21 in Las Vegas, will be working out daily — starting today — at Harbor Gym, 1585 Chestnut Ave. His Sunday drills will be at 2 p.m., the others at 5 p.m. The dictionary defines scrap iron as old pieces of iron suitable for reworking. That's old Scrap all the way.

. . . Lou Henson, coach of New Mexico State's Aggies who were drubbed by UCLA at Pauley Pavilion Thursday night, claims that only a team like Purdue would have a chance against the Bruins, disregarding the USC upset eight days ago. "Purdue is a good outside-shooting club," explained Henson. "You can't go inside against UCLA, you just can't. Lew Alcindor's always there."

. . . Led by Alcindor, the Bruins used a little psychology during the Santa Clara-Weber State first game Thursday night. To the thunderous roar of the crowd the Bruins marched the length of the pavilion to their dressing quarters. The game halted and the Broncos just stared in awe. John Wooden misses no bets.

Kings Put Penguins Out of Misery, 3-1

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Whether or not the Kings are getting enough rest, their fans are.

Especially the ones who watched them put the Pittsburgh Penguins to sleep, 3-1, at the Forum Saturday night.

Lowell MacDonald, Bill Flett and Ed Joyal scored the goals.

The Kings, supposedly invigorated by two days of loafing after two days on Howard Schnellenberger's rockpile, were considerably livelier than the pain-wracked stiffs who blew Wednesday's game to Toronto, 4-0.

But in assessing the test of theories between coach Red Kelly and general manager Larry Regan, a disparity in the opposition should be noted. While Toronto is on the upsurge in the National Hockey League's East Division, the Penguins are all but out of their misery in the West.

The Kings, who had managed only three ties in their previous eight games and hadn't won their last six in the Forum, were in fourth place when the game started because Philadelphia tied Minnesota back East.

But they were third again when it ended, MacDonald leading it on a rare feat of determination early in the second period.

MacDonald, who has scored seven goals in the last eight games, saw his 20-foot shot go off Les Binkley's pads but followed it up tenaciously, tripping over defenseman Dunc McCallum and clawing and digging until he had poked it under the goaltender.

Lowell's linemates, Jimmy Peters and Ted Irvine, assisted. They have accounted for 11 of the Kings' last 17 goals.

The Kings were still fresh as daisies in the third period, securing the win on Flett's goal. Binkley was floundering on the ice from shots by Joyal and Real Lemieux when the Cowboy flicked it in.

The Kings' beleaguered rookie goalie, Gerry Desjardins, deserved his fifth shutout but lost it with 57 seconds remaining after Penguin coach Red Sullivan, who has nothing more to lose, pulled Binkley for an extra skater.

Keith McCreary powered a shot past Desjardins from close in, but with Binkley still gone Joyal hit an empty net to forestall further shenanigans.

The shot put Joyal in the NHL's exclusive 30-goal club and he said, "I never thought I'd get it on an open net . . . but I'll take it."

Kelly, who plans to resume regular workouts today and Monday said, "I think you could see the difference tonight."

Most of his players preferred to let the matter lie rather than get involved in the split between Kelly and Regan, but Lemieux offered this in his expressive French accent:

"For that game with Toronto we were up but the legs would not go. Tonight we were ready. We were strong."

Regan shrugged and said, "It doesn't prove a thing. I still think they're not in shape."

BLUE LINES: The Kings' next game is Tuesday night at the Forum Against Oakland. It will be another banner night for the fans, if not for the Kings. Andra Kelly, wife of a well-known coach will select the best three sheets exorassing support of the Kings—if she can find that many—Center Billy Inglis was back in uniform after a chest injury but left wing Gary Croteau was still healing his shoulder . . . Former L.A. Blade Willie O'Ree scored four goals for the San Diego Gulls in a 7-6 win over Denver Friday night.

HEADACHE 'BRUIN'

WHEN PLAYOFF against UCLA began Saturday, Santa Clara coach Dick Garibaldi (above) was as excited as anyone in the courthouse, But when score reached 11-0—in favor of UCLA—Garibaldi's enthusiasm turned into a migraine.

utilize the zone press at Louisville, Wooden shot back: "I certainly do."

Wooden said the Bruins "weren't laggard in any part of our play."

"I think it was obvious we are sharp again," he said. "But this tournament is history. Now we must look to Louisville."

Weber State staged a strong comeback in the second half to defeat New Mexico State, 58-56, and win third place.

Reserve guard Rich Nielsen's two free throws with 25 seconds remaining provided the margin of victory for the Wildcats.

Weber State trailed by 29-23 at halftime.

Alex Olmedo of Los Angeles defeated Bob Lutz 6-1, 6-2, Tom Gorman of Seattle topped Steve Avoyer 6-4, 6-2 and Hugh Stewart of Balboa outplayed George Taylor 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. The only Southern Cal winner, Marcelo Lara, upset Carl Eltzholtz of San Diego 6-4, 6-2.

Lancers Victim No. 62

By EARL WEBB

Reynaldo Brown scored three points and Keith Lee two in the final minute Saturday night to give Compton High School a 59-55 triumph over Sunny Hills in the CIF AAAA championship basketball game at the L.A. Sports Arena.

The triumph enabled the Tarbabes to become the first team in CIF history to complete successive undefeated seasons. The win over Sunny Hills, concluding a 30-0 season, was the 62nd in a row for Compton, a record.

Compton had to work to give the crown to coach Bill Armstrong. Larry Hollyfield, who has played in all of the winning games, fouled out with 3:42 remaining and the Lancers, who had trailed throughout the game, challenged strongly.

The score was 52-47 when Hollyfield exited. Three points by Frank Dehn made it 52-50 with 3:21 remaining.

Sunny Hills finally tied the contest at 54-54 on four free throws by Brad McNamara and Kim Swaim.

Lee made two free throws with 43 seconds remaining to put Compton ahead to stay and Brown wrapped things up with a tip-in and free throw.

A crowd of 7,150 saw Hollyfield named tournament MVP. Teammate Donald Womack was selected to the all-tourney team.

Others on the all-tourney club were McNamara and Don Paul of Sunny Hills, John Roth of Santa Maria, Bob Sherwin of Katella, Keith Batiste of Verbum Dei, Bud Fablan of Notre Dame and Jim Tough of Beverly Hills.

Beverly Hills captured the 3-A crown by defeating Santa Maria, 74-62.

Keith Batiste scored 33 points as Verbum Dei fought off a last quarter rally to nip Katella 90-87 for the 2-A basketball championship at the L.A. Sports Arena.

New Mexico Team Claims NAIA Crown

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dale Severson, a junior who had hit only 19 points in four previous tournament games, was the winning spark Saturday night as Eastern New Mexico rolled over Maryland State 99-76 to win the championship of the 32nd NAIA basketball tournament.

A lean, bespectacled lad from DeKalb, Ill., Severson fired a first-half Eastern New Mexico comeback that erased a 10-point Maryland State lead. Severson hit 15 in the first half and added 10 after intermission for 25 points and scoring honors.

Central Washington defeated Elizabeth City 96-82 to make third place in the week-long, 32-team tourney.

Debbie Beaten Twice; Atwood Churns to Win

Linda Gustavson of the Santa Clara Swim Club churned a 1:58.4 performance in the womens' 200-yard freestyle Saturday, easily beating Olympic triple gold medalist Debbie Meyer at City of Commerce.

Miss Meyer, recipient of the 1969 Sullivan Award, placed third behind Pokey Watson of the Santa Clara Swim Club. Miss Watson swam the course in 1:58.8 and Miss Meyer had a 1:59.0.

It was Debbie's second third-place finish in the Southern California Invitational Swim Meet. In the women's 400-yard individual medley, Sue Atwood, of the Lakewood Aquatic Club, stroked to a 4:39.6 victory, followed by Lynn Vidali, Santa Clara SC, 4:40.8, and Debbie with a 4:41.6.

Neither Debbie nor her coach at the Arden Hills Swim Club, Sherman Chavoor, was obviously disappointed by the losses.

"I'm not concerned because I got beat tonight," she told newsmen. "I'm working up to a peak in the indoor season which will be at the national indoor meet in Long Beach in three weeks.

"By then I should be in much better shape. I have gotten a slow start this season after the Olympics but I have done it on purpose because I'm also thinking about the big outdoor season."

Chavoor said the losses were expectable "considering such a long lay off after the Olympics. I think her progress is very good. Before the season is out she will be better than ever."

L.B. Masters, PCC Tie for 3rd

The Long Beach Masters and Pacific Coast Club tied for third place in the Class A men's volleyball tournament at Santa Monica City College Saturday.

The Maccabeahs defeated Santa Monica in the finals, 15-4, 4-15, 15-7.

Ralph Backstrom scored two goals and assisted on another, keeping Montreal atop the Eastern Division with a 3-1 victory over Chicago.

Toronto scored five third-period goals to come from behind and defeat the struggling Boston Bruins, 7-4.

Joel Watson' second goal of the season midway through the third period gave Philadelphia a 2-2 tie with the Minnesota North Stars.

The Flyers remained in fourth place in the West Division four points ahead of the stars.

Shutout Wins for Cal State

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

John Keisler and Dan McCarthy pitched four-hit shoutouts and Steve Brown and Charlie Beech were offensive heroes Saturday as the Cal State Long Beach baseball team downed visiting Loyola twice, 3-0 and 1-0.

The double decision was a big part of a successful Spring Sports Day, snapping a two-game 49er losing streak and hiking the CSLB, season standard to 7-5.

Keisler, the remarkable freshman from Jordan High School, struck out six and allowed only one runner past second in collecting his third win in an unbeaten season and his first collegiate shutout.

Brown started State's scoring in the fourth. With one out, he singled. With two out, Brown went to third on a single by Larry Albright and then scored on a hustle play when the rightfielder walked the ball back in and handed it to the second baseman.

Albright went to second on the throw home and scored on Jim Carter's base hit.

Keisler, who had a perfect day at the plate, scored CSLB's final run in the seventh, walking and reaching third on another walk and a single before scoring on Brown's infield hit.

McCarthy pitched nearly as well in the nightcap, spacing four singles and fanning seven on the way to his third triumph in four decisions.

But McCarthy could get no better than a tie with Loyola's Dave Sehnem until Beech came to bat with two out in the eighth.

Bill Hackett and Brown were on base when the 49ers' leading batsman, Beech, drove a 2-1 pitch on one hop over the 390-foot sign in center field, scoring Hackett.

That double—Cal State's first extra base hit in three games — started another streak for Beech, who had a 14-for-19 tear ended in the first game when he was hitless in four at-bats. He singled and doubled in three trips in the nightcap.

Spikers Tumble Aztecs

By JOHN DIXON
Staff Writer

Cal State Long Beach's track and field longshots galloped like favorites Saturday and tumbled San Diego State, 75-70.

Coach Jack Rose's 49ers have fewer stars than the Big Dipper, but their team balance is better than a stable of gymnasts.

They scored heavily in all events except the mile, javelin and high jump.

Better than expected performances in the sprints and two-mile turned the victory key for Long Beach.

The 49ers outscored San Diego 14-4 in the dashes. Jack Hildreth won the 100 in a 9.7 sizzler, and Clarence Palmer established a meet record of 21.6 in winning the 220.

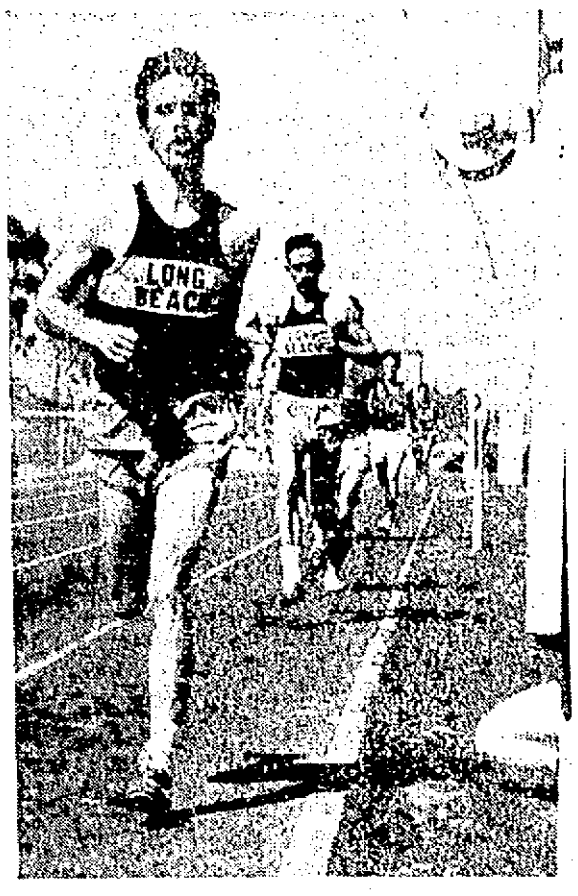

The team race was still open when the two-mile started, but when it ended, so did San Diego's chances.

Lenny Jay won in 9:16.8, Roger Seymour was second in 9:23.4, and San Diego got only one point from Bud Johnson's third place 9:32.8.

Five meet records were erased — Palmer's 21.6 220, the 171-5 discus throw by Tom Kirkwold of the 49ers, 3:15.7 mile relay by San Diego, and Aztec Wes Williams' 47-7 triple jump and 53.8 intermediate hurdles.

Williams also anchored the mile relay team with a 47.2 440, while Al Carlson of Long Beach was clocked at 47.3.

Cinder Sizzlers in Southern Counties

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

Warm weather brought out the best in Southern California's top prep track and field performers during the 48th running of the Southern Counties Meet Saturday at Westminster High.

Meet records were lowered in four events as athletes got a chance to unlimber against top-flight competition for the first time this season under sunny skies.

Record breakers were:

—Whittier quarter-miler Bill Sims whose 47.1-440, 22.3-220 double win earned him athlete of the meet honors. Ulis Williams of Compton set the old 440 mark of 47.3 eight years ago.

—Decker Underwood of South Torrance, a CIF mile runnerup to Lakewood's Maury Greer last year is the future book favorite now after a last lap surge beat Tom Keefer of Anaheim. Underwood's time was 4:13.8.

—Slender Ruben Chappins of Excelsior, who held Ron Johnson of West Torrance to his outside for nearly three and one-half laps to win the day's best race, the small schools 2-mile in 9:08.9. Johnson was caught at 9:09.1, both well under the former mark of 9:10.2.

—Centennial High, the high school answer to San Jose State, had two sophomores on its mile relay team and still had enough to beat Compton in a blistering finale, 3:19.1 to 3:20.1 for the last record.

Although Compton successfully defended its team title in the large school division, it was also a blue-ribbon day for Moore League performers.

Lakewood finished third with 24 points. Steve Lauriano won the shotput (60-3 ¾), Steve Gibson the 220 (22.2) and Bob Somesan an all-alone mile in 4:22.9.

Bob Langston, who has been sick most of the week, won one 440 in 48.9 while Poly's Jim Chaffin (9.28:9-2-mile) and Robert Stockton (19.2-180 low hurdles) took first places.

Keefer (Anaheim) 4:15.9, Lucer (Valencia) 4:27.2, Bernard (El Rancho) 4:30.1, Blydenburgh (Torrance) 4:31.8; (Race 2) — Sorensen (Lake.) 4:22.9, Lindemann (Millikan) 4:25.5, White (Santa Monica) 4:30.9, Bennett (Sunny Hills) 4:31.3, Bandy (Inglewood) 4:31.8.
2-mile — Chaffin (Poly) 9:28.9, MacPherson (P. Verdes) 9:33.7, Davis (Garden Grove) 9:35.5, Pryor (Millikan) 9:43.1, French (S. Torrance) 9:47.7.
120HH — Johnson (Santa Monica) 14.2, Donaldson (Compton) 14.5, Flevlin (Avoin) 14.5, Kinsman (Sunny Hills), Kadlec (Eisenhower).

Russians Whip U.S. in Track

MOSCOW (AP)— America's Leon Coleman twice tied the indoor record in the 50-meter hurdles and Gennady Bliznetsov of the Soviet Union cleared 17 feet in the pole vault Saturday as the Russians out-classed a pick-up U.S. squad in an international track and field meet at Lenin Stadium.

Coleman, from Winston-Salem, N.C., first tied the record of 6.4 seconds in his semifinal heat in the 50 meter hurdles, then matched the mark again in beating out teammate Gary Powers of Los Angeles in the final. Powers clocked 6.5.

Bliznetsov, 28-year-old physical education major from Kharkov, vaulted 17¾, setting a Russian record. He tried at 17-6¾ in an attempt to break the indoor mark but missed three times.

The Spirit Of a 76er

"I liked the West Coast and I was happy in Los Angeles. But I realize that, being in the profession that I am, you take the bitter with the sweet."—Archie Clark.

To Archie Clark, it came as no surprise when the Lakers traded him to Philadelphia. The move had more advance notice than the circus coming to town but, for Clark, considerably less joy.

The other day Archie was asked how he felt about the swap that sent him and two other Lakers to the 76ers, who were desperate to unload Wilt Chamberlain. Was he better off now?

"In terms of what?" he replied laconically.

Most athletes involved in trades are able to say eventually that, once over the initial hurt, they have benefitted. They feel needed.

For Clark, though, he was going from a team that couldn't spare him to a team that didn't need him in a city that didn't enchant him.

"In terms of finances, it helped me very much," he will concede, "but I would prefer the West Coast to the East. The area isn't too bad and the people here aren't bad, but I'm a West Coast man."

CLARK IS ALSO a sensitive man, as few will admit. With the Lakers he was an All-Star guard. With the 76ers he is an alternate guard. It must grate a guy's pride.

"Well, uh, no it doesn't . . . well, I'll tell ya, it's . . . you know." Then Archie lets his feelings flow.

"You get used to the same plan, like I was the last couple of years. I was a starter or a regular or whatever you wanta call it. I played more and, as a result, you get in the habit of doing certain things, and getting certain results."

The 76ers have perhaps the best set of guards in the National Basketball Assn.—Clark, Hal Greer and Wally Jones. Sometimes they use all three at once, making up in hustle what the team lacks in height. But usually only two play, leaving one on the bench. Too often, Archie feels, he is the one on the bench.

"I'm playing maybe almost half as much as I played in Los Angeles. A lot of times it's kind of difficult for anyone to see exactly what you're doing out there because of the limited amount of time you're playing.

"I don't mind doing it this way as long as we win . . . but in certain situations, I would rather have seen myself in there. You want to be in there."

PERHAPS OUT of bitterness, Clark said shortly after the trade last summer that by acquiring the often troublesome Chamberlain, the Lakers, already blessed with two superstars in Elgin Baylor and Jerry West (listed alphabetically to avoid preference), were not necessarily acquiring an "automatic" NBA title.

Archie chuckled now at his remarks, which have proven true. Superstars do not make a super team.

"Well, you've got guys who are kind of set in their ways," Archie says. "They all have to bend a little. In fact, I've been looking at the games they have won this last part of the season and there are indications that that's happening. If this is the case, they'll be tough."

"I like to play the game the way it's supposed to be played . . . involve myself with helping everyone. If I can sacrifice my talents or use my talents in a way to make it easier for someone else, I'll do it. I don't say that the majority of the players in the league are playing that way."

The 76ers thrashed the Lakers in the season series, five wins to one, which is of no special satisfaction to Clark, he says.

"I have no quarrel; I have no vendetta that I have to go out against the Lakers and do a particular thing. The Los Angeles people treated me nice."

Philadelphia's game plan against the Lakers was simple: Keep the ball away from the big guys.

"I think their guard situation was a little bit raggedy the first part of the season," Archie says. "If they're getting a lot of pressure from, say, an opponent's guards, that can give 'em trouble because they can't get the ball down to the big guy, they can't get it to Elgin.

"So there are still ways a team can get around losing to L. A., but they have to play that type of game. We, the 76ers, were successful in doing that. We controlled the tempo of the game through the guards."

ARTISTICALLY, it has been a good season for Clark. Last weekend he went over the 1,000-point mark for his career, and Wednesday night, perhaps seeing a little more floor time than usual, scored 25 against Boston. The hot race in the [illegible] Division keeps a guy interested, even when [illegible]

"We have a g[illegible] they all work real hard and we've [illegible] consistently," Archie says, "so all you can do is go out there and do what you can do.

"But when it loses all its fun I think I'm gonna give it up. Well . . . money'd be the toughest part to give up right now."

Blistered Ryun Leads Kansas to NCAA Title

DETROIT (AP) — Defending champion Jim Ryun, almost ruled out of the meet after quitting in Friday night's two-mile, won the mile run in a photo finish to pace Kansas to the team championship in the NCAA Indoor Track Championships Saturday.

It took an overnight ruling by the meet's jury of appeals to certify Ryun for his try at a third NCAA mile title, and the star Jayhawker edged Villanova's Marty Liquori at the tape to win, although each was clocked in 4:02.6.

After Ryun, defending champion, limped off the track after three laps of the two-mile Friday night, coach Jumbo Elliott of defending team champion Villanova protested that Ryun had dropped out without an honest effort, apparently to conserve himself for the mile run.

Ryun said he had blisters on both feet and an ailing knee. He said he was doubtful he could compete in the mile.

Kansas wound up with a record 41½ points, topping the previous high of 35 1-3 set last year by Villanova. Villanova had 33 points.

The meet produced three meet records, including a 7-¾ high jump by Ron Jourdan of Florida, while two meet records, in the 60-yard high hurdles and 60-yard dash were tied.

Third place went to San Jose State with 19½ points. Tied for fourth at 16 each were Tennessee and Southern California, whose world record holder and Olympic champion, Bob Seagren, was upset in the pole vault. Although Seagren and Lee Smith of Miami each cleared 16-6, first place went to Smith on fewest misses.

Villanova came up with four firsts, including triumphs by Olympian Erv Hall in the 60 high hurdles and the distance medley relay.

The thrilling mile run saw Ryun jump in front closely trailed by Liquori. The Villanova star took the lead after the fifth lap of the 11-lap event and held it until midway in the final turn.

Ryun turned on his patented kick, almost passed Liquori, but as they straightened for the final 30 yards to the tape they were matching stride for stride. At the tape Ryun lunged ahead by inches to get the judges' verdict. Ryun set the meet record of 3:58.6 as a sophomore in 1967.

Hall, who won the silver medal in the 110-meter hurdles at the Olympics at Mexico City, raced to a 7.0 victory in the hurdles, defeating George Carty of San Jose State by two yards.

Hall matched the meet record first set by Southern Cal's Earl McCullouch in 1967 and subsequently tied by Hall and last year's champion, Rich Flowers of Tennessee.

The two-mile relay went to Kansas State with a superb anchor stint by Ken Swenson, Big Eight half-mile champion. Kansas State was clocked in 7:32.2.

Collett Runs 45.8 as UCLA Tops ASU

Wayne Collett ran away from Olympic bronze medalist Ron Freeman in the 440-yard dash in 45.8 seconds as UCLA scored a 103-51 track and field victory Saturday over Arizona State U.

Collett, a UCLA sophomore, sped past Freeman on the final turn, opening the margin to five yards down the homestretch. Freeman of Arizona State clocked 46.3 as he held off a fast-closing Len Van Hofwegen of UCLA, who was timed in 46.4.

Collett returned to anchor the winning UCLA mile relay team in 47.1. The Bruins trailed when Van Hofwegen got the baton for the third leg, but his 43.9 let [illegible] Collett a 10-yard lead.

Shutout Wins for Cal State

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

John Keisler and Dan McCarthy pitched four-hit shoutouts and Steve Brown and Charlie Beech were offensive heroes Saturday as the Cal State Long Beach baseball team downed visiting Loyola twice, 3-0 and 1-0.

The double decision was a big part of a successful Spring Sports Day, snapping a two-game 49er losing streak and hiking the CSLB, season standard to 7-5.

Keisler, the remarkable freshman from Jordan High School, struck out six and allowed only one runner past second in collecting his third win in an unbeaten season and his first collegiate shutout.

Brown started State's scoring in the fourth. With one out, he singled. With two out, Brown went to third on a single by Larry Albright and then scored on a hustle play when the rightfielder walked the ball back in and handed it to the second baseman.

Albright went to second on the throw home and scored on Jim Carter's base hit.

Keisler, who had a perfect day at the plate, scored CSLB's final run in the seventh, walking and reaching third on another walk and a single before scoring on Brown's infield hit.

McCarthy pitched nearly as well in the nightcap, spacing four singles and fanning seven on the way to his third triumph in four decisions.

But McCarthy could get no better than a tie with Loyola's Dave Sehnem until Beech came to bat with two out in the eighth.

Bill Hackett and Brown were on base when the 49ers' leading batsman, Beech, drove a 2-1 pitch on one hop over the 390-foot sign in center field, scoring Hackett.

That double—Cal State's first extra base hit in three games — started another streak for Beech, who had a 14-for-19 tear ended in the first game when he was hitless in four at-bats. He singled and doubled in three trips in the nightcap.

Cal State Long Beach's track and field longshots galloped like favorites Saturday and tumbled San Diego State, 75-70.

Coach Jack Rose's 49ers have fewer stars than the Big Dipper, but their team balance is better than a stable of gymnasts.

They scored heavily in all events except the mile, javelin and high jump.

Better than expected performances in the sprints and two-mile turned the victory key for Long Beach.

The 49ers outscored San Diego 14-4 in the dashes. Jack Hildreth won the 100 in a 9.7 sizzler, and Clarence Palmer established a meet record of 21.6 in winning the 220.

The team race was still open when the two-mile started, but when it ended, so did San Diego's chances.

Lenny Jay won in 9:16.8, Roger Seymour was second in 9:23.4, and San Diego got only one point from Bud Johnson's third place 9:32.8.

Five meet records were erased — Palmer's 21.6 220, the 171-5 discus throw by Tom Kirkwold of the 49ers, 3:15.7 mile relay by San Diego, and Aztec Wes Williams' 47-7 triple jump and 53.8 intermediate hurdles.

Williams also anchored the mile relay team with a 47.2 440, while Al Carlson of Long Beach was clocked at 47.3.

Cinder Sizzlers in Southern Counties

Warm weather brought out the best in Southern California's top prep track and field performers during the 48th running of the Southern Counties Meet Saturday at Westminster High.

Meet records were lowered in four events as athletes got a chance to unlimber against top-flight competition for the first time this season under sunny skies.

Record breakers were:

—Whittier quarter-miler Bill Sims whose 47.1-440, 22.3-220 double win earned him athlete of the meet honors. Ulis Williams of Compton set the old 440 mark of 47.3 eight years ago.

—Decker Underwood of South Torrance, a CIF mile runnerup to Lakewood's Maury Greer last year is the future book favorite now after a last lap surge beat Tom Keefer of Anaheim. Underwood's time was 4:13.8.

—Slender Ruben Chappins of Excelsior, who held Ron Johnson of West Torrance to his outside for nearly three and one-half laps to win the day's best race, the small schools 2-mile in 9:08.9. Johnson was caught at 9:09.1, both well under the former mark of 9:10.2.

—Centennial High, the high school answer to San Jose State, had two sophomores on its mile relay team and still had enough to beat Compton in a blistering finale, 3:19.1 to 3:20.1 for the last record.

Although Compton successfully defended its team title in the large school division, it was also a blue-ribbon day for Moore League performers.

Lakewood finished third with 24 points. Steve Lauriano won the shotput (60-3 ¾), Steve Gibson the 220 (22.2) and Bob Somesan an all-alone mile in 4:22.9.

Bob Langston, who has been sick most of the week, won one 440 in 48.9 while Poly's Jim Chaffin (9.28:9-2-mile) and Robert Stockton (19.2-180 low hurdles) took first places.

Blistered Ryun Leads Kansas to NCAA Title

DETROIT (AP) — Defending champion Jim Ryun, almost ruled out of the meet after quitting in Friday night's two-mile, won the mile run in a photo finish to pace Kansas to the team championship in the NCAA Indoor Track Championships Saturday.

It took an overnight ruling by the meet's jury of appeals to certify Ryun for his try at a third NCAA mile title, and the star Jayhawker edged Villanova's Marty Liquori at the tape to win, although each was clocked in 4:02.6.

After Ryun, defending champion, limped off the track after three laps of the two-mile Friday night, coach Jumbo Elliott of defending team champion Villanova protested that Ryun had dropped out without an honest effort, apparently to conserve himself for the mile run.

Ryun said he had blisters on both feet and an ailing knee. He said he was doubtful he could compete in the mile.

Kansas wound up with a record 41½ points, topping the previous high of 35 1-3 set last year by Villanova. Villanova had 33 points.

The meet produced three meet records, including a 7-¾ high jump by Ron Jourdan of Florida, while two meet records, in the 60-yard high hurdles and 60-yard dash were tied.

Third place went to San Jose State with 19½ points. Tied for fourth at 16 each were Tennessee and Southern California, whose world record holder and Olympic champion, Bob Seagren, was upset in the pole vault. Although Seagren and Lee Smith of Miami each cleared 16-6, first place went to Smith on fewest misses.

Villanova came up with four firsts, including triumphs by Olympian Erv Hall in the 60 high hurdles and the distance medley relay.

The thrilling mile run saw Ryun jump in front closely trailed by Liquori. The Villanova star took the lead after the fifth lap of the 11-lap event and held it until midway in the final turn.

Ryun turned on his patented kick, almost passed Liquori, but as they straightened for the final 30 yards to the tape they were matching stride for stride. At the tape Ryun lunged ahead by inches to get the judges' verdict. Ryun set the meet record of 3:58.6 as a sophomore in 1967.

Hall, who won the silver medal in the 110-meter hurdles at the Olympics at Mexico City, raced to a 7.0 victory in the hurdles, defeating George Carty of San Jose State by two yards.

Hall matched the meet record first set by Southern Cal's Earl McCullouch in 1967 and subsequently tied by Hall and last year's champion, Rich Flowers of Tennessee.

The two-mile relay went to Kansas State with a superb anchor stint by Ken Swenson, Big Eight half-mile champion. Kansas State was clocked in 7:32.2.

RICH ROBERTS

The Spirit Of a 76er

"I liked the West Coast and I was happy in Los Angeles. But I realize that, being in the profession that I am, you take the hitter with the sweet."—Archie Clark.

To Archie Clark, it came as no surprise when the Lakers traded him to Philadelphia. The move had more advance notice than the circus coming to town but, for Clark, considerably less joy.

The other day Archie was asked how he felt about the swap that sent him and two other Lakers to the 76ers, who were desperate to unload Wilt Chamberlain. Was he better off now?

"In terms of what?" he replied laconically.

Most athletes involved in trades are able to say eventually that, once over the initial hurt, they have benefitted. They feel needed.

For Clark, though, he was going from a team that couldn't spare him to a team that didn't need him in a city that didn't enchant him.

"In terms of finances, it helped me very much," he will concede, "but I would prefer the West Coast to the East. The area isn't too bad and the people here aren't bad, but I'm a West Coast man."

CLARK IS ALSO a sensitive man, as few will admit. With the Lakers he was an All-Star guard. With the 76ers he is an alternate guard. It must grate a guy's pride.

"Well, uh, no it doesn't . . . well, I'll tell ya, it's . . . you know." Then Archie lets his feelings flow.

"You get used to the same plan, like I was the last couple of years. I was a starter or a regular or whatever you wanta call it. I played more and, as a result, you get in the habit of doing certain things, and getting certain results."

The 76ers have perhaps the best set of guards in the National Basketball Assn.—Clark, Hal Greer and Wally Jones. Sometimes they use all three at once, making up in hustle what the team lacks in height. But usually only two play, leaving one on the bench. Too often, Archie feels, he is the one on the bench.

"I'm playing maybe almost half as much as I played in Los Angeles. A lot of times it's kind of difficult for anyone to see exactly what you're doing out there because of the limited amount of time you're playing.

"I don't mind doing it this way as long as we win . . . but in certain situations, I would rather have seen myself in there. You want to be in there."

PERHAPS OUT of bitterness, Clark said shortly after the trade last summer that by acquiring the often troublesome Chamberlain, the Lakers, already blessed with two superstars in Elgin Baylor and Jerry West (listed alphabetically to avoid preference), were not necessarily acquiring an "automatic" NBA title.

"Archie chuckled now at his remarks, which have proven true. Superstars do not make a super team.

"Well, you've got guys who are kind of set in their ways," Archie says. "They all have to bend a little. In fact, I've been looking at the games they have won this last part of the season and there are indications that that's happening. If this is the case, they'll be tough."

"I like to play the game the way it's supposed to be played . . . involve myself with helping everyone. If I can sacrifice my talents or use my talents in a way to make it easier for someone else, I'll do it. I don't say that the majority of the players in the league are playing that way."

The 76ers thrashed the Lakers in the season series, five wins to one, which is of no special satisfaction to Clark, he says.

"I have no quarrel; I have no vendetta that I have to go out against the Lakers and do a particular thing. The Los Angeles people treated me nice."

Philadelphia's game plan against the Lakers was simple: Keep the ball away from the big guys.

"I think their guard situation was a little bit raggedy the first part of the season," Archie says. "If they're getting a lot of pressure from, say, an opponent's guards, that can give 'em trouble because they can't get the ball down to the big guy, they can't get it in to Elgin.

"So there are still ways a team can get around losing to L. A., but they have to play that type of game. We, the 76ers, were successful in doing that. We controlled the tempo of the game through the guards."

ARTISTICALLY, it has been a good season for Clark. Last weekend he went over the 1,000-point mark for his career, and Wednesday night, perhaps seeing a little more floor time than usual, scored 25 against Boston. The hot race in the Eastern Division keeps a guy interested, even when he's not [illegible].

"We have a [illegible] all work real hard and we've [illegible] consistently," Archie says, "so all you can do is go out there and do what you can do.

"But when it loses all its fun I think I'm gonna give it up. Well . . . money'd be the toughest part to give up right now."

Collett Runs 45.8 as UCLA Tops ASU

Wayne Collett ran away from Olympic bronze medalist Ron Freeman in the 440-yard dash in 45.8 seconds as UCLA scored a 103-51 track and field victory Saturday over Arizona State U.

Russians Whip U.S. in Track

MOSCOW (AP)— America's Leon Coleman twice tied the indoor record in the 50-meter hurdles and Gennady Bliznetsov of the Soviet Union cleared 17 feet in the pole vault Saturday as the Russians out-classed a pick-up U.S. squad in an international track and field meet at Lenin Stadium.

Coleman, from Winston-Salem, N.C., first tied the record of 6.4 seconds in his semifinal heat in the 50 meter hurdles, then matched the mark again in beating out teammate Gary Powers of Los Angeles in the final. Powers clocked 6.5.

Bliznetsov, 28-year-old physical education major from Kharkov, vaulted 17¾, setting a Russian record. He tried at 17-6¾ in an attempt to break the indoor mark but missed three times.

WITH ONLY 3 WEEKS LEFT BEFORE OPENER—

Dodgers See Improvement in Defense, Run Production

By FRED CLAIRE
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — It has been three weeks since the Dodgers arrived here for spring training. In another three weeks the club will open its National League schedule at Cincinnati.

What type of club will the Dodgers have in 1969? Will the momentum gained in September of 1968 be carried over? Or is this a club in the pattern of the last two seasons, when the result was an eighth-place finish and a tie for seventh.

This much is certain about the Dodgers of 1969:

The defense will be improved, particularly on the left side of the infield. The pitchers hated to look in that direction last year when balls were hit to third baseman Bob Bailey and shortstop Zoilo Versalles.

The production of runs will be increased, particularly if Andy Kosco has the type of year he had in 1968. Kosco slugged 15 home runs for the New York Yankees. And he should benefit by the switch to Dodger Stadium. Left field in Yankee stadium is forever. The moving of home plate 10 feet closer to the fences at Dodger Stadium should have some effect. "We have four men who must come back with good years with the bat," says vice president Al Campanis. "They are Willie Davis, Ron Fairly, Jim Lefebvre and Wes Parker."

If a guess was to be made at this point, here's what the Dodger roster of 1969 would be like:

Catchers — Tom Haller and Jeff Torborg.

Infielders — Wes Parker, Jim Lefebvre, Bill Sudakis, Ted Sizemore, Paul Popovich and Ken Boyer.

Outfielders — Ron Fairly, Willie Crawford, Willie Davis, Len Gabrielson, Bill Russell, Ted Savage and Kosco.

Pitchers — Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Bill Singer, Don Sutton, Jim Brewer, Pete Mikkelsen, John Purdin, Alan Foster, Bobby Darwin and Joe Moeller.

The most pleasant surprises of the spring are Sizemore and Russell.

The major disappointment, and strictly due to the effects of an injury, is Bill Grabarkewitz.

The 23-year-old Grabarkewitz batted .308 as the Albuquerque shortstop last season, and he stole 31 bases. The Dodgers had planned to promote Grabarkewitz to the parent club late last August when third baseman Sudakis was called up.

The same night word was on its way to Albuquerque to have "Grabby" catch a plane to join the Dodgers, the young shortstop suffered a broken ankle. And it hasn't responded this spring.

Grabarkewitz would have been the fastest man in the Dodger camp this spring. Instead, he limps and there is pain. "It could be two or three months before I'm back to anything resembling normal," says Grabarkewitz.

Due to the injury, the Dodgers express concern at shortstop. Popovich took over the position in September of last season, and it wasn't until then the club started to move.

"Popo" is the man with the sure hands, but his major league batting average is .226.

He will win the position unless young Sizemore — the spring sensation — continues his fantastic progress.

The Dodgers had converted Sizemore from a catcher to a second baseman during the Arizona instruction league, but now he is being tried at shortstop.

"We want to see what he can do there," says manager Walt Alston. "We like his bat, his quickness and his attitude. We want to find out if he has the ability to play shortstop."

Alston has been high on Russell, a 20-year-old who has seen three seasons of duty at Ogden, Duquque and Bakersfield. Last year he hit 17 homers, batted .280 and stole 23 bases for Bakersfield.

Alston likes speed, and Russell has it. He also has proven himself a standout defensive man. The Dodgers' main concern with Russell is they don't want to promote him too fast and take the chance of hurting his confidence. Right now, he looks like a player who will make the club.

"We really haven't had good speed since we lost Maury (Wills)," says one Dodger official. "We used to be able to get a run without a hit. Maury would walk, steal a base, take another on an infield out and come home on a fly ball. Russell has that type of speed."

Angels Wonder if Washburn for Real or Spring Phenom

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Greg Washburn, a rookie pitcher with the Angels, is 22 years old. Just a baby, in baseball lingo. He's pitched in little more than a dozen games professionally, none higher than the class A level.

But young Greg Washburn has been a pleasant surprise this spring. He's pitched well in the spring exhibition games, displaying considerable confidence and an amazing amount of mound savvy.

He could be a big, big winner for the Angels. Then, again, he might be just another kid who throws well in the spring, never to be heard from again.

The question then, is what do you do with Washburn and other rookies like him? Do you keep them on the big club or ship them to the minors?

Dick Walsh, the Angels' general manager was talking about some of the Halos' rookies during the Angels' 6-2 win over the Giants here Saturday.

"We've got some good-looking kids here," smiled the GM as he leaned back in his boxseat chair, soaking up some Arizona sun.

"We think we have a shot at winning this thing (American League West). And the thing we've got to decide is which kids can help us win and which will be better off in the minors.

Walsh, who'll have the final say on who stays and who goes, then offered his comments of some of the Angels' top rookies and newcomers:

Washburn: "To me he's the surprise of the spring. A definite major league prospect. He's shown us a lot but I don't know. This just may be his best spring. We plan on looking more at this boy."

Rudy May, pitcher: "Everything I heard about Rudy May before seeing him pitch was about his sore arm. Everyone told me he couldn't pitch. But he's fine now. He's a major league pitcher. We're thinking of Rudy in terms of being our No. 5 starter."

Pedro Borbon, pitcher: "We drafted Pedro from Modesto. He's got a good arm, penty of courage and he came to pitch. Rig (manage Bill Rigney) and I really like this boy. He's a little crude in spots but the way he's going he'll make the staff someplace."

Tom Egan, catcher: "One of the bright spots of the spring, of course. He certainly has a chance to make the club. And if he does it'll certainly help us in other ways. By that I mean Tom Satriano could then paly first base, perhaps, if we run into trouble over there. Tom can catch in the majors. It's a question of his hitting, something he's certainly impressing us with so far this spring."

Jim Spencer, first base: "He's the playmaker type. There's nothing he can't do around the bag. Again, it's the hitting that's a question mark. He'll play someplace, whether it's here or at Hawaii (the Angels' Triple A farm club). We aren't going to let him just sit on a bench somewhere."

Jarvis Tatum, outfielder: "He's still a little crude in spots. He's not the real good baserunner just yet that he promises to be. And he gets jammed at the plate. But we can two platoon Jarvis, using him against lefthanders. We're looking for big things from Tatum one of these days."

Bill Voos, outfielder: Bill isn't a rookie but he is new to us. He's come to play and he wants to play with us. He can do the job. He's playing in the outfield right now but could be he'll work into first base."

Walsh then folded his roster and tucked it away in his shirtpocket. "I get a little excited talking about some of these kids," he smiled. "We've got some good youngsters here, like I said and they're making it awfully tough for us. But I have to like it that way."

* * * *

ANGEL ANGLES: May turned in another strong effort, spinning five innings, allowing the thundering Giants only two hits and one run. His stint is the longest so far this spring for any Angel hurler . . . Hoyt Wilhelm pitched the final inning, blanking the Giants although allowing two hits . . . Egan kept up his hot spring hitting with a double in four trips. He's now 8 for-15 (.533) with five RBIs, tying him with Tatum for the spring lead . . . Washburn and Clyde Wright pitch today in Tucson against the Indians, then it's off to Yuma and then Hollywood for three consecutive dates with the Padres . . . Saturday's win snapped a three-game dry spell and squared the Angels' spring record at 4-4 . . . Spencer went 2-for-2 hiking his spring mark 100 points to .167. Before Saturday he had but one hit in 15 at bats . . . The Angels cuffed San Francisco starter Bob Bolin for five runs on seven hits.

WON'T BE 'AVIS' FOR LONG

Sprague Earns Congressional Cup With 'Perfect' Sailing

By DONNELL CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

Henry W. Sprague III, skippering Madrugador and representing the U.S. Navy Yacht Club of Long Beach, defeated nine other skippers in three days of racing and won the fifth Congressional Cup Saturday.

Sprague, whose home is in Newport Beach, picked his crew of Navy sailing experts several weeks ago and set out to make the group as perfect as possible. He did just that, defeating Tommy Pickard (Long Beach Yacht Club) by one minute flat in the final race on Saturday.

Previously on Saturday he had beaten Buzz Boettger, the 18-year-old flash from the California YC who sailed Hanalei.

Sprague's closest victim Saturday was Lowell North, the Olympic champion, who crossed the finish line 15 seconds behind Sprague in a duel that was bow and bow most of the way.

Sprague was introduced to sailing by his father when he was seven years of age, and he recalls that on his second sailing venture in Newport Harbor he broke the mast of his Snowbird. He was a three-time national Finn Champion and won the North American Finn title twice.

His introduction to the Cal-40 class, which is used exclusively in the Long Beach YC-sponsored Congressional Cup Race, came last year when he crewed for Scott Allan, who finished in fourth place, while his brother, Skip, went on to win the cup that year.

There was a three-way tie for second place.

Boettger, Burke Sawyer (North American Yacht Racing Union) and North (San Diego YC) had six victories and three losses.

Possibly the most disappointed man in the race was Ches L. Rickard, who skippered the Royal Vancouver YC's Tilt O' the Kilt without a single victory.

Rickard, a pilot for Air Canada and 54 years of age, had had 20 years of sailing experience with many trophies to his credit, but he couldn't put Tilt O' the Kilt in the win column.

Sprague's victory enabled the Long Beach YC to put a local club name on the Congressional Cup for the first time. The cup, donated by an act of Congress in 1964, stays permanently in the Long Beach YC.

5—NEW YORK, AL EAST

Mantle

Houk

PROSPECTUS — Ralph Houk's youth program started paying off last season when Yanks climbed to fifth. This season, Yankees will have stronger infield, deeper pitching staff and, hopefully, better seasons from Al Downing and Tom Tresh.

PITCHING — Mel Stottlemyre won 21 games to lead pitching staff last season. Cool and unruffled, he's one of AL's best. Stan Bahnsen and Fritz Petersen emerged as strong starters, winning 17 and 12 games, respectively. Downing, who never reached his predicted potential, and Fred Talbot (a dismal 1-9) could strengthen staff even more with comebacks. Bullpen is sound with Steve Hamilton and Joe Verbanic. Rating: B.

CATCHING — Jake Gibbs did creditable job behind plate, but hit only .213. Yanks will look at John Ellis, a good minor-league hitter. Rating: C.

INFIELD — Mickey Mantle retirement hurts. Houk will experiment with infield, trying Bobby Murcer and Jerry Kenny (both service returnees) at second; where Horace Clark played last season and hit .210. Tresh will stay at third and try to rebound from .195 season. Rating: C.

PREDICTED FINISH: 5th IN EAST

White Sox Sink Dodgers in 9th on 2-Out Blow

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Duane Josephson lashed a two-out double in the ninth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Dodgers Saturday.

Loser Jim Brewer had retired the first two batters when Don Pavletich singled, then went all the way home on Josephson's double.

The game was played on a cricket field.

The Sox, scoring on Carlos May's double between singles by Sandy Alomar and Pete Ward in the fifth, took a 2-0 lead. But the Dodgers tied it in the same inning on singles by Wes Parker, Paul Popovich and Willie Davis and an error by May.

Dan Osinski, holding the Dodgers to one hit in the last three innings, picked up the victory.

Ted Has a Blast, Finally

Associated Press

The Washington Senators celebrated the arrival and signing of slugger Frank Howard Saturday by blasting their way out of an eight-game exhibition baseball losing streak with an 18-5 romp over the Atlanta Braves.

Cap Peterson poled three home runs for the Senators, who collected 19 hits and gave manager Ted Williams his first victory.

It was a big day too for the New York Yankees. Both the varsity and B squads turned in victories.

The Yankee first string got homers from Bobby Cox and Nate Oliver and downed Boston 6-5, despite four errors by shortstop Tom Tresh. Tony Conigliaro had two hits and two runs batted in and Ken Harrelson added a homer and a double for the Red Sox.

New York's B team beat Montreal 5-1 with Len Boehmer driving in three runs on a pair of singles.

Amos Otis, Ken Boswell and Cleon Jones had two hits each and the New York Mets downed the Kansas City Royals 5-3. Otis drove in Ron Swoboda, who had doubled, as the Mets snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning.

Jerry Buchek's third hit of the game, a ninth-inning double, drove in Phil Gagliano with the winning run and St. Louis edged Cincinnati 3-2. Jim Beauchamp and John Bench accounted for the Reds' runs with solo homers while Jim Hicks connected for the Cards.

Vikings Whip 'Gades, Move Into Tie for 2nd

By DAVE DANIEL

Some say hitting is the name of the game while others argue that pitching is.

Long Beach City College did both of them well Saturday to take a 6-1 Metropolitan Conference decision from Bakersfield College at Blair Field to conclude the first round of league play.

The Vikings now sport a 4-3 record and moved up two notches into a tie for second place with Bakersfield. Cerritos, which LBCC faces Tuesday, leads the pack with a 6-1 mark.

Coach Joe Hicks saw his Vikings outhit the opposition for the first time this year as LBCC rapped nine hits to Bakersfield's seven.

Centerfielder Ray Colin continued to lead the Viking hitting attack by collecting two hits, including a three-run inside the park homer in the eighth inning.

Ray Brown added another steady game from the mound for LBCC by giving up just four hits and one unearned run in six and a third innings.

The sophomore right-hander drove in the first Viking run in the second inning after Jay Morrison walked and was sacrificed to second by Jim Gmur. Steve Liebeck singled to put men on the corners and then Brown lined a hit to center for the run.

HOWARD DOUBLES PAY CHECK

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Big Frank Howard ended his holdout siege Saturday and signed a reported $100,000 contract that made him the highest paid Washington baseball player in history.

He also doubled the $50,000 salary of last season, when he hit 44 home runs, making it the biggest raise ever given a Senator.

"Including those in Congress," quipped the Senators' owner, Bob Short, who appeared at a hastily-called press conference here with his new manager, Ted Williams, and his super star.

The 6-foot-7 Howard, who once was acclaimed the future Babe Ruth, originally had asked for a $330,000 contract covering three years. Then he brought his demands down to $125,000 for one year.

During negotiations, he had threatened to retire from baseball.

"I was quite serious," he said after the contract signing announcement. "People who know me know I was serious. It was a matter of principle with me."

WITH ONLY 3 WEEKS LEFT BEFORE OPENER---

Dodgers See Improvement in Defense, Run Production

By FRED CLAIRE
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — It has been three weeks since the Dodgers arrived here for spring training. In another three weeks the club will open its National League schedule at Cincinnati.

What type of club will the Dodgers have in 1969? Will the momentum gained in September of 1968 be carried over? Or is this a club in the pattern of the last two seasons, when the result was an eighth-place finish and a tie for seventh.

This much is certain about the Dodgers of 1969:

The defense will be improved, particularly on the left side of the infield. The pitchers hated to look in that direction last year when balls were hit to third baseman Bob Bailey and shortstop Zoilo Versalles.

The production of runs will be increased, particularly if Andy Kosco has the type of year he had in 1968. Kosco slugged 15 home runs for the New York Yankees. And he should benefit by the switch to Dodger Stadium. Left field in Yankee stadium is forever. The moving of home plate 10 feet closer to the fences at Dodger Stadium should have some effect. "We have four men who must come back with good years with the bat," says vice president Al Campanis. "They are Willie Davis, Ron Fairly, Jim Lefebvre and Wes Parker."

If a guess was to be made at this point, here's what the Dodger roster of 1969 would be like:

Catchers — Tom Haller and Jeff Torborg.

Infielders — Wes Parker, Jim Lefebvre, Bill Sudakis, Ted Sizemore, Paul Popovich and Ken Boyer.

Outfielders — Ron Fairly, Willie Crawford, Willie Davis, Len Gabrielson, Bill Russell, Ted Savage and Kosco.

Pitchers — Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Bill Singer, Don Sutton, Jim Brewer, Pete Mikkelsen, John Purdin, Alan Foster, Bobby Darwin and Joe Moeller.

The most pleasant surprises of the spring are Sizemore and Russell.

The major disappointment, and strictly due to the effects of an injury, is Bill Grabarkewitz.

The 23-year-old Grabarkewitz batted .308 as the Albuquerque shortstop last season, and he stole 31 bases. The Dodgers had planned to promote Grabarkewitz to the parent club late last August when third baseman Sudakis was called up.

The same night word was on its way to Albuquerque to have "Grabby" catch a plane to join the Dodgers, the young shortstop suffered a broken ankle. And it hasn't responded this spring.

Grabarkewitz would have been the fastest man in the Dodger camp this spring. Instead, he limps and there is pain. "It could be two or three months before I'm back to anything resembling normal," says Grabarkewitz.

Due to the injury, the Dodgers express concern at shortstop. Popovich took over the position in September of last season, and it wasn't until then the club started to move.

"Popo" is the man with the sure hands, but his major league batting average is .226.

He will win the position unless young Sizemore — the spring sensation — continues his fantastic progress.

The Dodgers had converted Sizemore from a catcher to a second baseman during the Arizona instruction league, but now he is being tried at shortstop.

"We want to see what he can do there," says manager Walt Alston. "We like his bat, his quickness and his attitude. We want to find out if he has the ability to play shortstop."

Alston has been high on Russell, a 20-year-old who has seen three seasons of duty at Ogden, Duquque and Bakersfield. Last year he hit 17 homers, batted .280 and stole 23 bases for Bakersfield.

Alston likes speed, and Russell has it. He also has proven himself a standout defensive man. The Dodgers' main concern with Russell is they don't want to promote him too fast and take the chance of hurting his confidence. Right now, he looks like a player who will make the club.

"We really haven't had good speed since we lost Maury (Wills)," says one Dodger official. "We used to be able to get a run without a hit. Maury would walk, steal a base, take another on an infield out and come home on a fly ball. Russell has that type of speed."

Angels Wonder if Washburn for Real or Spring Phenom

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Greg Washburn, a rookie pitcher with the Angels, is 22 years old. Just a baby, in baseball lingo. He's pitched in little more than a dozen games professionally, none higher than the class A level.

But young Greg Washburn has been a pleasant surprise this spring. He's pitched well in the spring exhibition games, displaying considerable confidence and an amazing amount of mound savvy.

He could be a big, big winner for the Angels. Then, again, he might be just another kid who throws well in the spring, never to be heard from again.

The question then, is what do you do with Washburn and other rookies like him? Do you keep them on the big club or ship them to the minors?

Dick Walsh, the Angels' general manager was talking about some of the Halos' rookies during the Angels' 6-2 win over the Giants here Saturday.

"We've got some good-looking kids here," smiled the GM as he leaned back in his boxseat chair, soaking up some Arizona sun.

"We think we have a shot at winning this thing (American League West). And the thing we've got to decide is which kids can help us win and which will be better off in the minors.

Walsh, who'll have the final say on who stays and who goes, then offered his comments of some of the Angels' top rookies and newcomers:

Washburn: "To me he's the surprise of the spring. A definite major league prospect. He's shown us a lot but I don't know. This just may be his best spring. We plan on looking more at this boy."

Rudy May, pitcher: "Everything I heard about Rudy May before seeing him pitch was about his sore arm. Everyone told me he couldn't pitch. But he's fine now. He's a major league pitcher. We're thinking of Rudy in terms of being our No. 5 starter."

Pedro Borbon, pitcher: "We drafted Pedro from Modesto. He's got a good arm, penty of courage and he came to pitch. Rig (manage Bill Rigney) and I really like this boy. He's a little crude in spots but the way he's going he'll make the staff someplace."

Tom Egan, catcher:"One of the bright spots of the spring, of course. He certainly has a chance to make the club. And if he does it'll certainly help us in other ways. By that I mean Tom Satriano could then paly first base, perhaps, if we run into trouble over there. Tom can catch in the majors. It's a question of his hitting, something he's certainly impressing us with so far this spring."

Jim Spencer, first base: "He's the playmaker type. There's nothing he can't do around the bag. Again, it's the hitting that's a question mark. He'll play someplace, whether it's here or at Hawaii (the Angels' Triple A farm club). We aren't going to let him just sit on a bench somewhere."

Jarvis Tatum, outfielder: "He's still a little crude in spots. He's not the real good baserunner just yet that he promises to be. And he gets jammed at the plate. But we can two platoon Jarvis, using him against lefthanders. We're looking for big things from Tatum one of these days."

Bill Voos, outfielder: Bill isn't a rookie but he is new to us. He's come to play and he wants to play with us. He can do the job. He's playing in the outfield right now but could be he'll work into first base."

Walsh then folded his roster and tucked it away in his shirtpocket. "I get a little excited talking about some of these kids," he smiled. "We've got some good youngsters here, like I said and they're making it awfully tough for us. But I have to like it that way."

ANGEL ANGLES: May turned in another strong effort, spinning five innings, allowing the thundering Giants only two hits and one run. His stint is the longest so far this spring for any Angel hurler . . . Hoyt Wilhelm pitched the final inning, blanking the Giants although allowing two hits.

Egan kept up his hot spring hitting with a double in four trips. He's now 8 for 15 (.533) with five RBIs, tying him with Tatum for the spring lead.

Washburn and Clyde Wright pitch today in Tucson against the Indians, then it's off to Yuma and then Holtville for three consecutive dates with the Padres.

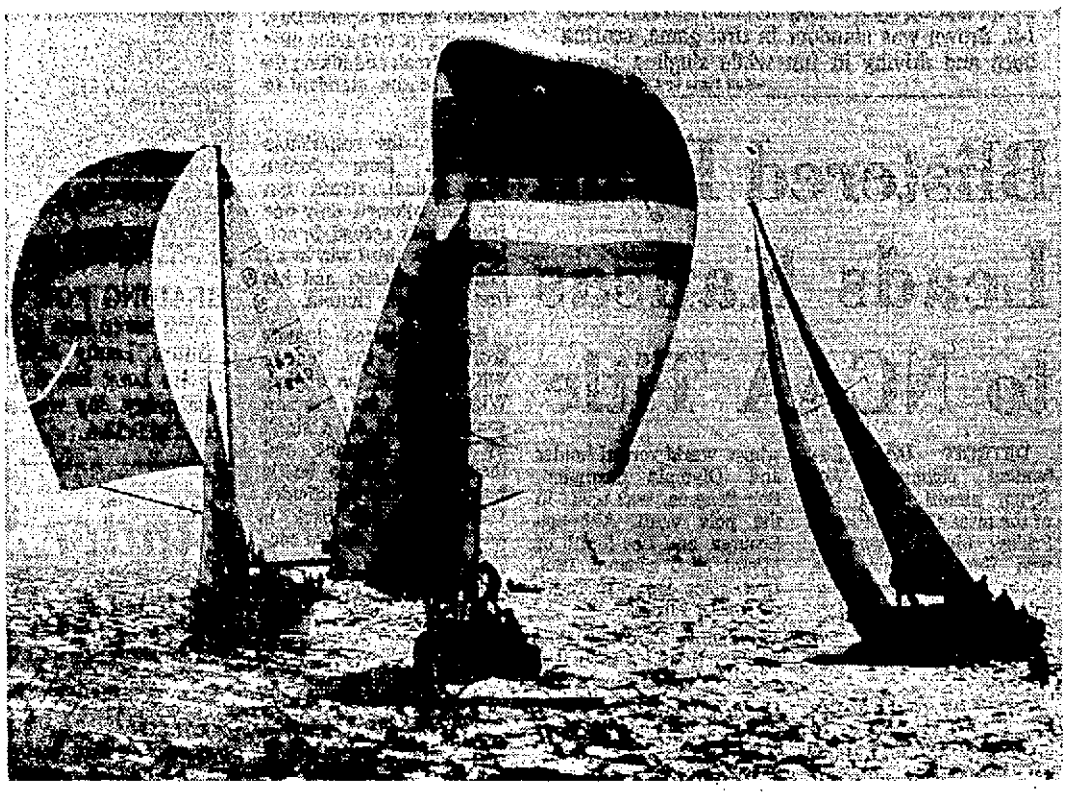

Saturday's win snapped a three-game dry spell and soured the Angels' spring record at 4-4 . . . Spencer went 3-for-3 lifting his spring mark 100 points to .167. Before Saturday he had but one hit in 15 at bats . . . The Angels cuffed San Francisco starter Bob Bolin for five runs on seven hits.

WON'T BE 'AVIS' FOR LONG

Sprague Earns Congressional Cup With 'Perfect' Sailing

By DONNELL CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

Henry W. Sprague III, skippering Madrugador and representing the U.S. Navy Yacht Club of Long Beach, defeated nine other skippers in three days of racing and won the fifth Congressional Cup Saturday.

Sprague, whose home is in Newport Beach, picked his crew of Navy sailing experts several weeks ago and set out to make the group as perfect as possible. He did just that, defeating Tommy Pickard (Long Beach Yacht Club) by one minute flat in the final race on Saturday.

Previously on Saturday he had beaten Buzz Boettger, the 18-year-old flash from the California YC who sailed Hanalei.

Sprague's closest victim Saturday was Lowell North, the Olympic champion, who crossed the finish line 15 seconds behind Sprague in a duel that was bow and bow most of the way.

Sprague was introduced to sailing by his father when he was seven years of age, and he recalls that on his second sailing venture in Newport Harbor he broke the mast of his Snowbird. He was a three-time national Finn Champion and won the North American Finn title twice.

His introduction to the Cal-40 class, which is used exclusively in the Long Beach YC-sponsored Congressional Cup Race, came last year when he crewed for Scott Allan, who finished in fourth place, while his brother, Skip, went on to win the cup that year.

There was a three-way tie for second place.

Boettger, Burke Sawyer (North American Yacht Racing Union) and North (San Diego YC) had six victories and three losses.

Possibly the most disappointed man in the race was Ches L. Rickard, who skippered the Royal Vancouver YC's Tilt O' the Kilt without a single victory.

Rickard, a pilot for Air Canada and 54 years of age, had had 20 years of sailing experience with many trophies to his credit, but he couldn't put Tilt O' the Kilt in the win column.

Sprague's victory enabled the Long Beach YC to put a local club name on the Congressional Cup for the first time. The cup, donated by an act of Congress in 1964, stays permanently in the Long Beach YC.

5---NEW YORK, AL EAST

Mantle

Houk

PROSPECTUS — Ralph Houk's youth program started paying off last season when Yanks climbed to fifth. This season, Yankees will have stronger infield, deeper pitching staff and, hopefully, better seasons from Al Downing and Tom Tresh.

PITCHING — Mel Stottlemyre won 21 games to lead pitching staff last season. Cool and unruffled, he's one of AL's best. Stan Bahnsen and Fritz Petersen emerged as strong starters, winning 17 and 12 games, respectively. Downing, who never reached his predicted potential, and Fred Talbot (a dismal 1-9) could strengthen staff even more with comebacks. Bullpen is sound with Steve Hamilton and Joe Verbanic. Rating: B.

CATCHING — Jake Gibbs did creditable job behind plate, but hit only .213. Yanks will look at John Ellis, a good minor-league hitter.Rating: C.

INFIELD — Mickey Mantle retirement hurts. Houk will experiment with infield, trying Bobby Murcer and Jerry Kenny (both service returnees) at second, where Horace Clark played last season and hit .210. Tresh will stay at third and try to rebound from .195 season. Rating: C.

PREDICTED FINISH: 5th IN EAST

White Sox Sink Dodgers in 9th on 2-Out Blow

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Duane Josephson lashed a two-out double in the ninth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Dodgers Saturday.

Loser Jim Brewer had retired the first two batters when Don Pavletich singled, then went all the way home on Josephson's double.

The game was played on a cricket field.

The Sox, scoring on Carlos May's double between singles by Sandy Alomar and Pete Ward in the fifth, took a 2-0 lead. But the Dodgers tied it in the same inning on singles by Wes Parker, Paul Popovich and Willie Davis and an error by May.

Dan Osinski, holding the Dodgers to one hit in the last three innings, picked up the victory.

Ted Has a Blast, Finally

Associated Press

The Washington Senators celebrated the arrival and signing of slugger Frank Howard Saturday by blasting their way out of an eight-game exhibition baseball losing streak with an 18-5 romp over the Atlanta Braves.

Cap Peterson poled three home runs for the Senators, who collected 19 hits and gave manager Ted Williams his first victory.

It was a big day too for the New York Yankees. Both the varsity and B squads turned in victories.

The Yankee first string got homers from Bobby Cox and Nate Oliver and downed Boston 6-5, despite four errors by shortstop Tom Tresh. Tony Conigliaro had two hits and two runs batted in and Ken Harrelson added a homer and a double for the Red Sox.

New York's B team beat Montreal 5-1 with Len Boehmer driving in three runs on a pair of singles.

Amos Otis, Ken Boswell and Cleon Jones had two hits each and the New York Mets downed the Kansas City Royals 5-3. Otis drove in Ron Swoboda, who had doubled, as the Mets snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning.

Jerry Buchek's third hit of the game, a ninth-inning double, drove in Phil Gagliano with the winning run and St. Louis edged Cincinnati 3-2. Jim Beauchamp and John Bench accounted for the Reds' runs with solo homers while Jim Hicks connected for the Cards.

Vikings Whip 'Gades, Move Into Tie for 2nd

By DAVE DANIEL

Some say hitting is the name of the game while others argue that pitching is.

Long Beach City College did both of them well Saturday to take a 6-1 Metropolitan Conference decision from Bakersfield College at Blair Field to conclude the first round of league play.

The Vikings now sport a 4-3 record and moved up two notches into a tie for second place with Bakersfield. Cerritos, which LBCC faces Tuesday, leads the pack with a 6-1 mark.

Coach Joe Hicks saw his Vikings outhit the opposition for the first time this year as LBCC rapped nine hits to Bakersfield's seven.

Centerfielder Ray Colin continued to lead the Viking hitting attack by collecting two hits, including a three-run inside the park homer in the eighth inning.

Ray Brown added another steady game from the mound for LBCC by giving up just four hits and one unearned run in six and a third innings.

The sophomore right-hander drove in the first Viking run in the second inning after Jay Morrison walked and was sacrificed to second by Jim Gmur. Steve Licbeck singled to put men on the corners and then Brown lined a hit to center for the run.

HOWARD DOUBLES PAY CHECK

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Big Frank Howard ended his holdout siege Saturday and signed a reported $100,000 contract that made him the highest paid Washington baseball player in history.

He also doubled the $50,000 salary of last season, when he hit 44 home runs, making it the biggest raise ever given a Senator.

"Including those in Congress," quipped the Senators' owner, Bob Short, who appeared at a hastily-called press conference here with his new manager, Ted Williams, and his super star.

The 6-foot-7 Howard, who once was acclaimed the future Babe Ruth, originally had asked for a $330,000 contract covering three years. Then he brought his demands down to $125,000 for one year.

During negotiations, he had threatened to retire from baseball.

"I was quite serious," he said after the contract signing announcement. "People who know me know I was serious. It was a matter of principle with me."

LONGEST, STRONGEST GRID MENU FOR CAL STATE L.B.

Jim Stangeland has drawn the longest football schedule in Cal State Long Beach history.

Stangeland will make his CSLB coaching debut on Saturday night, Sept. 20 at UC Santa Barbara. He will conclude his rookie season 11 games later, Sat., Nov. 29 against defending national college division champion, San Diego State.

In between, Stangeland and his 49ers have nine opponents nearly as talented as the opening and closing foes.

The schedule breaks down to five home games and six on the road. CSLB is allowed to play the 11th game because it is not in the continental United States.

The road schedule shows Cal State traveling to UC Santa Barbara, Texas A&I of Kingsville, University of Hawaii, Cal Poly of San Luis Obispo, San Francisco State and San Diego State.

Home contests are scheduled with Valley State, Northern Arizona University, Santa Clara, Fresno State and Cal State L.A.

Cal State will be competing in a new league in the fall, the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn.

Pro Grid Owners Huddle

Realignment No. 1 Topic of Discussion

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — Realignment will be the No. 1 topic when pro football's 26 club owners sit down Monday to solve the one major problem that was not resolved more than 3½ years ago when the AFL-NFL war ended.

But several of pro football's family may be up more than down during the five-day session at El Mirador Hotel in this desert resort.

There are several other important items to be discussed such as the site of the Super Bowl, the two-point conversion rule, the Boston stadium situation and possibly expansion.

But the majority of the owners' time and interest at this joint winter meeting will focus on the subject of realignment.

Current thinking is the recommendation will be that the leagues stay the way they are now—16 teams in the NFL and 10 in the AFL—with the addition of a profitable portion of interleague games, possibly four or five in 1970.

Most NFL owners would go along with this idea as would a number of AFL chiefs. But there are some AFL owners who would hold out for complete realignment—a complete shuffling of all 26 teams.

Prominent among these are Paul Brown of Cincinnati, Joe Robbie of Miami and Gerald Phipps of Denver. Brown would like to go up against the NFL again after coaching the Cleveland Browns for 17 years while Robbie and Phipps would like to tap some of the lucrative NFL markets such as Baltimore, New Orleans and Chicago.

The San Diego Chargers would like to become intermingled with the NFL, too. The Chargers feel they would have a better rivalry with the Rams than, say, with the Dolphins. Curiously, Charger fans, in a mail poll, strongly indicated they prefer the AFL to remain intact.

Dan Reeves of the Rams will go into the meetings with an open mind. He sees an advantage in both ideas. There would be natural rivalries with an alignment of San Diego, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles and travel expenses certainly would be far less than the present Coastal Division. The major disadvantage he sees is the fact most fans favor the national scene of the Rams (Atlanta, Baltimore, Atlanta, Green Bay, Detroit, Washington, etc.

As part of the marriage of the AFL and NFL, it was agreed that beginning in 1970: "A unified league schedule will be made effective, providing for mixed regular season games between the clubs of the two leagues. "In connection with such future realignment of the league, factors of geography, natural rivalries, stadium size, gate attendance, weather circumstances, team strength . . . shall be taken into consideration . . ." Around those two paragraphs center the arguments both of the proponents of realignment and the proponents of the status quo. Jimmie (The Greek) isn't quoting any odds, but going into the meetings the status quo proponents are heavy favorites. But so were the Colts in the Super Bowl.

NFL to Phoenix?

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Bob Peters St. Paul businessman says, he will seek a National Football League franchise for Phoenix, Ariz., next week at the profootball meetings in Palm Springs.

L.B. GETS BOWLING CLASSIC

More than 30,000 bowlers from throughout the United States will get together in Long Beach in 1972.

Long Beach Saturday was selected site of the American Bowling Congress tournament Feb. 26-April 30, 1972.

The pin play will be the first event to be held in the new Exhibit Hall portion of the city's $15.7 million Pacific Terrace complex. Forty alleys will be constructed for bowling's "world series."

Long Beach Convention Bureau manager Robert L. Lichtenhan headed a seven-man Long Beach delegation to Milwaukee, Wis., where the site selection committee chose Long Beach after also hearing presentations from Syracuse, N.Y.; Norfolk, Va., and Denver, Colo.

Karl Schranz of Austria clinched his first World Cup skiing championship by winning the giant slalom in the Dumaurier International Meet in Quebec, and Kiki Cutler of Bend, Ore., took the women's slalom event.

Miss Cutler captured the over-all championship following her sixth-place effort in the giant slalom Friday.

In Stockholm, as the 1969 World Ice Hockey Championships got under way, coach of the Russian team said, "We don't expect much trouble from the Americans."

Understatements were the order of the day as the Yanks went down to a 17-2 massacre at the hands of the Olympic champion Russian team, including an 11-goal barrage in the second period.

Before the contest, always hopeful U.S. player-coach John Mayasich said, "We know we can't beat the Russians, but at least we can learn from them."

In other games Czechoslovakia trounced Canada, 6-1, and Sweden defeated Finland, 6-3.

American hopes of a victory at the Holemkollen Ski Games in Oslo were kept alive Saturday as Adrian Watt outjumped a field of 100 during the trials.

Unknown Surges to Pensacola Lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Unknown Jim Colbert, never higher than third in five years of pro play, battled through a steady rain and rapidly approaching darkness Saturday to seize the third-round lead of the $100,000 Monsanto Open by a stroke over former amateur champ Deane Beman.

Colbert, moving into the lead with three holes to go, held on for a 7-under-par 64 and a 54-hole total of 13-under-par 200. Beman, finishing about 30 minutes earlier, shot an 8-under-par 63 for a 201.

The 28-year-old Colbert's best finish as a pro was third in the 1967 Jacksonville Open. He won more than $25,000 that year but failed to finish among the top 100 money winners last year and is currently 93rd on this year's list with only $2,700.

Colbert started the day in a five-way tie for second place, one stroke behind Dick Crawford. He forged into the lead by shooting a 5-under-par 30 on the front side of the bay-hugging Pensacola Country Club course, fell back into a tie on the leader's board when the 30-year-old Beman closed with a string of birdies, then played it safe the last three holes after forging back in the lead with a birdie at No. 15.

Beman, who also has never finished higher than third as a pro although winning the 1960 and 1963 U.S. Amateur and the 1949 British Amateur, quipped that it was "raining birdies out there for awhile."

U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino moved into third place with an 11-under-par 202 after shooting a 66 and South African Gary Player, with a 65, and Ray Floyd, with a 67, shared a tie for fourth with 203s.

Junior Tennis Free of Upsets, but Play Gets Tougher Today

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

Tennis ball sales took a sharp rise Saturday.

The 13th Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships — the largest ever — got under way at 8 a.m., and by nightfall a record 236 matches had been run off by County Department of Parks and Recreation aides, who are conducting the two-week-end tournament for the sponsoring Long Beach Tennis Patrons Assn.

Entries totaled 612.

Outstanding young players from throughout Southern California — and some from other states and Mexico — were in action on courts at Lakewood Country Club, Long Beach City College and Cerritos College. The main tournament desk is at Lakewood Country Club.

The opening day was remarkably free of upsets, as no seeded players were beaten. However, two seeded contestants defaulted — Randy Thomas, No. 6 in Boys 18s, and Kathy May, No. 4 in Girls 14s.

Competition will get tougher today, when play resumes at 8 a.m.

Long Beach's four seeded competitors all advanced with a minimum of trouble. George Hardie, No. 2 in boys 16, defeated Michael Cooney of San Diego, 6-3, 6-1; Joe Edles No. 7 in the same division, ousted Bob St. John of Redlands, 6-2, 6-1; Diane Desfor, No. 5 in Girls 14, blanked Marla Schrier of Encino, 6-0, 6-0; and Mike Edles, No. 3 in Boys 12, got an opening-round bye.

The Ince sisters of Long Beach — Janet and Sue — scored hard-fought victories in Girls 16 competition. Sue Ince, 14, defeated Anita May of Beverly Hills, 10-8, 7-5, and Janet Ince, 15, eliminated Patti Palmer of Palos Verdes, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

A number of the top girl players will see their first action today. Janet Newberry of La Jolla, national Girls 16 champion, is top-seeded in the 18s here.

The meet is scheduled to end a week from today.

JUAN ENDS HOLDOUT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Juan Marichal became one of the top paid pitchers Saturday when he reached agreement with the San Francisco Giants for $115,000.

Club vice president Charles Feeney said Marichal had come to terms, but he refused to give any dollar figure on the agreement. However, he said outfielder Willie Mays was still the highest paid player on the team.

Marichal had sought parity with Mays at $125,000.

LONGEST, STRONGEST GRID MENU FOR CAL STATE L.B.

Jim Stangeland has drawn the longest football schedule in Cal State Long Beach history.

Stangeland will make his CSLB coaching debut on Saturday night, Sept. 20 at UC Santa Barbara. He will conclude his rookie season 11 games later, Sat., Nov. 29 against defending national college division champion, San Diego State.

In between, Stangeland and his 49ers have nine opponents nearly as talented as the opening and closing foes.

The schedule breaks down to five home games and six on the road. CSLB is allowed to play the 11th game because it is not in the continental United States.

The road schedule shows Cal State traveling to UC Santa Barbara, Texas A&I of Kingsville, University of Hawaii, Cal Poly of San Luis Obispo, San Francisco State and San Diego State.

Home contests are scheduled with Valley State, Northern Arizona University, Santa Clara, Fresno State and Cal State L.A.

Cal State will be competing in a new league in the fall, the Pacific Coast Athletic Assn.

Pro Grid Owners Huddle

Realignment No. 1 Topic of Discussion

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — Realignment will be the No. 1 topic when pro football's 26 club owners sit down Monday to solve the one major problem that was not resolved more than 3½ years ago when the AFL-NFL war ended.

But several of pro football's family may be up more than down during the five-day session at El Mirador Hotel in this desert resort.

There are several other important items to be discussed such as the site of the Super Bowl, the two-point conversion rule, the Boston stadium situation and possibly expansion.

But the majority of the owners' time and interest at this joint winter meeting will focus on the subject of realignment.

Current thinking is the recommendation will be that the leagues stay the way they are now—16 teams in the NFL and 10 in the AFL—with the addition of a profitable portion of interleague games, possibly four or five in 1970.

Most NFL owners would go along with this idea as would a number of AFL chiefs. But there are some AFL owners who would hold out for complete realignment—a complete shuffling of all 26 teams.

Prominent among these are Paul Brown of Cincinnati, Joe Robbie of Miami and Gerald Phipps of Denver. Brown would like to go up against the NFL again after coaching the Cleveland Browns for 17 years while Robbie and Phipps would like to tap some of the lucrative NFL markets such as Baltimore, New Orleans and Chicago.

The San Dieno Chargers would like to become intermingled with the NFL, too. The Chargers feel they would have a better rivalry with the Rams than, say, with the Dolphins. Curiously, Charger fans, in a mail poll, strongly indicated they prefer the AFL to remain intact.

Dan Reeves of the Rams will go into the meetings with an open mind. He sees an advantage in both ideas. There would be natural rivalries with an alignment of San Diego, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles and travel expenses certainly would be far less than the present Coastal Division. The major disadvantage he sees is the fact most fans favor the national scene of the Rams playing Baltimore, Atlanta, Green Bay, Detroit, Washington, etc.

As part of the marriage of the AFL and NFL, it was agreed that beginning in 1970: "A unified league schedule will be made effective, providing for mixed regular season games between the clubs of the two leagues. "In connection with such future realignment of the league, factors of geography, natural rivalries, stadium size, gate attendance, weather circumstances, team strength . . . shall be taken into consideration . . ." Around those two paragraphs center the arguments both of the proponents of realignment and the proponents of the status quo. Jimmie (The Greek) isn't quoting any odds, but going into the meetings the status quo proponents are heavy favorites. But so were the Colts in the Super Bowl.

NFL to Phoenix?

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Bob Peters St. Paul businessman says, he will seek a National Football League franchise for Phoenix, Ariz., next week at the profootball meetings in Palm Springs.

More than 30,000 bowlers from throughout the United States will get together in Long Beach in 1972.

Long Beach Saturday was selected site of the American Bowling Congress tournament Feb. 26-April 30, 1972.

The pin play will be the first event to be held in the new Exhibit Hall portion of the city's $15.7 million Pacific Terrace complex. Forty alleys will be constructed for bowling's "world series."

Long Beach Convention Bureau manager Robert L. Lichtenhan headed a seven-man Long Beach delegation to Milwaukee, Wis., where the site selection committee chose Long Beach after also hearing presentations from Syracuse, N.Y.; Norfolk, Va., and Denver, Colo.

WINTER SPORTS

Combined News Services

Karl Schranz of Austria clinched his first World Cup skiing championship by winning the giant slalom in the Dumaurier International Meet in Quebec, and Kiki Cutter of Bend, Ore., took the women's slalom event.

Miss Cutter captured the over-all championship following her sixth-place effort in the giant slalom Friday.

In Stockholm, as the 1969 World Ice Hockey Championships got under way, coach of the Russian team said, "We don't expect much trouble from the Americans."

Understatements were the order of the day as the Yanks went down to a 17-2 massacre at the hands of the Olympic champion Russian team, including an 11-goal barrage in the second period.

Before the contest, always hopeful U.S. player-coach John Mayasich said, "We know we can't beat the Russians, but at least we can learn from them."

In other games Czechoslovakia trounced Canada, 6-1, and Sweden defeated Finland, 6-3.

American hopes of a victory at the Holemkollen Ski Games in Oslo were kept alive Saturday as Adrian Watt outjumped a field of 100 during the trials.

Unknown Surges to Pensacola Lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Unknown Jim Colbert, never higher than third in five years of pro play, battled through a steady rain and rapidly approaching darkness Saturday to seize the third-round lead of the $100,000 Monsanto Open by a stroke over former amateur champ Deane Beman.

Colbert, moving into the lead with three holes to go, held on for a 7-under-par 64 and a 54-hole total of 13-under-par 200. Beman, finishing about 30 minutes earlier, shot an 8-under-par 63 for a 201.

The 28-year-old Colbert's best finish as a pro was third in the 1967 Jacksonville Open. He won more than $25,000 that year but failed to finish among the top 100 money winners last year and is currently 93rd on this year's list with only $2,700.

Colbert started the day in a five-way tie for second place, one stroke behind Dick Crawford. He forged into the lead by shooting a 5-under-par 30 on the front side of the bay-hugging Pensacola Country Club course, fell back into a tie on the leader's board when the 30-year-old Beman closed with a string of birdies, then played it safe the last three holes after forging back in the lead with a birdie at No. 15.

Beman, who also has never finished higher than third as a pro although winning the 1960 and 1963 U.S. Amateur and the 1949 British Amateur, quipped that it was "raining birdies out there for awhile."

U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino moved into third place with an 11-under-par 202 after shooting a 66 and South African Gary Player, with a 67, shared a tie for fourth with 203s.

Junior Tennis Free of Upsets, but Play Gets Tougher Today

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

Tennis ball sales took a sharp rise Saturday.

The 13th Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships — the largest ever — got under way at 8 a.m., and by nightfall a record 236 matches had been run off by County Department of Parks and Recreation aides, who are conducting the two-week-end tournament for the sponsoring Long Beach Tennis Patrons Assn.

Entries totaled 612.

Outstanding young players from throughout Southern California — and some from other states and Mexico — were in action on courts at Lakewood Country Club, Long Beach City College and Cerritos College. The main tournament desk is at Lakewood Country Club.

The opening day was remarkably free of upsets, as no seeded players were beaten. However, two seeded contestants defaulted — Randy Thomas, No. 6 in Boys 18s, and Kathy May, No. 4 in Girls 14s.

Competition will get tougher today, when play resumes at 8 a.m.

Long Beach's four seeded competitors all advanced with a minimum of trouble. George Hardle, No. 2 in boys 16, defeated Michael Cooney of San Diego, 6-3, 6-1; Joe Edles No. 7 in the same division, ousted Bob St. John of Redlands, 6-2, 6-1; Diane Desfor, No. 5 in Girls 14, blanked Marla Schrier of Encino, 6-0, 6-0; and Mike Edles, No. 3 in Boys 12, got an opening-round bye.

The Ince sisters of Long Beach — Janet and Sue — scored hard-fought victories in Girls 16 competition. Sue Ince, 14, defeated Anita May of Beverly Hills, 10-8, 7-5, and Janet Ince, 15, eliminated Patti Palmer of Palos Verdes, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

A number of the top girl players will see their first action today. Janet Newberry of La Jolla, national Girls 16 champion, is top-seeded in the 18s here.

The meet is scheduled to end a week from today.

JUAN ENDS HOLDOUT

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Juan Marichal became one of the top paid pitchers Saturday when he reached agreement with the San Francisco Giants for $115,000.

Club vice president Charles Feeney said Marichal had come to terms, but he refused to give any dollar figure on the agreement. However, he said outfielder Willie Mays was still the highest paid player on the team.

Marichal had sought parity with Mays at $125,000.

Dodgers See Improvement in Defense, Run Production

By FRED CLAIRE
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH — It has been three weeks since the Dodgers arrived here for spring training. In another three weeks the club will open its National League schedule at Cincinnati.

What type of club will the Dodgers have in 1969? Will the momentum gained in September of 1968 be carried over? Or is this a club in the pattern of the last two seasons, when the result was an eighth-place finish and a tie for seventh.

This much is certain about the Dodgers of 1969:

The defense will be improved, particularly on the left side of the infield. The pitchers hated to look in that direction last year when balls were hit to third baseman Bob Bailey and shortstop Zoilo Versalles.

The production of runs will be increased, particularly if Andy Kosco has the type of year he had in 1968. Kosco slugged 15 home runs for the New York Yankees. And he should benefit by the switch to Dodger Stadium. Left field in Yankee stadium is forever. The moving of home plate 10 feet closer to the fences at Dodger Stadium should have some effect. "We have four men who must come back with good years with the bat," says vice president Al Campanis. "They are Willie Davis, Ron Fairly, Jim Lefebvre and Wes Parker."

If a guess was to be made at this point, here's what the Dodger roster of 1969 would be like:

Catchers — Tom Haller and Jeff Torborg.

Infielders — Wes Parker, Jim Lefebvre, Bill Sudakis, Ted Sizemore, Paul Popovich and Ken Boyer.

Outfielders — Ron Fairly, Willie Crawford, Willie Davis, Len Gabrielson, Bill Russell, Ted Savage and Kosco.

Pitchers — Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Bill Singer, Don Sutton, Jim Brewer, Pete Mikkelsen, John Purdin, Alan Foster, Bobby Darwin and Joe Moeller.

The most pleasant surprises of the spring are Sizemore and Russell.

The major disappointment, and strictly due to the effects of an injury, is Bill Grabarkewitz.

The 23-year-old Grabarkewitz batted .308 as the Albuquerque shortstop last season, and he stole 31 bases. The Dodgers had planned to promote Grabarkewitz to the parent club late last August when third baseman Sudakis was called up.

The same night word was on its way to Albuquerque to have "Grabby" catch a plane to join the Dodgers, the young shortstop suffered a broken ankle. And it hasn't responded this spring.

Grabarkewitz would have been the fastest man in the Dodger camp this spring. Instead, he limps and there is pain. "It could be two or three months before I'm back to anything resembling normal," says Grabarkewitz.

Due to the injury, the Dodgers express concern at shortstop. Popovich took over the position in September of last season, and it wasn't until then the club started to move.

"Popo" is the man with the sure hands, but his major league batting average is .226.

He will win the position unless young Sizemore — the spring sensation — continues his fantastic progress.

The Dodgers had converted Sizemore from a catcher to a second baseman during the Arizona instruction league, but now he is being tried at shortstop.

"We want to see what he can do there," says manager Walt Alston. "We like his bat, his quickness and his attitude. We want to find out if he has the ability to play shortstop."

Alston has been high on Russell, a 20-year-old who has seen three seasons of duty at Ogden, Duquque and Bakersfield. Last year he hit 17 homers, batted .280 and stole 23 bases for Bakersfield.

Alston likes speed, and Russell has it. He also has proven himself a standout defensive man. The Dodgers' main concern with Russell is they don't want to promote him too fast and take the chance of hurting his confidence. Right now, he looks like a player who will make the club.

"We really haven't had good speed since we lost Maury (Wills)," says one Dodger official. "We used to be able to get a run without a hit. Maury would walk, steal a base, take another on an infield out and come home on a fly ball. Russell has that type of speed."

Angels Wonder if Washburn for Real or Spring Phenom

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Greg Washburn, a rookie pitcher with the Angels, is 22 years old. Just a baby, in baseball lingo. He's pitched in little more than a dozen games professionally, none higher than the class A level.

But young Greg Washburn has been a pleasant surprise this spring. He's pitched well in the spring exhibition games, displaying considerable confidence and an amazing amount of mound savvy.

He could be a big, big winner for the Angels. Then, again, he might be just another kid who throws well in the spring, never to be heard from again.

The question then, is what do you do with Washburn and other rookies like him? Do you keep them on the big club or ship them to the minors?

Dick Walsh, the Angels' general manager was talking about some of the Halos' rookies during the Angels' 6-2 win over the Giants here Saturday.

"We've got some good-looking kids here," smiled the GM as he leaned back in his boxseat chair, soaking up some Arizona sun.

"We think we have a shot at winning this thing (American League West). And the thing we've got to decide is which kids can help us win and which will be better off in the minors.

Walsh, who'll have the final say on who stays and who goes, then offered his comments of some of the Angels' top rookies and newcomers:

Washburn: "To me he's the surprise of the spring. A definite major league prospect. He's shown us a lot but I don't know. This just may be his best spring. We plan on looking more at this boy."

Rudy May, pitcher: "Everything I heard about Rudy May before seeing him pitch was about his sore arm. Everyone told me he couldn't pitch. But he's fine now. He's a major league pitcher. We're thinking of Rudy in terms of being our No. 5 starter."

Pedro Borbon, pitcher: "We drafted Pedro from Modesto. He's got a good arm, penty of courage and he came to pitch. Rig (manage Bill Rigney) and I really like this boy. He's a little crude in spots but the way he's going he'll make the staff someplace."

Tom Egan, catcher: "One of the bright spots of the spring, of course. He certainly has a chance to make the club. And if he does it'll certainly help us in other ways. By that I mean Tom Satriano could then paly first base, perhaps, if we run into trouble over there. Tom can catch in the majors. It's a question of his hitting, something he's certainly impressing us with so far this spring."

Jim Spencer, first base: "He's the playmaker type. There's nothing he can't do around the bag. Again, it's the hitting that's a question mark. He'll play someplace, whether it's here or at Hawaii (the Angels' Triple A farm club). We aren't going to let him just sit on a bench somewhere."

Jarvis Tatum, outfielder: "He's still a little crude in spots. He's not the real good baserunner just yet that he promises to be. And he gets jammed at the plate. But we can two platoon Jarvis, using him against lefthanders. We're looking for big things from Tatum one of these days."

Bill Voos, outfielder: Bill isn't a rookie but he is new to us. He's come to play and he wants to play with us. He can do the job. He's playing in the outfield right now but could be he'll work into first base."

Walsh then folded his roster and tucked it away in his shirtpocket. "I get a little excited talking about some of these kids," he smiled. "We've got some good youngsters here, like I said and they're making it awfully tough for us. But I have to like it that way."

* * * *

ANGEL ANGLES: May turned in another strong effort, spacing five innings, allowing the floundering Giants only two hits and one run. His stint is the longest so far this spring for any Angel hurler . . . Hoyt Wilhelm pitched the final inning, blanking the Giants although allowing two hits.

Egan kept up his fall spring hitting with a double in four tries. He's now 8 for-35 (.533) with five RBIs, tying him with Tatum for the spring lead.

Washburn and Clyde Wright pitch today in Tucson against the Indians, then it's off to Yuma and then Hollwille for three consecutive dates with the Padres.

Saturday's win snapped a three-game dry spell and squared the Angels' spring record at 4-4 . . . Spencer went 2-for-3 lifting his spring mark 300 points to .167. Before Saturday he had 2ot one hit in 15 at bats . . . The Angels ruffed San Francisco starter Bob Bolin for five runs on seven hits.

Sprague Earns Congressional Cup With 'Perfect' Sailing

By DONNELL CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

Henry W. Sprague III, skippering Madrugador and representing the U.S. Navy Yacht Club of Long Beach, defeated nine other skippers in three days of racing and won the fifth Congressional Cup Saturday.

Sprague, whose home is in Newport Beach, picked his crew of Navy sailing experts several weeks ago and set out to make the group as perfect as possible. He did just that, defeating Tommy Pickard (Long Beach Yacht Club) by one minute flat in the final race on Saturday.

Previously on Saturday he had beaten Buzz Boettger, the 18-year-old flash from the California YC who sailed Hanalei.

Sprague's closest victim Saturday was Lowell North, the Olympic champion, who crossed the finish line 15 seconds behind Sprague in a duel that was bow and bow most of the way.

Sprague was introduced to sailing by his father when he was seven years of age, and he recalls that on his second sailing venture in Newport Harbor he broke the mast of his Snowbird. He was a three-time national Finn Champion and won the North American Finn title twice.

His introduction to the Cal-40 class, which is used exclusively in the Long Beach YC-sponsored Congressional Cup Race, came last year when he crewed for Scott Allan, who finished in fourth place, while his brother, Skip, went on to win the cup that year.

There was a three-way tie for second place.

Boettger, Burke Sawyer (North American Yacht Racing Union) and North (San Diego YC) had six victories and three losses.

Possibly the most disappointed man in the race was Ches L. Rickard, who skippered the Royal Vancouver YC's Tilt O' the Kilt without a single victory.

Rickard, a pilot for Air Canada and 54 years of age, had had 20 years of sailing experience with many trophies to his credit, but he couldn't put Tilt O' the Kilt in the win column.

Sprague's victory enabled the Long Beach YC to put a local club name on the Congressional Cup for the first time. The cup, donated by an act of Congress in 1964, stays permanently in the Long Beach YC.

5---NEW YORK, AL EAST

Mantle

PROSPECTUS — Ralph Houk's youth program started paying off last season when Yanks climbed to fifth. This season, Yankees will have stronger infield, deeper pitching staff and, hopefully, better seasons from Al Downing and Tom Tresh.

Houk

PITCHING — Mel Stottlemyre won 21 games to lead pitching staff last season. Cool and unruffled, he's one of AL's best. Stan Bahnsen and Fritz Petersen emerged as strong starters, winning 17 and 12 games, respectively. Downing, who never reached his predicted potential, and Fred Talbot (a dismal 1-9) could strengthen staff even more with comebacks. Bullpen is sound with Steve Hamilton and Joe Verbanic. Rating: B.

CATCHING — Jake Gibbs did creditable job behind plate, but hit only .213. Yanks will look at John Ellis, a good minor-league hitter. Rating: C.

INFIELD — Mickey Mantle retirement hurts. Houk will experiment with infield, trying Bobby Murcer and Jerry Kenny (both service returnees) at second; where Horace Clark played last season and hit .210. Tresh will stay at third and try to rebound from .195 season. Rating: C.

PREDICTED FINISH: 5th IN EAST

White Sox Sink Dodgers in 9th on 2-Out Blow

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Pinch-hitter Duane Josephson lashed a two-out double in the ninth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory over the Dodgers Saturday.

Loser Jim Brewer had retired the first two batters when Don Pavletich singled, then went all the way home on Josephson's double.

The game was played on a cricket field.

The Sox, scoring on Carlos May's double between singles by Sandy Alomar and Pete Ward in the fifth, took a 2-0 lead. But the Dodgers tied it in the same inning on singles by Wes Parker, Paul Popovich and Willie Davis and an error by May.

Dan Osinski, holding the Dodgers to one hit in the last three innings, picked up the victory.

Ted Has a Blast, Finally

Associated Press

The Washington Senators celebrated the arrival and signing of slugger Frank Howard Saturday by blasting their way out of an eight-game exhibition baseball losing streak with an 18-5 romp over the Atlanta Braves.

Cap Peterson poled three home runs for the Senators, who collected 19 hits and gave manager Ted Williams his first victory.

It was a big day too for the New York Yankees. Both the varsity and B squads turned in victories.

The Yankee first string got homers from Bobby Cox and Nate Oliver and downed Boston 6-5, despite four errors by shortstop Tom Tresh. Tony Conigliaro had two hits and two runs batted in and Ken Harrelson added a homer and a double for the Red Sox.

New York's B team beat Montreal 5-1 with Len Boehmer driving in three runs on a pair of singles.

HOWARD DOUBLES PAY CHECK

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Big Frank Howard ended his holdout siege Saturday and signed a reported $100,000 contract that made him the highest paid Washington baseball player in history.

He also doubled the $50,000 salary of last season, when he hit 44 home runs, making it the biggest raise ever given a Senator.

"Including those in Congress," quipped the Senators' owner, Bob Short, who appeared at a hastily-called press conference here with his new manager, Ted Williams, and his super star.

The 6-foot-7 Howard, who once was acclaimed the future Babe Ruth, originally had asked for a $330,000 contract covering three years. Then he brought his demands down to $125,000 for one year.

During negotiations, he had threatened to retire from baseball.

"I was quite serious," he said after the contract signing announcement. "People who know me know I was serious. It was a matter of principle with me."

Vikings Whip 'Gades, Move Into Tie for 2nd

By DAVE DANIEL

Some say hitting is the name of the game while others argue that pitching is.

Long Beach City College did both of them well Saturday to take a 6-1 Metropolitan Conference decision from Bakersfield College at Blair Field to conclude the first round of league play.

The Vikings now sport a 4-3 record and moved up two notches into a tie for second place with Bakersfield. Cerritos, which LBCC faces Tuesday, leads the pack with a 6-1 mark.

Coach Joe Hicks saw his Vikings outhit the opposition for the first time this year as LBCC rapped nine hits to Bakersfield's seven.

Centerfielder Ray Colin continued to lead the Viking hitting attack by collecting two hits, including a three-run inside the park homer in the eighth inning.

Ray Brown added another steady game from the mound for LBCC by giving up just four hits and one unearned run in six and a third innings.

The sophomore righthander drove in the first Viking run in the second inning after Jay Morrison walked and was sacrificed to second by Jim Gmur. Steve Liebeck singled to put men on the corners and then Brown lined a hit to center for the run.

LONGDEN HOLDS OUT LEADING DERBY PROSPECT

Longshot Captures San Felipe Handicap

Elect The Ruler, a longshot, scored a surprise victory in the $58,550 San Felipe Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday as nine 3-year-olds went to the post pointing toward the $100,000-added Santa Anita Derby two weeks away.

Jockey Eddie Belmonte brought the $26.40 winner up with a rush in the final strides to win by a neck over little-regarded Lonny's Secret, with Mr. Joe F. Third.

Right Cross, the favorite and pacesetter, faded and finished fourth.

The 1 1-16-mile fixture was run before 48,526 on a fast track without Majestic Prince, the leading Derby prospect at Santa Anita. Trainer John Longden kept the $250,000 colt out of the San Felipe and his stable mate, Governors Party, was never a serious threat.

The time was 1:44 1-5.

Elect The Ruler, carrying 116 pounds, had never won a stakes and returned $26.40 to win, $9.40 to place and $9.60 to show.

Lonny's Secret and Mr. Joe F., both trained by C. A. Roles, ran as an entry and paid $4.80 and $5. Mr. Joe F., winner of two stakes at the Santa Anita meeting, was the big horse of the entry.

Inverness Drive, ridden by jockey Bill Shoemaker, 120 pounds, was the second betting choice. He carried two pounds less than top-weighted Mr. Joe F. but finished out of the money after being in contention most of the trip around the track.

The victory was worth $36,050 for the winning owners.

Together Again hooked up with Track Surveyor to record a $133 daily double. Together Again won the first race and paid $10.60 while Track Surveyor clicked for a $16.40 return.

The construction of two diversion channels to carry off water that was flooding a portion of the hillside turf course and preventing the use of that sector, has proven to be successful.

Scheduled grass events of about 6½ furlongs down the hill and marathon races of 1½ miles or more are now possible and will be raced as planned.

The extremely heavy rains this winter (more than 38 inches) have created a high water table and a steady flow of run-off water hitherto unknown. A spring, situated just above the 1-¼ mile start, continued to flow and flood the upper grass course and only the construction of two ditches, paralleling both sides of the course, has corrected the situation.

ELECT THE RULER broke in stride, raced close up to the final turn while along the rail, rallied when straightened for the drive and outraced LONNY'S SECRET in the final furlong. The latter lagged to the far turn, slipped through along the rail, reached the winner midway in the drive but could not get the lead and went evenly in the late stages. MR. JOE F. forced the early pace then lacked reserve energy when the real test came. RIGHT CROSS set the early pace without need of urging and weakened in the drive. DR. MARC R. broke poorly and lost ground while improving his position. INVERNESS DRIVE raced wide, had a weak bid on the far turn and gave way. GOVERNORS PARTY bolted forward and hit the starting gate while waiting for the break, cut between horses to have a mild bid at the half, raced into a pocket and fell back.

Barbara 2-for-2 in Silks

Associated Press

Barbara Jo Rubin did it again Saturday at Aqueduct.

The 19-year-old female riding sensation scored her second successive victory at the New York track aboard the favored May Berry in the first race. The payoff was $7.20, $4.00 and $3.40.

The pig-tailed miss became the first woman to ride at a pari-mutuel track in New York Friday when she won with Bravy Galaxy, a $28.20 for-$2 shot.

Now she has won twice and is unbeaten at Aqueduct. In 10 races at Waterford, Charles Town, Nassau, Pimlico and Aquaduct, she has seven triumphs in 10 races.

Barbara Jo rode Saturday purely by accident. She had planned to fly to Pimlico Friday but missed her plane.

The crowd gave their new riding darling a tremendous ovation.

Asked if he planned to use Barbara Jo again soon, Jacobson said: "If she continues to ride like that, she can ride for me any time."

Mister Diz again defeated Maryland-breds in the $27,500-added Calledon Stakes at Pimlico but didn't win the way a 1-to-5 shot is supposed to win.

Braulio Baeza, who came from New York to ride Mister Diz, had to stage one of his strongest rides to bring the gelding to the finish a half length in front of Baron Bedros, who was just a neck to the good of Glads Flame.

Braeza worked diligently with heels, whip and hands, and his charge completed the 1 1-16 miles in 1:44 2-5 for a $2.60, $2.40, $2.10 payoff.

Baron Bedros paid $7.40 and $3.60 while Glad's Flame, returned $2.80 to show.

Go Marcing, even money favorite with the crowd of 21,767, closed with a rush to win the 36,550 Canadian Turf Handicap at Gulfstream.

Pro Grid Owners Huddle

Realignment No. 1 Topic of Discussion

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — Realignment will be the No. 1 topic when pro football's 26 club owners sit down Monday to solve the one major problem that was not resolved more than 3½ years ago when the AFL-NFL war ended.

But several of pro football's family may be up more than down during the five-day session at El Mirador Hotel in this desert resort.

There are several other important items to be discussed such as the site of the Super Bowl, the two-point conversion rule, the Boston stadium situation and possibly expansion.

But the majority of the owners' time and interest at this joint winter meeting will focus on the subject of realignment.

Current thinking is the recommendation will be that the leagues stay the way they are now—16 teams in the NFL and 10 in the AFL—with the addition of a profitable portion of interleague games, possibly four or five in 1970.

Most NFL owners would go along with this idea as would a number of AFL chiefs. But there are some AFL owners who would hold out for complete realignment—a complete shuffling of all 26 teams.

Prominent among these are Paul Brown of Cincinnati, Joe Robbie of Miami and Gerald Phipps of Denver. Brown would like to go up against the NFL again after coaching the Cleveland Browns for 17 years while Robbie and Phipps would like to tap some of the lucrative NFL markets such as Baltimore, New Orleans and Chicago.

The San Diego Chargers would like to become intermingled with the NFL, too. The Chargers feel they would have a better rivalry with the Rams than, say, with the Dolphins. Curiously, Charger fans, in a mail poll, strongly indicated they prefer the AFL to remain intact.

Dan Reeves of the Rams will go into the meetings with an open mind. He sees an advantage in both ideas. There would be natural rivalries with an alignment of San Diego, Oakland, San Francisco and Los Angeles and travel expenses certainly would be far less than the present Coastal Division. The major disadvantage he sees is the fact most fans favor the present scope of the Rams playing Baltimore, Atlanta, Green Bay, Detroit, Washington, etc.

As part of the marriage of the AFL and NFL, it was agreed that beginning in 1970: "A unified league schedule will be made effective, providing for mixed regular season games between the clubs of the two leagues. "In connection with such future realignment of the league, factors of geography, natural rivalries, natural ties, gate attendance, weather circumstances, team strength . . . shall be taken into consideration . . ." Around those two paragraphs center the arguments both of the proponents of realignment and the proponents of the status quo. Jimmie (The Greek) isn't quoting any odds, but going into the meetings the status quo proponents are heavy favorites. But so were the Colts in the Super Bowl.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Bob Peters St. Paul businessman says, he will seek a National Football League franchise for Phoenix, Ariz., next week at the profootball meetings in Palm Springs.

More than 30,000 bowlers from throughout the United States will get together in Long Beach in 1972.

Long Beach Saturday was selected site of the American Bowling Congress tournament Feb. 26-April 30, 1972.

The pin play will be the first event to be held in the new Exhibit Hall portion of the city's $15.7 million Pacific Terrace complex. Forty alleys will be constructed for bowling's "world series."

Long Beach Convention Bureau manager Robert L. Lichtenhan headed a seven-man Long Beach delegation to Milwaukee, Wis., where the site selection committee chose Long Beach after also hearing presentations from Syracuse, N.Y.; Norfolk, Va., and Denver, Colo.

Unknown Surges to Pensacola Lead

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Unknown Jim Colbert, never higher than third in five years of pro play, battled through a steady rain and rapidly approaching darkness Saturday to seize the third-round lead of the $100,000 Monsanto Open by a stroke over former amateur champ Deane Beman.

Colbert, moving into the lead with three holes to go, held on for a 7-under-par 64 and a 54-hole total of 13-under-par 200. Beman, finishing about 30 minutes earlier, shot an 8-under-par 63 for a 201.

The 28-year-old Colbert's best finish as a pro was third in the 1967 Jacksonville Open. He won more than $25,000 that year but failed to finish among the top 100 money winners last year and is currently 93rd on this year's list with only $2,700.

Colbert started the day in a five-way tie for second place, one stroke behind Dick Crawford. He forged into the lead by shooting a 5-under-par 30 on the front side of the bay-hugging Pensacola Country Club course, fell back into a tie on the leader's board when the 30-year-old Beman closed with a string of birdies, then played it safe the last three holes after forging back in the lead with a birdie at No. 15.

Beman, who also has never finished higher than third as a pro although winning the 1960 and 1963 U.S. Amateur and the 1949 British Amateur, quipped that it was "raining birdies out there for awhile."

U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino moved into third place with an 11-under-par 202 after shooting a 66 and South African Gary Player, with a 65, and Ray Floyd, with a 67, shared a tie for fourth with 203s.

Junior Tennis Free of Upsets, but Play Gets Tougher Today

By BOB MARTIN
Staff Writer

Tennis ball sales took a sharp rise Saturday.

The 13th Long Beach Junior Tennis Championships — the largest ever — got under way at 8 a.m., and by nightfall a record 236 matches had been run off by County Department of Parks and Recreation aides, who are conducting the two-weekend tournament for the sponsoring Long Beach Tennis Patrons Assn.

Entries totaled 612.

Outstanding young players from throughout Southern California — and some from other states and Mexico — were in action on courts at Lakewood Country Club, Long Beach City College and Cerritos College. The main tournament desk is at Lakewood Country Club.

The opening day was remarkably free of upsets, as no seeded players were beaten. However, two seeded contestants defaulted — Randy Thomas, No. 6 in Boys 18s, and Kathy May, No. 4 in Girls 14s.

Competition will get tougher today, when play resumes at 8 a.m.

Long Beach's four seeded competitors all advanced with a minimum of trouble. George Hardie, No. 2 in boys 16, defeated Michael Cooney of San Diego, 6-3, 6-1; Joe Edles No. 7 in the same division, ousted Bob St. John of Redlands, 6-2, 6-1; Diane Desfor, No. 5 in Girls 14, blanked Marla Schrier of Encino, 6-0, 6-0; and Mike Edles, No. 3 in Boys 12, got an opening-round bye.

The Ince sisters of Long Beach — Janet and Sue — scored hard-fought victories in Girls 16 competition. Sue Ince, 14, defeated Anita May of Beverly Hills, 10-8, 7-5, and Janet Ince, 15, eliminated Patti Palmer of Palos Verdes, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

A number of the top girl players will see their first action today. Janet Newberry of La Jolla, national Girls 16 champion, is top-seeded in the 18s here.

The meet is scheduled to end a week from today.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Striper Angler Getting Ulcers

If you want to try for striped bass in Havasu Lake, listen to a few words of advice from Larry Noggle of Anaheim and Wayne Lewis of Buena Park, who fished four days and lost seven fish, all giants, and three of those right at the boat.

Noggle owns a plastics mold company and Lewis is one of his employes. They fish together often and consider themselves experienced anglers. They have caught salmon, big trout, steelhead and channel catfish in fresh water and all kinds of fish in the ocean. Mostly, they have used six-pound-test line in fresh water, but since their recent Havasu experience, they have changed to heavier monofilament.

Noggle says that the stripers that hit Noggle's outfit peeled off 100 yards of line, which was all he had on the reel, and the line then did what comes naturally —it parted with a loud pop.

Lewis added that his first striper sounded after being brought alongside the boat and the line broke. Four other fish were caught on lures—Rebels that look like threadfin shad—but two of the fish wrapped the lines around sunken trees and broke off.

THERE IS THE WRECKAGE of an airplane at the lower end of Lake Havasu, and one fish took a line into that and broke off. When Noggle and Lewis tried waterdogs, they couldn't set the hook on two of the monsters.

The two Californians are back at Havasu again this weekend. They are determined to catch and, what is more important, put the stripers in the boat.

They use a four-foot leader tied to a three-way swivel, with a piece of lead as a drop weight off the other side of the swivel. If the wind is sufficient, they drift-fish until a striper whacks the Rebel. "In fishing that way," says Noggle, "you don't have to set the hook; the fish hooks himself."

This striped bass phobia has changed the entire situation at Havasu. The fish have been caught at various parts of the lake—near Parker Dam, at the upper end and off Lake Havasu City. Fishermen who were using light outfits for bass and crappie have suddenly come to realize that they are likely to hook something that could break even a 10-pound-test line.

I am not one to reccomend ocean outfits for Lake Havasu, but there are many snags in that lake and a fishermen must take his chances with tackle. When a striper wraps a line around a dead branch or tree, you'll probably have to break off the line, no matter whether it tests 10 pounds or 50. The best thing to do is come in just as fast as you can, particularly if you are fishing in shallow water where you know there are snags.

ABALONE SEASON OPENED TODAY along the California coast and this is something that you might not know: This state's coast is the only place in North America where the prized shellfish are found. And, if you don't think that abalone is a prize, try buying some in a market; you'll think you are purchasing a gold watch.

About all the average citizen knows about abalone are the shells of the mollusks that he sees in specialty shops along the waterfront. The shell is lined with mother of pearl which is used in inlaying and in making certain types of buttons. Properly polished, it makes an ideal ash tray.

There was a time many years ago when one could wade out into rocks along the coast at low tide and pry off the mollusks, but those days seem to have passed forever. Nowadays, it takes a skin or scuba diver to find them at depths the average swimmer doesn't reach.

All types of abalone—red, green, pink, white and black—have become so rare that the Department of Fish and Game has had to put limits on the number of mollusks taken as well as the size of each.

So, just in case you want to try for abalone, get into your diving clothes, take along a crowbar or old-fashioned tire iron and prepare for hard work. Also, you'd do well to study the DFG specifications on sizes and limits in the 1969 California Sportfishing Regulations pamphlet.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—Want to know where you may fish in the National Parks and which provide camping facilities, swimming, food and lodging? There is a set of eight full-color maps which will give all those details. Just write the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, enclose $1.50, and ask for "National Parks of the United States," catalog number 129.6: P-23.

Winchester announces its first left-handed automatic shotgun, a version of the popular model 1400 Mark II. It ejects shells from the left side of the receiver and should make all those southpaw shooters happy. Until now, they have had that disconcerting sensation of having spent shells fly across their faces.

The National Rifle Assn. says that 160,000 joined its ranks in 1968, bring the NRA membership total to more than one million. Franklin J. Orth, NRA executive vice president, says that the Hunter Safety Programs and other shooting activities were responsible for the big 1968 gain.

And, speaking of Hunter Safety, there is still a chance for adults to enroll in the 20-hour course in teaching techniques for prospective instructors. The course is being held on Monday nights from 7:30 to 9:30 in Franklin High School, 820 N. Ave. 54, Los Angeles. If you wish more information, call the school at 256-2144 and ask for the adult education department.

The amount charged will be on a pro-rata basis against the current selling price at time of adjustment plus Federal Excise Tax.

Every Vanderbilt Tire is guaranteed against wear-out for the number of months specified. LONDON JET caught his best stride on the far turn, rallied to wear down XTRASENSORY in the upper stretch and won going away. The latter broke alertly, forced the pace to the half mile pole, took command but could not match strides with the winner in the final furlong. HILL STING had a mild bid on the stretch turn, lost ground and tired.
No scratches.

LONGDEN HOLDS OUT LEADING DERBY PROSPECT

Longshot Captures San Felipe Handicap

Elect The Ruler, a longshot, scored a surprise victory in the $58,550 San Felipe Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday as nine 3-year-olds went to the post pointing toward the $100,000-added Santa Anita Derby two weeks away.

Jockey Eddie Belmonte brought the $26.40 winner up with a rush in the final strides to win by a neck over little-regarded Lonny's Secret, with Mr. Joe F. Third.

Right Cross, the favorite and pacesetter, faded and finished fourth.

The 1 1-16-mile fixture was run before 48,526 on a fast track without Majestic Prince, the leading Derby prospect at Santa Anita. Trainer John Longden kept the $250,000 colt out of the San Felipe and his stable mate, Governors Party, was never a serious threat.

The time was 1:44 1-5.

Elect The Ruler, carrying 116 pounds, had never won a stakes and returned $26.40 to win, $9.40 to place and $9.60 to show.

Lonny's Secret and Mr. Joe F., both trained by C. A. Roles, ran as an entry and paid $4.80 and $5. Mr. Joe F., winner of two stakes at the Santa Anita meeting, was the big horse of the entry.

Inverness Drive, ridden by jockey Bill Shoemaker, 120 pounds, was the second betting choice. He carried two pounds less than top-weighted Mr. Joe F. but finished out of the money after being in contention most of the trip around the track.

The victory was worth $36,050 for the winning owners.

Together Again hooked up with Track Surveyor to record a $133 daily double. Together Again won the first race and paid $10.60 while Track Surveyor clicked for a $16.40 return.

The construction of two diversion channels to carry off water that was flooding a portion of the hillside turf course and preventing the use of that sector, has proven to be successful.

Scheduled grass events of about 6½ furlongs down the hill and marathon races of 1½ miles or more are now possible and will be raced as planned.

The extremely heavy rains this winter (more than 38 inches) have created a high water table and a steady flow of run-off water hitherto unknown. A spring, situated just above the 1-¼ mile start, continued to flow and flood the upper grass course and only the construction of two ditches, paralleling both sides of the course, has corrected the situation.

VIKINGS TUMBLE PASADENA

The Long Beach City College gymnastics team broke Pasadena City College's stranglehold on the junior college level by winning the Metropolitan Conference Preview Meet at Valley College.

The Vikings, coached by John Graghi, handed Pasadena its first loss in more than 10 years by winning four of the six events and finishing second and third in the others.

The Lancers won two events and finished second to the Vikings in the remaining four as the Vikings took home 12 of the 18 trophies in the three-man combined competition.

Jim Jennings was a winner in three events.

Long horse — Long Beach (Jennings, Calaldo, Fage) 50.0, Pasadena 47.0, Pierce 44.4.

Barbara 2-for-2 in Silks

Associated Press

Barbara Jo Rubin did it again Saturday at Aqueduct.

The 19-year-old female riding sensation scored her second successive victory at the New York track aboard the favored May Berry in the first race. The payoff was $7.20, $4.00 and $3.40.

The pig-tailed miss became the first woman to ride at a pari-mutuel track in New York Friday when she won with Bravy Galaxy, a $28.20 for-$2 shot.

Now she has won twice and is unbeaten at Aqueduct. In 10 races at Waterford, Charles Town, Nassau, Pimlico and Aquaduct, she has seven triumphs in 10 races.

Barbara Jo rode Saturday purely by accident. She had planned to fly to Pimlico Friday but missed her plane.

The crowd gave their new riding darling a tremendous ovation.

Asked if he planned to use Barbara Jo again soon, Jacobson said: "If she continues to ride like that, she can ride for me any time."

Mister Diz again defeated Maryland-breds in the $27,500-added Calledon Stakes at Pimlico but didn't win the way a 1-to-5 shot is supposed to win.

Braulio Baeza, who came from New York to ride Mister Diz, had to stage one of his strongest rides to bring the gelding to the finish a half length in front of Baron Bedros, who was just a neck to the good of Glads Flame.

Braeza worked diligently with heels, whip and hands, and his charge completed the 1 1-16 miles in 1:44 2-5 for a $2.60, $2.40, $2.10 payoff.

Baron Bedros paid $7.40 and $3.60 while Glad's Flame, returned $2.80 to show.

Go Marcing, even money favorite with the crowd of 21,767, closed with a rush to win the 36,550 Canadian Turf Handicap at Gulfstream.

Lewis Favored

Once-beaten welterweight Hedgemon Lewis is an 11-10 favorite over Miguel Hernandez in the 10-round main event at Olympic Auditorium on Thursday night.

Joe Frazier and Jimmy Ellis, both heavyweight champions, may clear up the title confusion by meeting in the Houston Astrodome on June 16 or 17.

Frazier first has a title bout against Dave Zyglewicz in the Houston Coliseum on April 5, but Ellis is not expected to fight prior to the Astrodome showdown. Although Ellis will begin training shortly, he is 20 pounds over his usual fighting weight, and he probably will not be able to get into shape before the June date.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Striper Angler Getting Ulcers

If you want to try for striped bass in Havasu Lake, listen to a few words of advice from Larry Noggle of Anaheim and Wayne Lewis of Buena Park, who fished four days and lost seven fish, all giants, and three of those right at the boat.

Noggle owns a plastics mold company and Lewis is one of his employes. They fish together often and consider themselves experienced anglers. They have caught salmon, big trout, steelhead and channel catfish in fresh water and all kinds of fish in the ocean. Mostly, they have used six-pound-test line in fresh water, but since their recent Havasu experience, they have changed to heavier monofilament.

Noggle says that the stripers that hit Noggle's outfit peeled off 100 yards of line, which was all he had on the reel, and the line then did what comes naturally—it parted with a loud pop.

Lewis added that his first striper sounded after being brought alongside the boat and the line broke. Four other fish were caught on lures—Rebels that look like threadfin shad—but two of the fish wrapped the lines around sunken trees and broke off.

THERE IS THE WRECKAGE of an airplane at the lower end of Lake Havasu, and one fish took a line into that and broke off. When Noggle and Lewis tried waterdogs, they couldn't set the hook on two of the monsters.

The two Californians are back at Havasu again this weekend. They are determined to catch and, what is more important, put the stripers in the boat.

They use a four-foot leader tied to a three-way swivel, with a piece of lead as a drop weight off the other side of the swivel. If the wind is sufficient, they drift-fish until a striper whacks the Rebel. "In fishing that way," says Noggle, "you don't have to set the hook; the fish hooks himself."

This striped bass phobia has changed the entire situation at Havasu. The fish have been caught at various parts of the lake—near Parker Dam, at the upper end and off Lake Havasu City. Fishermen who were using light outfits for bass and crappie have suddenly come to realize that they are likely to hook something that could break even a 10-pound-test line.

I am not one to reccomend ocean outfits for Lake Havasu, but there are many snags in that lake and a fishermen must take his chances with tackle. When a striper wraps a line around a dead branch or tree, you'll probably have to break off the line, no matter whether it tests 10 pounds or 50. The best thing to do is come in just as fast as you can, particularly if you are fishing in shallow water where you know there are snags.

ABALONE SEASON OPENED TODAY along the California coast and this is something that you might not know: This state's coast is the only place in North America where the prized shellfish are found. And, if you don't think that abalone is a prize, try buying some in a market; you'll think you are purchasing a gold watch.

About all the average citizen knows about abalone are the shells of the mollusks that he sees in specialty shops along the waterfront. The shell is lined with mother of pearl which is used in inlaying and in making certain types of buttons. Properly polished, it makes an ideal ash tray.

There was a time many years ago when one could wade out into rocks along the coast at low tide and pry off the mollusks, but those days seem to have passed forever. Nowadays, it takes a skin or scuba diver to find them at depths the average swimmer doesn't reach.

All types of abalone—red, green, pink, white and black—have become so rare that the Department of Fish and Game has had to put limits on the number of mollusks taken as well as the size of each.

So, just in case you want to try for abalone, get into your diving clothes, take along a crowbar or old-fashioned tire iron and prepare for hard work. Also, you'd do well to study the DFG specifications on sizes and limits in the 1969 California Sportfishing Regulations pamphlet.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—Want to know where you may fish in the National Parks and which provide camping facilities, swimming, food and lodging? There is a set of eight full-color maps which will give all those details. Just write the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, enclose $1.50, and ask for "National Parks of the United States," catalog number 129.6: P-23.

Winchester announces its first left-handed automatic shotgun, a version of the popular model 1400 Mark II. It ejects shells from the left side of the receiver and should make all those southpaw shooters happy. Until now, they have had that disconcerting sensation of having spent shells fly across their faces.

The National Rifle Assn. says that 160,000 joined its ranks in 1968, bring the NRA membership total to more than one milllion. Franklin J. Orth, NRA executive vice president, says that the Hunter Safety Programs and other shooting activities were responsible for the big 1968 gain.

And, speaking of Hunter Safety, there is still a chance for adults to enroll in the 20-hour course in teaching techniques for prospective instructors. The course is being held on Monday nights from 7:30 to 9:30 in Franklin High School, 820 N. Ave. 54, Los Angeles. If you wish more information, call the school at 256-2144 and ask for the adult education department.

Fiberglass Belts Mean a Big Footprint for Better Mileage

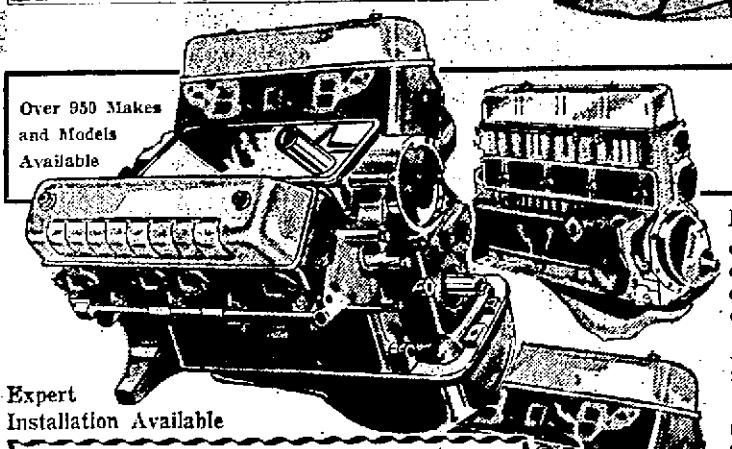

The two fiberglass belts beneath the tread give you better traction and stability. In addition, two nylon cord plies give the tire exceptional strength and resistance to impact and puncture damage . . . which means longer life.

Superior Construction Means You Get More Tire

Conventional tire on the right is distorted by high-speed squirm and wiggle. The fiberglass-belted tire stays flat against the road for superior safety and traction . . . plus more than double the mileage of new-car tires.

The film-y

Monroe look

Reminiscent of sexy pleats worn by Marilyn Monroe (above) in "Seven Year Itch" is this 1969 version (right) of imported Polyester, belted at waistline, packable for traveling. In yellow; at Gladys Fowler Fashions, Los Altos and Lakewood shopping centers.

Dietrich started it!

Pants are everywhere . . . with coats, jackets, tunics, everything. Here, black and white double-breasted coatdress over straight trousers check in as smartest costuming of the season. By Don Sophisticates; at Buffums', Pine at Broadway. Left, Marlene Dietrich at Chicago Railroad station in the 40s.

Midriffs bared again

Joan Crawford (inset) and other movie queens bared their midriffs in the 40s. It's happening again . . . as witness these white crepe jeans (yes, jeans) stitched in black, worn with slinky, shiny black knit top tied nonchalantly at bosom. From The May Co., Lakewood Center.

FASHION-WISE

Spring can be anything

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
Director, Women's News

Spring fashion is the shaped body released for motion.

It's the soft dress, the shirty look, the pulled-together look, the clunky shoe, scarves galore, chains and belts, pants all over the place.

There are exciting flashbacks to the 20s, the 30s, the 40s . . . to days of Edwardian splendor and Wild West vigor . . . to the sexy femininity of yesteryear's glamour queens.

Restrictions are out. It's pick and choose and put yourself together to suit the mood. Here are some of the ways:

• The shirt story grows and grows — often by itself, but newer as the updated shirtdress.

• Pants come on strong as the fashion story of the year. They go everywhere, do everything. About the only limit: they're never leg-hugging. From fitted hips, they drop in slight A's, billow out to gather again at the ankle or flow so fully one mistakes them for skirts.

• Pants are today's suit. They're ensembles with coats, they're mates to jackets, tunics, jumpers . . . but they're freshest worn under dresses, a look that's catching on fantastically.

• Accessories are all-important, pulling the fashion story together. Belts are anything and everything — leather, scarves, chains, ropes, jewels, chords, chains and more chains.

• Jewelry is . . . almost anything. There are links, loops, chains, rings for every finger, bracelets to wear by the score and watches for all occasions.

• Today's shoe is clunky, even when it's a sandal. The squared or rounded toe, the heavy heel and thin sole are still the important fashion footnotes.

STEAL THE LATE-LATE SHOW

A Turkish delight

TODAY'S REVIVAL of the Far Eastern influence in fashion is translated here in exotic silk print caftan by Emily Weatherby—just the costume for stealing the late-late show and/or winning your modern-day sheik. At Bullock's, Lakewood Center.

ACCESSORY-WISE

The scarf is tops!

Scarves wind around everything from heads to hips.

They look particularly dramatic when side-draped into a turban of sheerest multi-color print silk, such as the one styled (at left) by Halston Americana.

The new hats, to complete a look, add flavor that is mostly soft, crushy as felts, floppy straws in brimmed Gabro style or little berets. The stiffer hat, in wrapped fabric or straw, is smaller, more of a cap.

Also important is the large felt fedora, sensational over longer loose hair—sashed with a 40-inch scarf around the crown.

MEET THE MODELS, TOO

Male fashions are featured for first time

With the "peacock revolution" fast reaching record proportions, we offer — for the first time in our special spring fashion edition — a words-and-picture report on the newest looks in male attire.

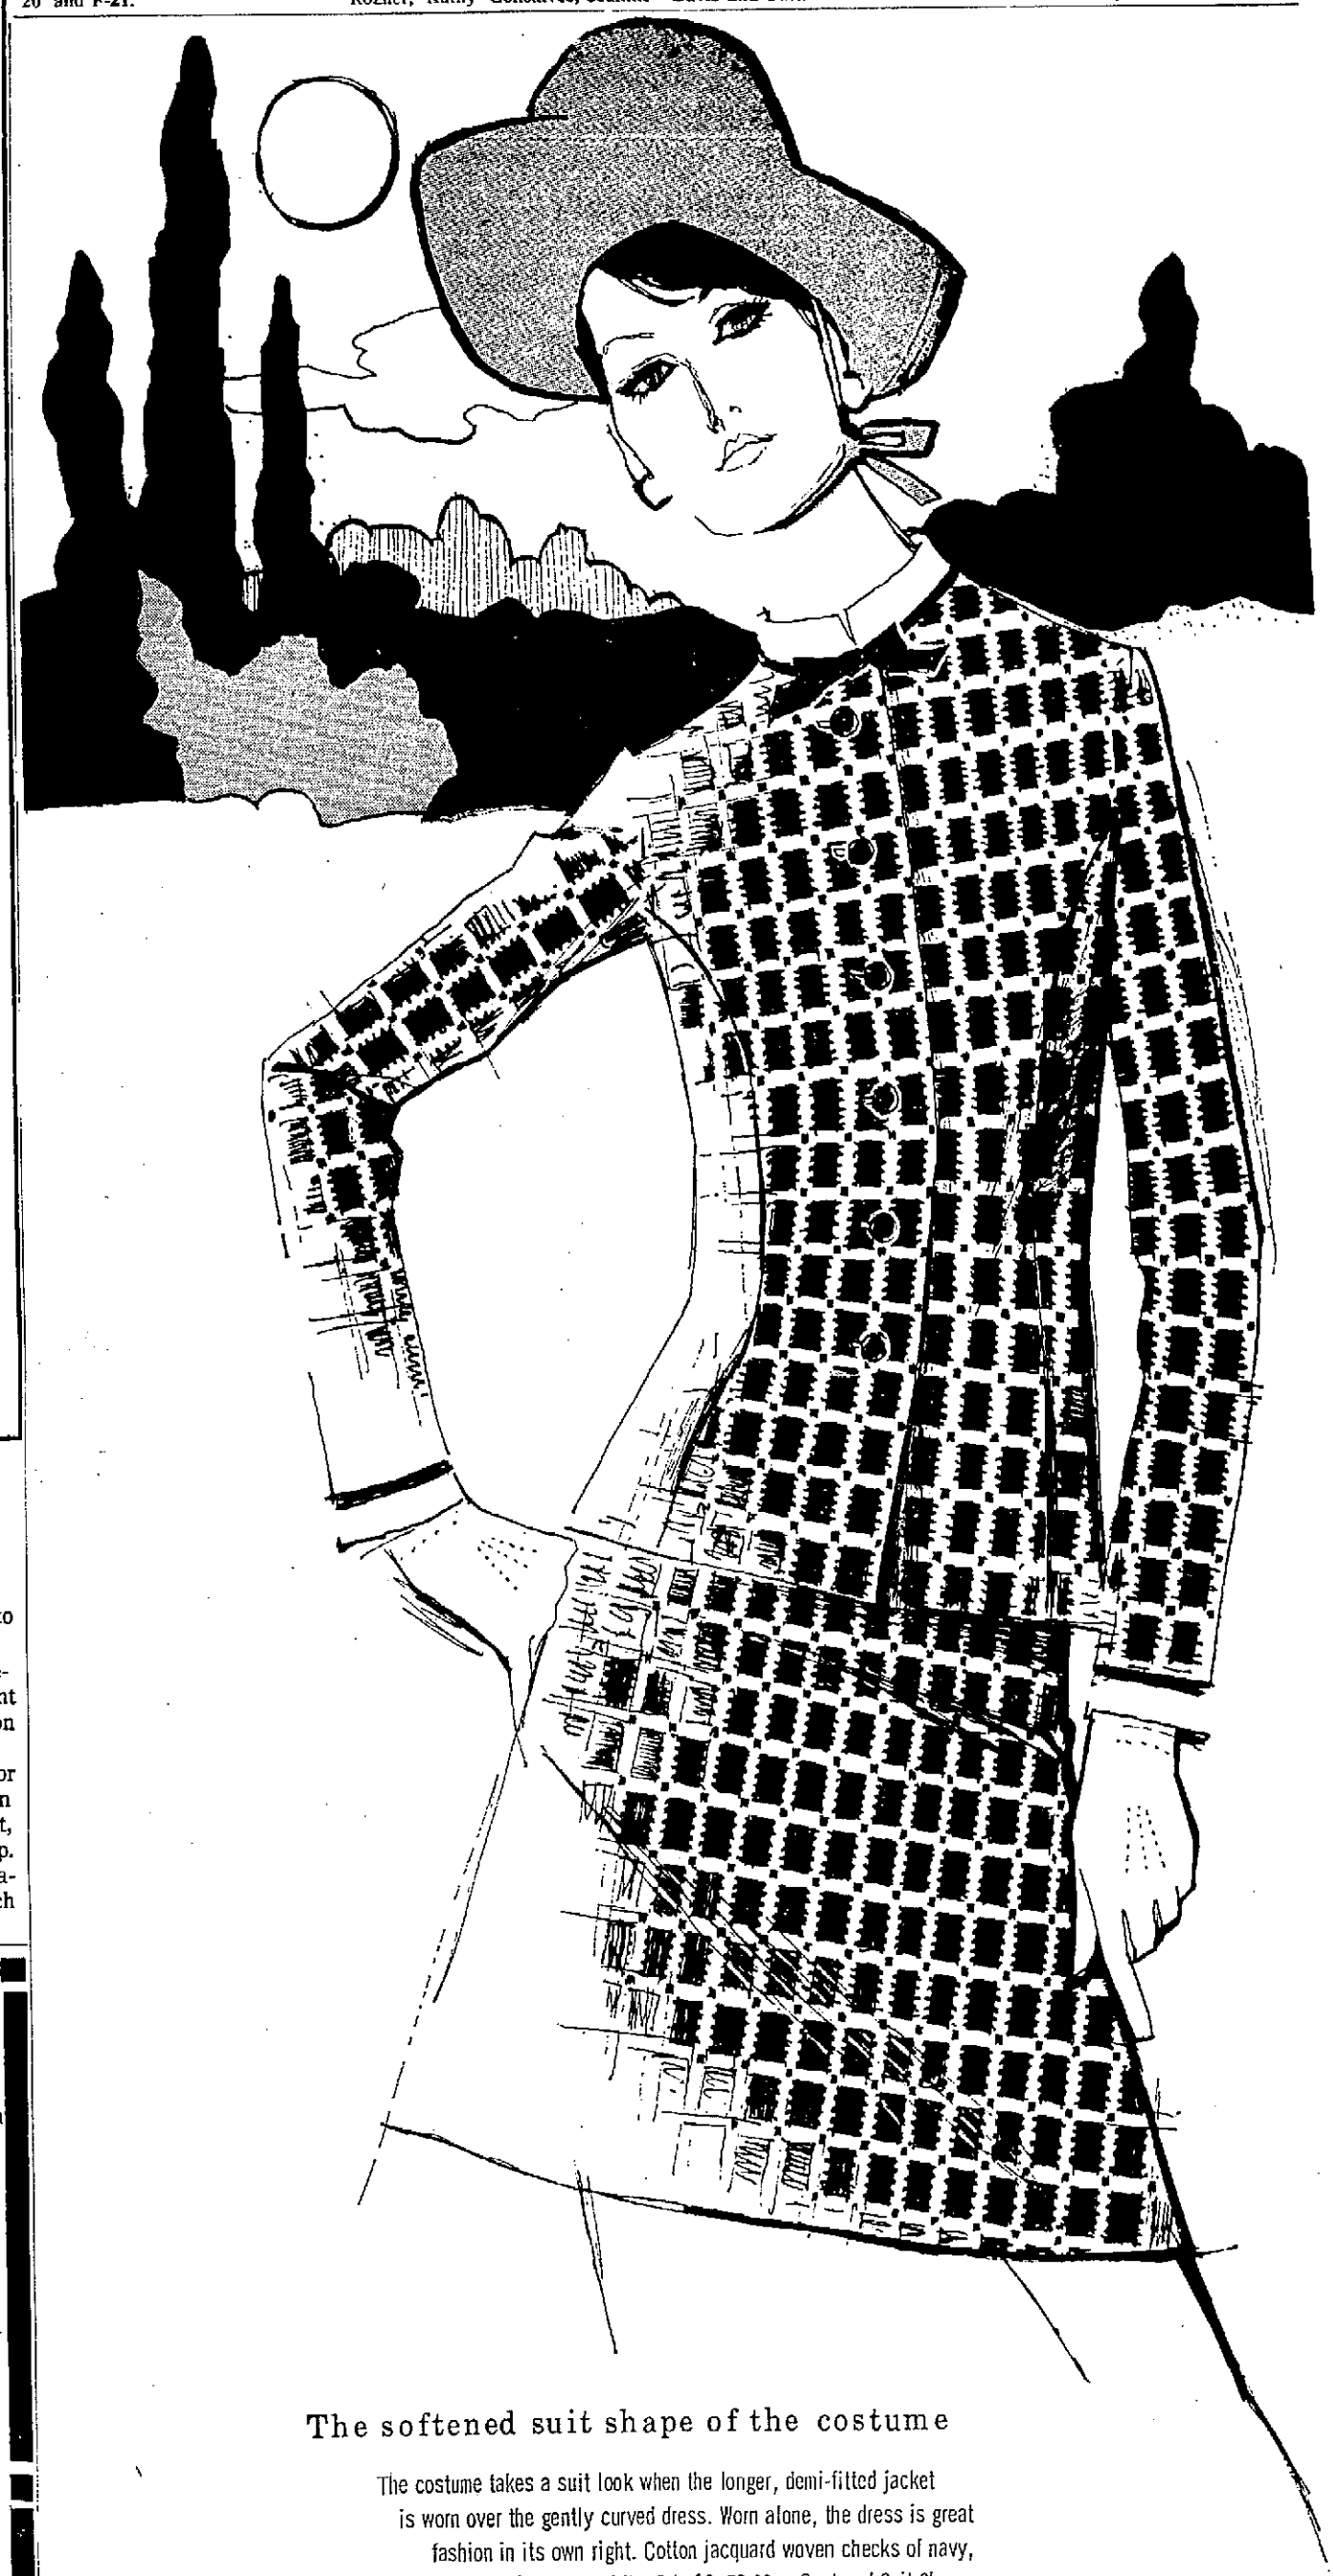

Stories and pictures can be found in this section on pages F-20 and F-21.

All fashions pictured on these and subsequent pages are available in local department stores and retail shops.

Displaying the clothes are models from Elda Barry's Vogue Modeling Agency, 4240 Atlantic Ave. They include Terry Green, Carole Rozner, Kathy Gonsalves, Jeannie Verdugo, Claudette Clement, Debbie Amos, Susie Sipprelle, Margaret Burlingham, Linda Knight, Alysia Lazo, Sharon Smith, Wendy Reichman, Sharon Whitlow, Lepsa Rose, Evarene Whitaker, Donna Cottrell, Becky Forester, Marsha Gean, Zathy McClanahan, Jamie Davis and Susan Dunn.

MALE MODELS, from the same agency, are Mike Barry, John Dubbels, Les Goetz and Mike Steele.

The issue was produced by Mary Ellis Carlton, director of women's news, with photographs by I.P-T staffer Curt Johnson and art sketches by Suzy Griffith.

The softened suit shape of the costume

The costume takes a suit look when the longer, demi-fitted jacket is worn over the gently curved dress. Worn alone, the dress is great fashion in its own right. Cotton jacquard woven checks of navy, paprika or mimosa on white; 8 to 16, 76.00. Coat and Suit Shop, Downtown Long Beach

Wild West hits the fashion trail

—Reprinted from The Saturday Evening Post, Mar. 15, 1915.

Robber's legacy

A boisterous stagecoach robber might have lent his bandanas for this up-dated bare midriff costume (left). The look is achieved with a red-white-black top and flared pants of heavy duck. Available at Sears, 450 Long Beach Blvd.

Cowboy shirt take-off

The free-and-easy pantdress below is a zesty simplification of the cowboy shirt, softened at the collar by a red voile hanky scarf and trimmed in back with button-down tab pocket. The costume, from Grasshopper, is available at Foreman and Clark, Lakewood and Los Altos shopping centers.

Flashing six guns

This fashionable stick-up artist wears a gabardine pantsuit with a wild west flair, by Barberine.

Spring's newest fabric is skin—lots of skin

This is the year to be a beautiful exhibitionist. It can be a weskit baring the bosom, a brief halter knit, an uncovered midriff, a dress with a drastic plunge.

Even jewelry accents the skin: bold bracelets, three or four, play up elbows and arms; rings on each finger spotlight the hand. Legs are not exactly hibernating in short skirts, and feet are in the open too in cut-out sandals.

Cottons splash back to the '30s

This year, fashionable sun-seekers will wear cotton play clothes with a costume look reminiscent of the 30s.

Three-piece pants outfits are especially popular, and will show up at midwinter resorts and summertime beaches.

The outfits pair bell-bottom printed cotton pants with a matching fabric bra. A see-through jacket shirt in voile usually tops the ensemble.

SUDDENLY LIFE'S MORE EXCITING!

At Lloyd & Joseph's we've found the ideal permanent. It produces a curl full of life and bounce . . . without drying the hair, without curl-tightness. We will use a lotion especially formulated for your hair type to insure its excellent response to this soft, pretty look. Call now for your appointment.

PERMANENT WAVE PLUS WIGLET SPECIAL OFFER!

During the next two weeks, Lloyd & Joseph's offers a Permanent Wave plus a Wiglet of your choice for only $22.95

AUTOGRAPHED EDITION

This costume is a Wragge. So easy to tell by its unmistakable class and high fashion caliber. But to leave no doubt of its aristocratic originality the designer has emblazoned his signature with a large red "W" on the pocket of a fluid white sleeveless wool dress . . . worn here under a magnificent red/white and blue wool plaid coat. From our Wragge collection, Castilian Room, La Pasada Level.

Glamor girls in pants

Boldly feminine

The pants takeover—biggest fashion story this season . . . above combined with another spring trend—a bit of Lombard-style feminine exposure. In cotton lace; at Helft's, 4518 Atlantic Ave.

Now . . . catching on fantastically

Now . . . catching on fantastically . . . the fresh new look of pants with dress. Flaring modestly from thigh to ankle, cotton lace pants are topped by shifty little mini dress in linen with lace sleeves. At Chris Miller Boutique, 4258 Atlantic Ave. and Hyatt Edgewater Inn.

Men may prefer blondes, but...

It's said that gentlemen prefer blondes. But ask most women and they'd rather have dark hair.

If you want to split hairs over this assumption, check in with Jerome Alexander, a wig stylist who travels the country steadily, talking with women in stores and appearing on women's TV and radio programs.

"The biggest market is for dark wigs, not blondes," said Alexander.

"It may sound surprising, but the most popular are black and gray blends and mixed grays.

"You get outside New York and you find that women want to look their age. I ask them, 'Don't you want to look younger?' And they're not buying wigs for that at all. They'll tell me, 'My husband likes the gray.' Imagine. Settled down to middle age at 35!"

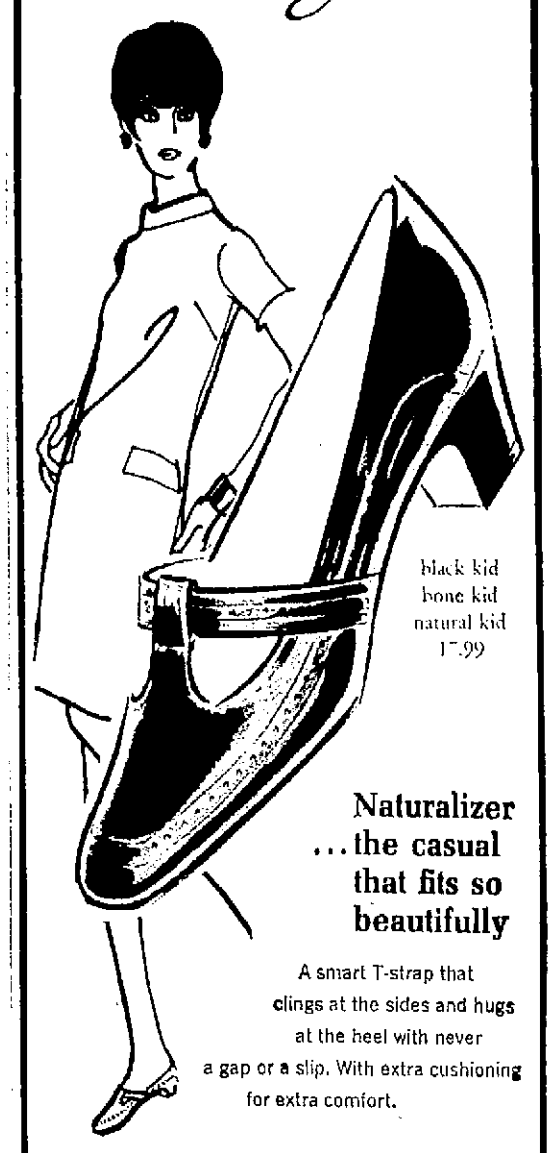

Alexander finds the more mature women buying the full wigs, many because they have hair problems — thinning, even balding. The young girls buy the partial pieces — wiglets, falls, perukes.

The all-girl look

It's smart to look pretty again. One way: the floor-length polyester sheer (above) with see-thru sleeves, cuffed in satin. Empire waist is accented with satin cummerbund, obi bow at back. In variety of fresh spring colors; at Audrey's Bridals & Formals, 131 E. Fourth St.

Looking for some attention?

Well, why not? They're a way to provoke instant attention and, after all, that's the name of the fashion game.

The newest fashion accessories, loosely defined as "body jewelry," have as many names as there are manufacturers.

Some call them breastplates or breast warmers; some refer to them as halters and shields, and a few describe them as bibs or bras.

Whatever they're called, they are, theoretically, an answer for the woman who prefers eye-riveting camouflage to complete nudity or transparency.

Ideally, they are meant to top evening skirts and pants with nothing under or over them. They can, however, be worn over flesh-colored bras, under transparent shirts and, if desired, on top of simple, otherwise unadorned dresses.

THE IDEA is by no means new. There are frescoes, statues and paintings throughout Europe illustrating this particular form of adornment. One of them, the statue of Venus in bikini, found at Pompeii and now in the archeological museum at Naples, started the wheels churning in the mind of one manufacturer.

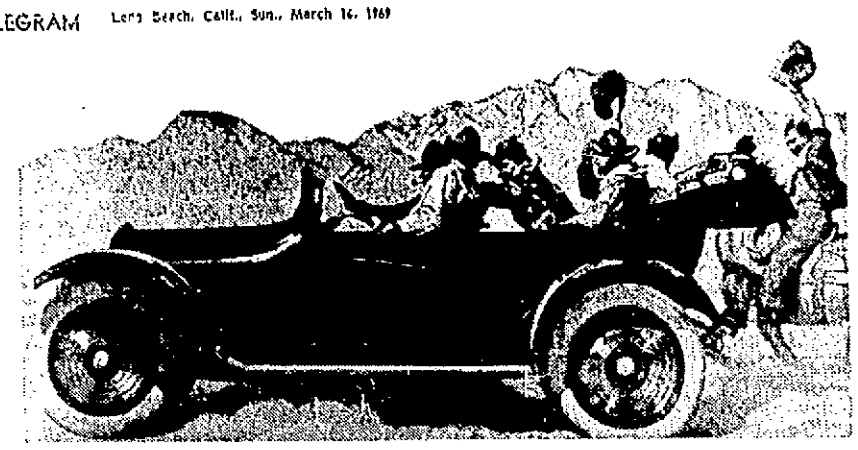

But like so many things in fashion, the idea occurred to other designers almost simultaneously.

Wild West hits the fashion trail

—Reprinted from The Saturday Evening Post, Mar. 15, 1915.

Robber's legacy

A boisterous stagecoach robber might have lent his bandanas for this up-dated bare midriff costume (left). The look is achieved with a red-white-black top and flared pants of heavy duck. Available at Sears, 450 Long Beach Blvd.

Cowboy shirt take-off

The free-and-easy pantdress below is a zesty simplification of the cowboy shirt, softened at the collar by a red voile hanky scarf and trimmed in back with button-down tab pocket. The costume, from Grasshopper, is available at Foreman and Clark, Lakewood and Los Altos shopping centers.

Flashing six guns

This fashionable stick-up artist wears a gabardine pantsuit with a wild west flair, by Barberine.

Spring's newest fabric is skin—lots of skin

This is the year to be a beautiful exhibitionist. It can be a weskit baring the bosom, a brief halter knit, an uncovered midriff, a dress with a drastic plunge.

Even jewelry accents the skin: bold bracelets, three or four, play up elbows and arms; rings on each finger spotlight the hand. Legs are not exactly hibernating in short skirts, and feet are in the open too in cut-out sandals.

Cottons splash back to the '30s

This year, fashionable sun-seekers will wear cotton play clothes with a costume look reminiscent of the 30s.

Three-piece pants outfits are especially popular, and will show up at midwinter resorts and summertime beaches.

The outfits pair bell-bottom printed cotton pants with a matching fabric bra. A see-through jacket shirt in voile usually tops the ensemble.

CHECKING IN FOR SPRING

Fabrics shape the new look

Supple is the word for spring-summer fabrics. Even the ones with lots of body must be able to move freely. Traditional cotton comes with new twists and shares a lot of the limelight with a range of synthetics.

Cottons have texture or print — line patterned, puckered, corded, ribbed. Pattern is strongly floral . . . but registering a close second are the checks, stripes, plaids and abstracts, often on filmier fabrics. And gingham is checking in, looking right again for relaxed, casual dressing.

The forecast for color is clear — pure tones in the primaries, softly muted in the secondaries. White scores high — alone or in combos with black, wine, navy, brown and newly soft grey.

Mix 'n match, head to toe

The look of spring '69 is the look of sportswear, even when the fabric is feminine . . . as here in checked skirt with coordinated sheer blouse. By Villager. Mary Jane shoes come in matching colors; at Kenady's, 5368 E. Second St.

Spring shapes up

Today's shape relaxes to the body — moves freely to suggest rather than outline. Small shoulders move to easy waist to flared hems . . . as in this washable yellow and white checked dress of arnel and acetate. At Georgia Williams Shoppe, 2023 Pacific Ave.

Slim midriff: a fashion 'must'

It's a "cinch" to be stylishly small-waisted; all it takes is a little time and slightly more effort. Try doing the following exercise:

Stand with feet slightly apart, knees bent a little, arms out like an airplane. Tighten stomach and buttocks muscles and, without moving arms, push hips as far to the left as you can, then as far to the right.

Try putting on a dance record for exercise background music.

FASHIONABLE GEORGE

FASHION FLASHBACK

Honest, George, you started a new hairdo

The father of our country, who's been remembered on the food pages for lo these many years with cherry pie, is now making news in fashion columns.

He's started a fashion look.

The newest hairdo around this spring is the "presidential peruke" — or, as some call it, the George Washington queue.

It's great for girls with long locks. All they have to do is tie a satin bow at the nape and they've got a built-in peruke.

It even works for girls with shorter coifs, too. They simply fix a long fall or unplaited braid on the back of the head and they've got the "presidential" too.

MAIN THING is to make sure the ends of the peruke curl under and that the bow is not an overwhelming one. Best sized ribbon to tie up your "presidential" is about a half inch wide.

"PRESIDENTIAL PERUKE"

You can follow George's original style right up to the bow with waves and curls or you can adapt it, as our model did, and wear your peruke with soft forehead bangs.

To inaugurate an easy-to-do hairdo, join the Georgey Girls.

As heels go up, bring on the ladylike leg!

New stocking styles reflect fashion's latest no to things comely and feminine from waistlines to higher heels.

In textures, for example, out is the bold and psychedelic. In is the sheer small-scale pattern, the kind that flatters every leg shape.

Even opaques, now a pantyhose classic, have gone lighter and sheerer letting a glow of skin show through.

Thoroughly feminine is the look of delicate pastel sheers tinting the leg to match light Spring costumes. Newsiest "neutrals" are the peachy melon tones that add just a warming blush to the leg and can be worn with almost any color.

SURFACE INTEREST is subtle rather than spectacular. The shiny "wet look" glistens in sheer shimmery hosiery — browns and nude tones by day, silver and gold for late day. For more lustre, it's the opulent "silk look," now available in Supp-hose stockings.

To go from legs to underpinnings — which is what hosiery is doing these days — new shoulder-to-toe body stockings provide perfect underprops for see-through clothes as well as one-step dressing ease.

Other innovations include a pantie girdle and figure-molding body stocking which hold up extra-length replaceable stockings.

Men may prefer blondes, but...

It's said that gentlemen prefer blondes. But ask most women and they'd rather have dark hair.

If you want to split hairs over this assumption, check in with Jerome Alexander, a wig stylist who travels the country steadily, talking with women in stores and appearing on women's TV and radio programs.

"The biggest market is for dark wigs, not blondes," said Alexander.

"It may sound surprising, but the most popular are black and gray blends and mixed grays.

"You get outside New York and you find that women want to look their age. I ask them, 'Don't you want to look younger?' And they're not buying wigs for that at all. They'll tell me, 'My husband likes the gray.' Imagine. Settled down to middle age at 35!"

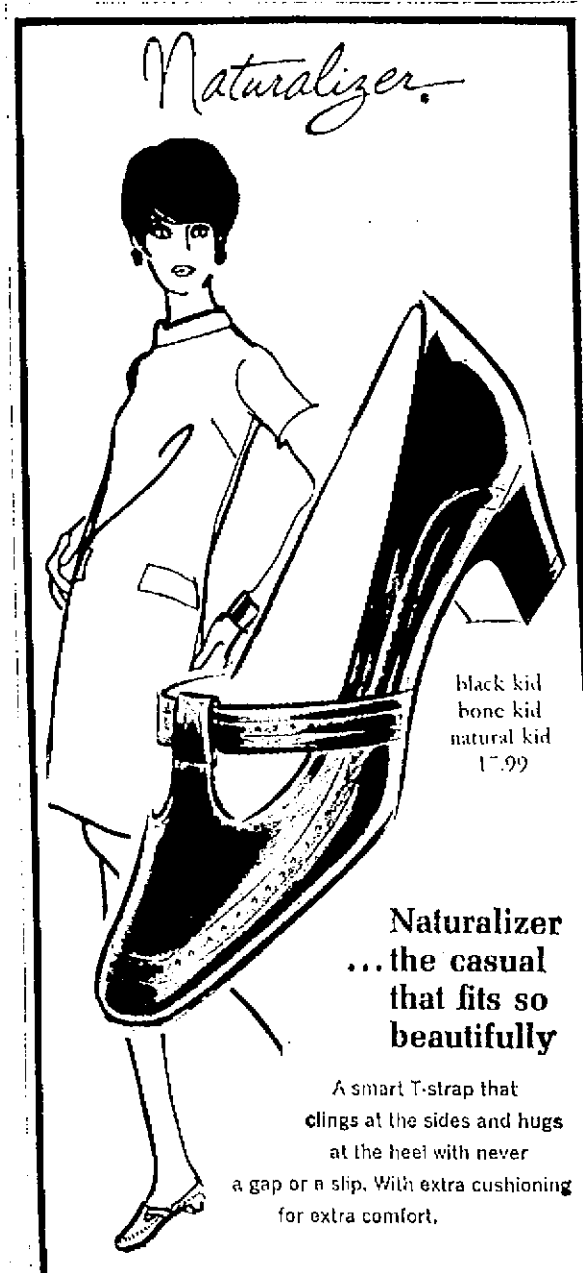

Alexander finds the more mature women buying the full wigs, many because they have hair problems — thinning, even balding. The young girls buy the partial pieces — wiglets, falls, perukes.

The all-girl look

It's smart to look pretty again. One way: the floor-length polyester sheer (above) with see-thru sleeves, cuffed in satin. Empire waist is accented with satin cummerbund, obi bow at back. In variety of fresh spring colors; at Audrey's Bridals & Formals, 131 E. Fourth St.

Looking for some attention?

Well, why not? They're a way to provoke instant attention and, after all, that's the name of the fashion game.

The newest fashion accessories, loosely defined as "body jewelry," have as many names as there are manufacturers.

Some call them breastplates or breast warmers; some refer to them as halters and shields, and a few describe them as bibs or bras.

Whatever they're called, they are, theoretically, an answer for the woman who prefers eye-riveting camouflage to complete nudity or transparency.

Ideally, they are meant to top evening skirts and pants with nothing under or over them. They can, however, be worn over flesh-colored bras, under transparent shirts and, if desired, on top of simple, otherwise unadorned dresses.

THE IDEA is by no means new. There are frescoes, statues and paintings throughout Europe illustrating this particular form of adornment. One of them, the statue of Venus in bikini, found at Pompeii and now in the archeological museum at Naples, started the wheels churning in the mind of one manufacturer.

Fashion plays 'mini' encores

Spring fashion is on a nostalgic note, playing many encores from the 20s, the 30s, the 40s.

Reminiscent of bygone days are the shirtdresses, the jumpers, wide-legged pants, bare midriffs . . . appearing now with a whole new attitude towards fashion — a free-wheeling look of individuality.

The shirt story grows and grows — by itself — but newer as the shirtdress. It may be a little sleeveless body skimmer with contrast collar and tab front; it may be a full-sleeved, bloused top sashed at the waist over a gathered skirt.

Collared or cut-out, V-neck or slash neck, a shirt or shirtdress may have no sleeves at all, short mini-sleeves or long billowy sleeves.

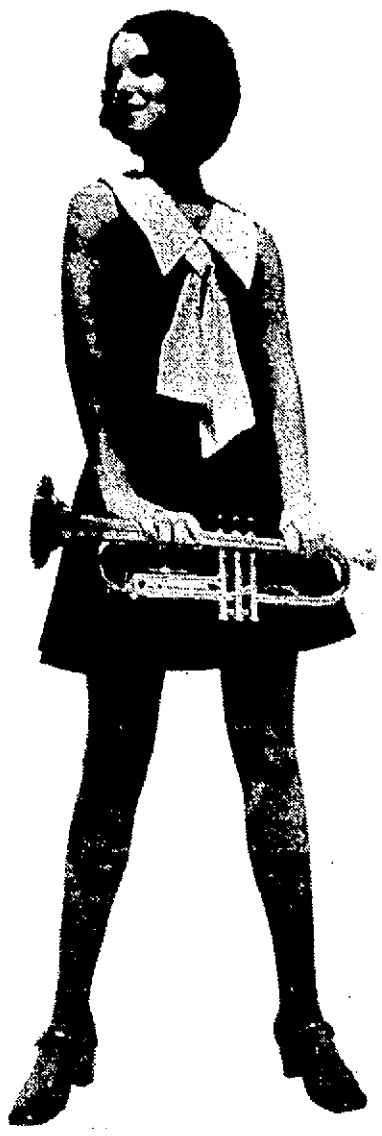

Two of the newest looks: tiny tucked sleeves and deep nautical neck surrounded by a very large relaxed collar.

Fashion on the go

Abstracts of toast and black on white go non-stop on this polyester knit shift by R & K original. Adding fashion mileage: shoes by Carney with the new higher heel. At Walker's, Fourth Street and Pine Avenue.

It's 23 skidoo!

Out of the Charleston era, today's version of the long torso dress with swingy skirt, white collar and tie. Navy blue dotted in white; by Suz of California. At Petite Junction, Norwalk Square.

Making the scene

Looking fresh and new, the shirtdress is staging a big comeback . . . here in a mini-skirted version scored in black and white. The accent: red-and-white polka dot tie. At Leonard's Fashions, Los Altos Center.

Citypants take on flair with right accessories

Even the most fashion-conscious girl can be confused about pants etiquette these days.

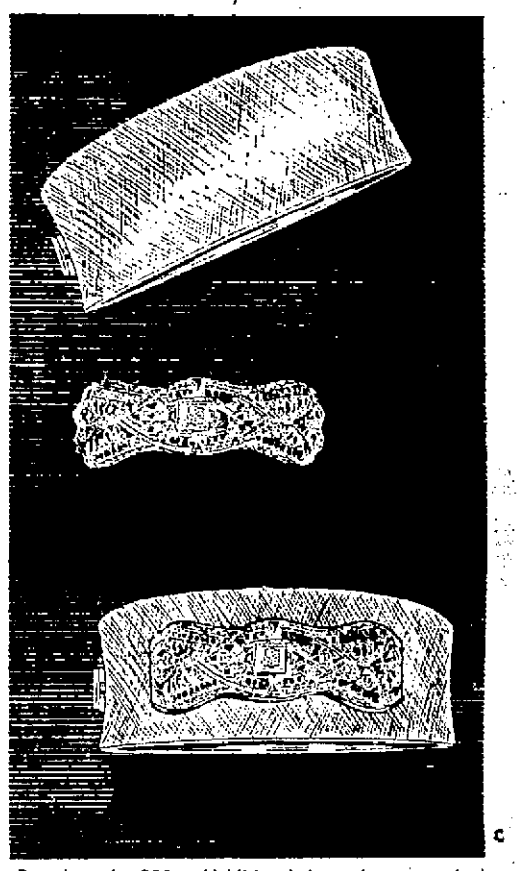

The whole matter boils down to a subtle distinction between just slacks or shorts worn with any kind of tops or footwear and the carefully assembled pants costumes designed to be worn in town with exactly the right accessories.

The former does not belong on city streets in any circumstance.

The latter is now appropriate for strolling in some cities, but still may not be right for matinees, museums and art galleries and some fashionable restaurants. Culottes and culotte dresses which look like skirts are generally acceptable.

REEL NATURAL!

What? No clothes at all?

Hollywood is getting ready to launch a no-clothes look in the movies, predicts fashion designer Jean Louis, who questions, "How can you design nudity?"

He was asked to do it. But the talented designer of movie clothes, who has his own couture business, and designed the first see-through dress and body foundation — for Marlene Dietrich, 17 years ago — didn't want any part of it.

"The movie script was so vulgar and so unhealthy, I couldn't believe it, and they wanted me to do the clothes for the stars. It would have been almost a no-clothes look.

"The 'clothes' would need lots of engineering, they told me, but I advised them to let the actors go nude and to hire, instead of a dress designer, a great lighting expert."

It's a widespread fallacy that the key to a sexy look is in how much of the human body is bared, says Louis.

HIS DRESS for Marlene Dietrich created a sensation because it was a conversation piece. The see-through idea was an illusion. Actually, Louis had designed a very tight skin-colored body foundation over which she wore a transparent gown. It was sexy-looking with-out being immodest, Louis says.

"The topless look is a disgrace. Ridiculous. I don't know a nice woman who would wear it. It is all right for exhibitionists or for burlesque performers where nothing is supposed to be left to the imagination," he says.

LOUIS FAVORS drapped fabrics that reveal the body in a subtle way.

For example, soft jersey fabric may reveal the body's movements and stimulate more intrigue than any topless dress one can wear. The observer ponders "what is underneath?" rather than "is that all there is to her?"

"Marilyn Monroe was a sex symbol because she knew how to move her body," says Louis. "Much was said about nudity, but it was her sensuous-appearing movements of hips and torso that made her a sensation."

Today's young girls have the wrong image of sex appeal, and scorn petticoats and brassieres because they want to be "with it," he says.

"Intelligent, pretty screen stars will have no part of the new look. Gayle Hunnicutt is an exciting girl, but she is sensible enough to abhor the undressed look. Katharine Hepburn doesn't want it, Rosalind Russell and Shirley McLaine don't like it."

Louis has designed clothes for their recent movies, and he did the '20s look for "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

TAKE NOTE, GIRL WATCHERS

The pants that stop short

Whether it's sportswear, casualwear or streetwear, the relaxed fashion for spring is soft and feminine — yet outgoing, emphatic.

It's the look of separates, movement, activity — it's the shaped body released for movement, the shirty look, the pulled-together look, pants all over the place — both short and long — bared at the leg, bared at the midriff.

The look is unrestricted — pants for women, lots of bareness. It's fresh, natural and doesn't wear the wearer.

The new relaxed fashion is easy to like, easy to wear. It's no one look but it has a flavor . . . the flavor is sporty.

Making waves

The one-piece look in short pants—suspendered jumpsuit by Joe Stevens, here in brown and white splashed with pink, yellow, orange. Also making waves: white voille shirt; hand-rubbed leather sandals by Boutique Marco. At Serhan-Jacobs, 5016 E. Second St., Belmont Shore.

Easy care, easy go

The short-short story that's long on value . . . dyed-to-match knit shorts, short-sleeved top in 100 per cent nylon. Available in a variety of colors. The accessories: T-strap sandals, straw beach bag, mod sunglasses. At Woolworths, Fourth Street and Pine Avenue.

Subtract the sleeves for smart 'in' vestment

Vests? Yes!

But today's vests give an added "in" vestment to spring fashions.

They're becoming vestskirts — an extended version of the suspender skirt with the added advantage of the vest-y look; and they're becoming vestcoats, worn as sleeveless coat over pants or as a jumper over blouse.

Switch and inter-switch them. It's no telling what the imagination can do with such versatility.

IT'S POW -- WITH WOW!

Let's make way for Indians

Well, fringe my wigwam and call me Pocahontas.

The heap big thing on the teen scene this spring is the Indian look, which has it like a tent over the now-passe hippie or flower child look.

Fringed slacks and vests, decorative headbands, beaded necklaces, belts and moccasins are decorated with Indian sign language and worn by squaws and braves in matched sets.

The traditional signs have been updated by imaginative teens to reflect their own colorful patois, comprehensible only to members of the tribe.

For example, the old Indian sign for arrow translates to "let's split." The Indian sign for rattlesnake jaw means "Socit to me." The Indian sign for a Gila monster means "freak out." And so on.

MANY BRIGHT young squaws are asking how to use their sewing machines to stitch Indian sign language on their felt headbands and leather-look slacks.

Most popular items are his-and-her headbands embroidered with a variety of tender legends. Next most popular are matching bolero vests of felt or fringed leather-look fabric decorated with beads and Indian picture-talk trim.

The signs are easy to make on any modern zigzag sewing machine that can do embroidery work. A transparent foot helps to keep an eye on the job.

EXPERT Indian-sign stitchers suggest that you trace design directly on fabric with a pencil and that you practice a new design on scraps before trying to stitch it onto a garment.

Use regular mercerized thread in a variety of bright colors. Headbands may be of felt or ribbon, but felt is easiest because it doesn't require lining and it can be edge-finished with pinking shears. A small piece of elastic will make it fit securely.

The designs may be stitched on leatherette or suede, too. You will probably have to loosen your tension for the fabrics, but test the pattern first.

IF YOU DON'T own an automatic machine, it's perfectly possible to hand-embroider the Indian signs.

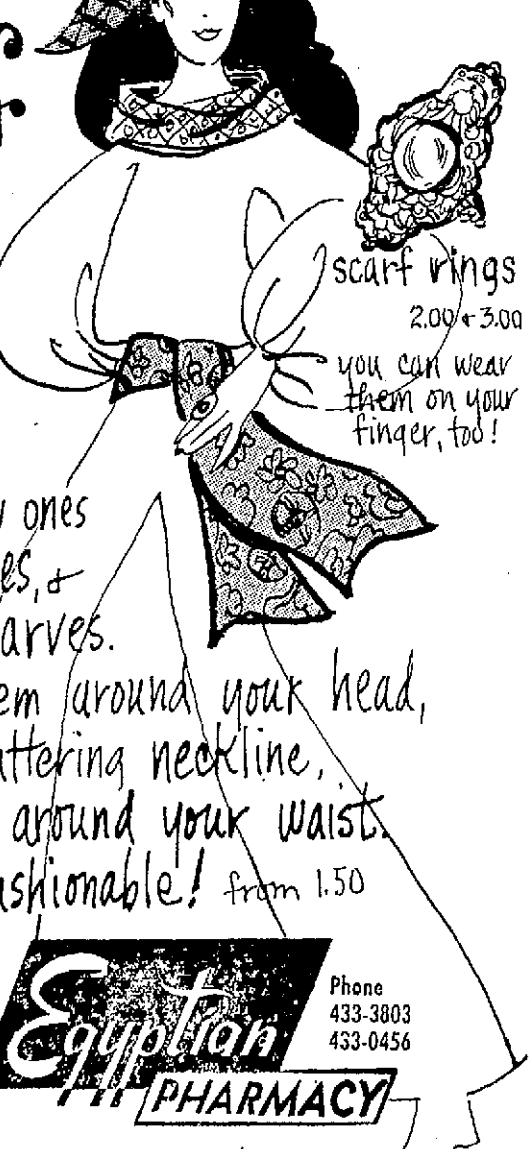

It's easy to get your complete Indian sign language vocabulary with instruction for making each on your automatic sewing machine, plus instructions for an authentic coin purse to embroider.

Just send 50 cents to Indian Signs, J 206, Stitchin' Time, in care of Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 503, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to include your name, address and zip code.

Fashion plays 'mini' encores

Fashion on the go

Abstracts of toast and black on white go non-stop on this polyester knit shift by R & K original. Adding fashion mileage: shoes by Carney with the new higher heel. At Walker's, Fourth Street and Pine Avenue.

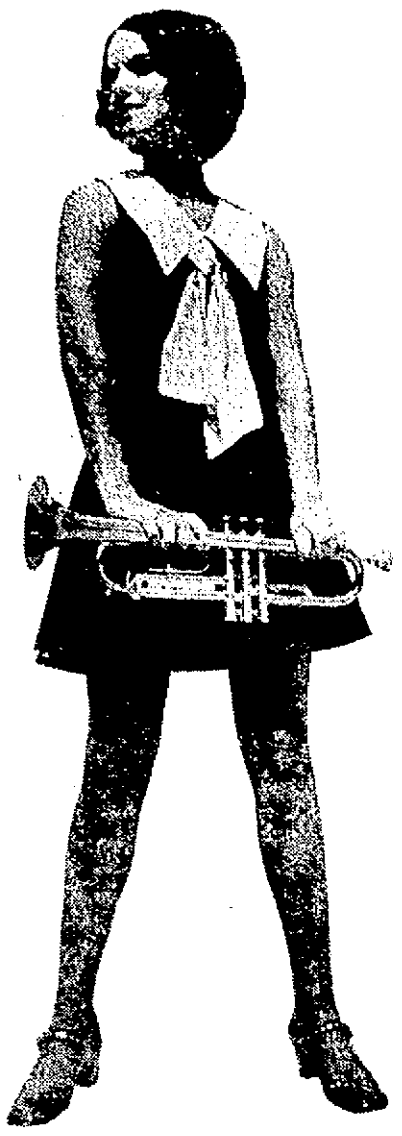

Spring fashion is on a nostalgic note, playing many encores from the 20s, the 30s, the 40s.

Reminiscent of bygone days are the shirtdresses, the jumpers, wide-legged pants, bare midriffs . . . appearing now with a whole new attitude towards fashion — a free-wheeling look of individuality.

The shirt story grows and grows — by itself — but newer as the shirtdress. It may be a little sleeveless body skimmer with contrast collar and tab front; it may be a full-sleeved, bloused top sashed at the waist over a gathered skirt.

Collared or cut-out, V-neck or slash neck, a shirt or shirtdress may have no sleeves at all, short mini-sleeves or long billowy sleeves.

Two of the newest looks: tiny tucked sleeves and deep nautical neck surrounded by a very large relaxed collar.

It's 23 skidoo!

Out of the Charleston era, today's version of the long torso dress with swingy skirt, white collar and tie. Navy blue dotted in white; by Suz of California. At Petite Junction, Norwalk Square.

Making the scene

Looking fresh and new, the shirtdress is staging a big comeback . . . here in a mini-skirted version scored in black and white. The accent: red-and-white polka dot tie. At Leonard's Fashions, Los Altos Center.

Citypants take on flair with right accessories

Even the most fashion-conscious girl can be confused about pants etiquette these days.

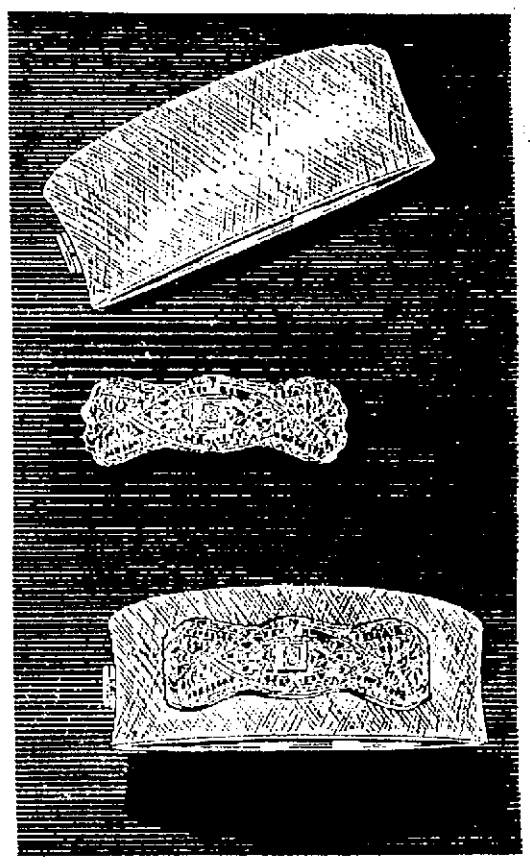

The whole matter boils down to a subtle distinction between just slacks or shorts worn with any kind of tops or footwear and the carefully assembled pants costumes designed to be worn in town with exactly the right accessories.

The former does not belong on city streets in any circumstance.

The latter is now appropriate for strolling in some cities, but still may not be right for matinees, museums and art galleries and some fashionable restaurants. Culottes and culotte dresses which look like skirts are generally acceptable.

REEL NATURAL!

What? No clothes at all?

Hollywood is getting ready to launch a no-clothes look in the movies, predicts fashion designer Jean Louis, who questions, "How can you design nudity?"

He was asked to do it. But the talented designer of movie clothes, who has his own couture business, and designed the first see-through dress and body foundation — for Marlene Dietrich, 17 years ago — didn't want any part of it.

"The movie script was so vulgar and so unhealthy, I couldn't believe it, and they wanted me to do the clothes for the stars. It would have been almost a no-clothes look.

"The 'clothes' would need lots of engineering, they told me, but I advised them to let the actors go nude and to hire, instead of a dress designer, a great lighting expert."

It's a widespread fallacy that the key to a sexy look is in how much of the human body is bared, says Louis.

HIS DRESS for Marlene Dietrich created a sensation because it was a conversation piece. The see-through idea was an illusion. Actually, Louis had designed a very tight skin-colored body foundation over which she wore a transparent gown. It was sexy-looking with-out being immodest, Louis says.

"The topless look is a disgrace. Ridiculous. I don't know a nice woman who would wear it. It is all right for exhibitionists or for burlesque performers where nothing is supposed to be left to the imagination," he says.

LOUIS FAVORS drapped fabrics that reveal the body in a subtle way.

For example, soft jersey fabric may reveal the body's movements and stimulate more intrigue than any topless dress one can wear. The observer ponders "what is underneath?" rather than "is that all there is to her?"

"Marilyn Monroe was a sex symbol because she knew how to move her body," says Louis. "Much was said about nudity, but it was her sensuous-appearing movements of hips and torso that made her a sensation."

Today's young girls have the wrong image of sex appeal, and scorn petticoats and brassieres because they want to be "with it," he says.

"Intelligent, pretty screen stars will have no part of the new look. Gayle Hunnicutt is an exciting girl, but she is sensible enough to abhor the undressed look. Katharine Hepburn doesn't want it, Rosalind Russell and Shirley McLaine don't like it."

Louis has designed clothes for their recent movies, and he did the '20s look for "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

LEGS REMAIN ON FASHION CYCLE

Exercise, grooming help

Skirts show no signs of becoming longer this spring, which means that concentrated leg care will have to continue. It's a matter for reflection that for as long as skirts remain up, the eyes of the average male observer will inevitably go down.

To be lovely to look at, legs need to be lean and shapely, smooth and silky, well groomed from every angle. Daily exercise will not only firm the muscles of your legs, but will also help your posture.

Try this "scissors" cut: Pace your hands behind your head and raise your legs. Hold them for a minute in the air and then swing them from side to side several times before relaxing.

Another good leg exercise is cycling in the air. Lie on the floor, supporting your hips on high with your hands. Then "cycle".

ALTHOUGH massage cannot turn heavy legs into slim legs, it does tone and firm flabby muscles. Pour a little moist oil of Olay into the palms of your hands. Now, starting with one hand on either side of the ankle, stroke the oil firmly over the knee. Lift the hands and start again at the ankles. Repeat several times on each leg.

TAKE NOTE, GIRL WATCHERS

The pants that stop short

Whether it's sportswear, casualwear or streetwear, the relaxed fashion for spring is soft and feminine — yet outgoing, emphatic.

It's the look of separates, movement, activity — it's the shaped body released for movement, the shirty look, the pulled-together look, pants all over the place — both short and long — bared at the leg, bared at the midriff.

The look is unrestricted — pants for women, lots of bareness. It's fresh, natural and doesn't wear the wearer.

The new relaxed fashion is easy to like, easy to wear. It's no one look but it has a flavor . . . the flavor is sporty.

Making waves

The one-piece look in short pants—suspendered jumpsuit by Joe Stevens, here in brown and white splashed with pink, yellow, orange. Also making waves: white voille shirt; hand-rubbed leather sandals by Boutique Marco. At Serhan-Jacobs, 5016 E. Second St., Belmont Shore.

Easy care, easy go

The short-short story that's long on value . . . dyed-to-match knit shorts, short-sleeved top in 100 per cent nylon. Available in a variety of colors. The accessories: T-strap sandals, straw beach bag, mod sunglasses. At Woolworths, Fourth Street and Pine Avenue.

Subtract the sleeves for smart 'in' vestment

Vests? Yes!

But today's vests give an added "in" vestment to spring fashions.

They're becoming vestskirts — an extended version of the suspender skirt with the added advantage of the vest-y look; and they're becoming vestcoats, worn as sleeveless coat over pants or as a jumper over blouse.

Switch and inter-switch them. It's no telling what the imagination can do with such versatility.

IT'S POW -- WITH WOW!

Let's make way for Indians

Well, fringe my wigwam and call me Pocahontas.

The heap big thing on the teen scene this spring is the Indian look, which has it like a tent over the now-passe hippie or flower child look.

Fringed slacks and vests, decorative headbands, beaded necklaces, belts and moccasins are decorated with Indian sign language and worn by squaws and braves in matched sets.

The traditional signs have been updated by imaginative teens to reflect their own colorful patois, comprehensible only to members of the tribe.

For example, the old Indian sign for arrow translates to "let's split." The Indian sign for rattlesnake jaw means "Socit to me." The Indian sign for a Gila monster means "freak out." And so on.

MANY BRIGHT young squaws are asking how to use their sewing machines to stitch Indian sign language on their felt headbands and leather-look slacks.

Most popular items are his-and-her headbands embroidered with a variety of tender legends. Next most popular are matching bolero vests of felt or fringed leather-look fabric decorated with beads and Indian picture-talk trim.

The signs are easy to make on any modern zigzag sewing machine that can do embroidery work. A transparent foot helps to keep an eye on the job.

EXPERT Indian-sign stitchers suggest that you trace design directly on fabric with a pencil and that you practice a new design on scraps before trying to stitch it onto a garment.

Use regular mercerized thread in a variety of bright colors. Headbands may be of felt or ribbon, but felt is easiest because it doesn't require lining and it can be edge-finished with pinking shears. A small piece of elastic will make it fit securely.

The designs may be stitched on leatherette or suede, too. You will probably have to loosen your tension for the fabrics, but test the pattern first.

IF YOU DON'T own an automatic machine, it's perfectly possible to hand-embroider the Indian signs.

It's easy to get your complete Indian sign language vocabulary with instruction for making each on your automatic sewing machine, plus instructions for an authentic coin purse to embroider.

Just send 50 cents to Indian Signs, J 206, Stitchin' Time, in care of Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 503, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to include your name, address and zip code.

Exercise, grooming help

Skirts show no signs of becoming longer this spring, which means that concentrated leg care will have to continue. It's a matter for reflection that for as long as skirts remain up, the eyes of the average male observer will inevitably go down.

To be lovely to look at, legs need to be lean and shapely, smooth and silky, well groomed from every angle. Daily exercise will not only firm the muscles of your legs, but will also help your posture.

Try this "scissors" cut: Pace your hands behind your head and raise your legs. Hold them for a minute in the air and then swing them from side to side several times before relaxing.

Another good leg exercise is cycling in the air. Lie on the floor, supporting your hips on high with your hands. Then "cycle".

ALTHOUGH massage cannot turn heavy legs into slim legs, it does tone and firm flabby muscles. Pour a little moist oil of Olay into the palms of your hands. Now, starting with one hand on either side of the ankle, stroke the oil firmly over the knee. Lift the hands and start again at the ankles. Repeat several times on each leg.

Fashion Flash

The looks that are in step for spring

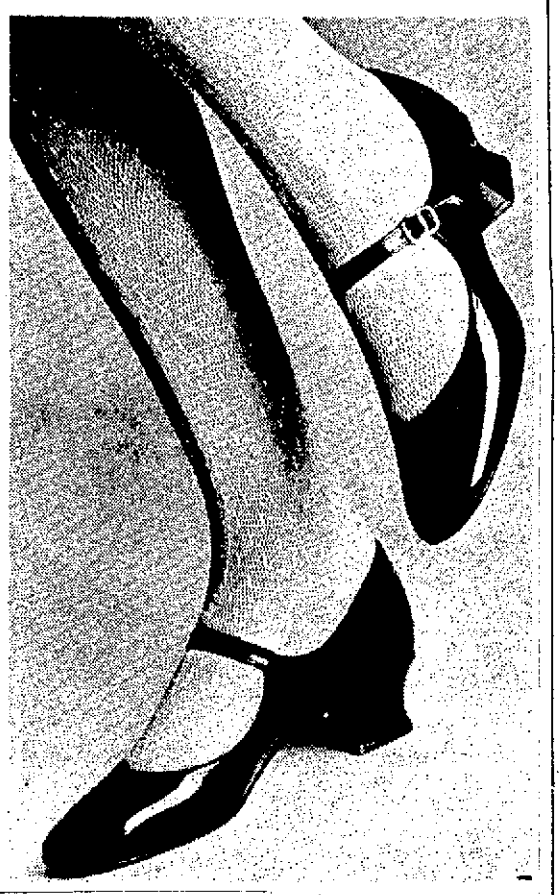

Buckles, by George!

Reminiscent of George Washington's day, soaring high buckle and even higher tongue (above) dramatize new up-front styling. Made of black patent with young curvy heel, it's perfect with skirts or pants. At Chandler's, Lakewood Shopping Center.

Well-heeled reptiles

The new, higher three-quarter heel (above) walks elegantly on alligator and lizard pumps. Top, brown alligator opera pump; below, lizard D'Orsay in black or brown. At Guild House, 4218 Atlantic Ave.

Remember Baby Jane?

A look from yesteryear—the baby doll shoe—has gone 1969 in shiny black Patenlite, with freshly shaped circle toe and small flared heel. At Leed's, 257 Pine Ave. in downtown Long Beach; also Lakewood Center, Los Altos Center.

Bared, bowed, buckled and bold

Toe shapes that are right this spring are round, but softly now, without the exaggerated bluntness that was experimental a season ago. Yet the shape must not be too slim. This season's shoes have a certain fullness without being hefty.

The ones to wear with daytime trousers or the miniest skirts can be the widest, maybe with an extension sole. When it's a nighttime thing, watch for the feminine snubbed toes that wear a bow, the closest to a fragile look one sees this season.

IT'S THE heels that give spring shoes their look of newness.

To balance the snubby toe with height, heels now can be flat or fair-to-middlin' or nearly three inches high. The newest height: a little more than two inches.

Straight at the inside and somewhat narrowed, it's a really marvelous look with pants—keeps the whole thing absolutely feminine, which is what it's all about, even when one wears the trousers.

These straight and narrow heels are not to be confused with the spikey ones of the 50s. No, these are broader and shaped quite differently, being set rather far back and rising straight to the body of the shoe, without the fall curve at the top.

When the height comes down, shape takes over.

There are flares, little trumpets and museum curves, heels that angle in or curve out at the back and, once again, the young look of the chunky, military heel.

THE SHOES that will take a fling this spring are those with the strength to stand up to some of the most positive, individual fashion looks ever put together.

Example: The snub pump, one of the great looks because of its fresh-as-cream clarity, its good lines that stand on their own, don't rely on ornamentation to carry the message.

The message gets there by way of sidelines now, and these can be straight or curvy, notched, scalloped, cut very low, even cut away to make the middle bare.

Teen step is groovy, off-beat

"Go walkin' groovy . . . steppin' softly . . . sportin' lively."

That's the shoe fashion message for girls from fashion authorities, who forecast a big season for three distinct looks — the off-beat the flowery-colored feminine and the sporty red, white and blue.

A shoe wardrobe for the girl who knows where the action is might start with a trend-setting open-toe, closed-heel sandal — and step up a 40s platform that's authentically open at toe and heel.

THE WEDGED slip-on, sling-back spectator and instep-strapped dancing shoe also take strong stands.

Ready to go back to nature? Take the country route in a rugged ankle boot — just like a man's.

Flowery colors skip to a feminine beat — a pumpkin leather crepe-soled sandal, for example, or a pink kid flat petaled at the sides.

Build up droopy hair

If your hair is droopy and limp and loses its set almost immediately, it probably lacks body. Here are some ways to combat the "droops":

Wind rollers smoothly and firmly and fasten them properly; try using a slightly smaller size roller; use a setting lotion made for hard-to-hold hair; use just enough hair spray to hold your hair without dampening it; use a hair dryer and make sure your hair is completely dry; switch to a cream rinse designed to add body.

Most important, choose a simple style that's easy to maintain.

FASHION IN THE BAG

How to develop new purse-onality

The "one good bag to go with everything" concept has fallen into fashion bankruptcy.

Now handbags are the spotlight accessory, playing a prominent part in this season's total look.

Women are moving towards more personal and individual ways of putting a costume together — and the new handbags give that added "purse-onality."

RUDI GERNREICH, whose farsighted fashion predictions have won him world fame, feels that now is the time to present understated clothes because the accessory is the important thing.

"My collection is very basic," he said.

But everyone knows that Rudi's basic is everyone else's wild.

Take, for example, his new "basic" orange linen miniskirt with the poet's blouse of orange, blue and white-striped satin. The sash picks up the same colors in a slightly different pattern. For earrings: white painted ping-pong balls.

"Basic" notwithstanding, a bag to coordinate with the Rudi look has to be slightly kooky.

So how about a soft, square, bright orange shoulder pouch? There's one that spurts a watch for the girl on the go.

DONALD BROOKS puts prints on print first for spring.

A pure silk coat in jumbo black and white checks plays off a shirtdress in a tinier version of the same print. A scarf to be knotted at the neck or twined through the handbag combines the jumbo and mini patterns of the coat and dress.

But what kind of handbag can keep pace with this print explosion?

The designer admits that if he were to accessorize this outfit, he would select a large, strong satchel bag. And for material he'd choose black kid, black patent or black lizzard — "the shinier the better."

He suggests that women stay away from gimmicks when trying to deal with his complicated color strategy and use simple, man-tailored handbags and shoes.

Fabric is soft, puckery, puffed

This spring, if a fabric isn't puckery, it's apt to be puffed.

The feel of fabrics — their softness and unusual texture — is an important part of the new elegant, lady-like trend in fashion.

Puckery cottons like seersucker and ribbon stripe leno are popular in both ready-to-wear and piece goods fabrics.

In puffed cottons you'll see a wealth of waffle-textured piques, as well as sculptured brocade and matelasse.

Trans-world chic . . .

The looks that are in step for spring

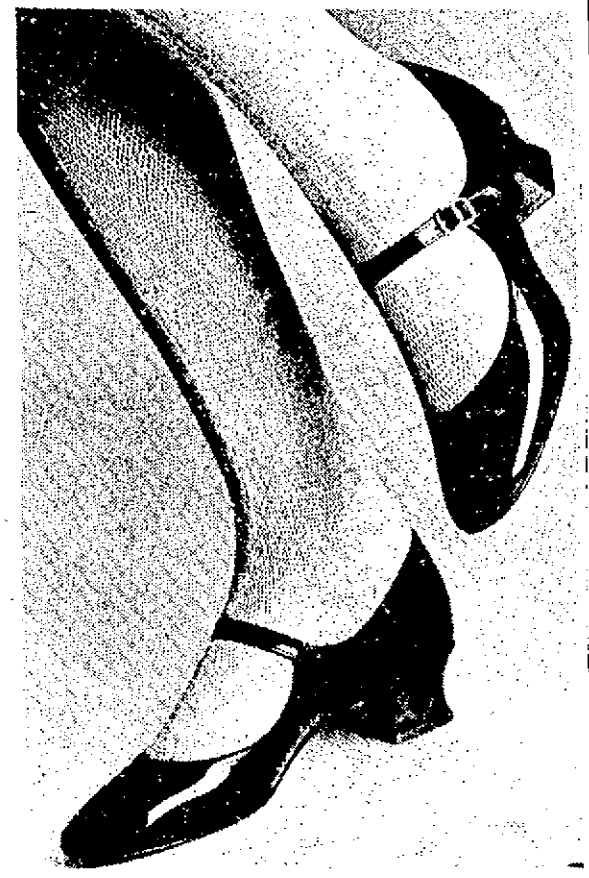

Well-heeled reptiles

The new, higher three-quarter heel (above) walks elegantly on alligator and lizard pumps. Top, brown alligator opera pump; below, lizard D'Orsay in black or brown. At Guild House, 4218 Atlantic Ave.

Buckles, by George!

Reminiscent of George Washington's day, soaring high buckle and even higher tongue (above) dramatize new up-front styling. Made of black patent with young curvy heel, it's perfect with skirts or pants. At Chandler's, Lakewood Shopping Center.

Remember Baby Jane?

A look from yesteryear—the baby doll shoe—has gone 1969 in shiny black Patenlite, with freshly shaped circle toe and small flared heel. At Leed's, 257 Pine Ave. in downtown Long Beach; also Lakewood Center, Los Altos Center.

Bared, bowed, buckled and bold

Toe shapes that are right this spring are round, but softly now, without the exaggerated bluntness that was experimental a season ago. Yet the shape must not be too slim. This season's shoes have a certain fullness without being hefty.

The ones to wear with daytime trousers or, the miniest skirts can be the widest, maybe with an extension sole. When it's a nighttime thing, watch for the feminine snubbed toes that wear a bow, the closest to a fragile look one sees this season.

IT'S THE heels that give spring shoes their look of newness.

To balance the snubby toe with height, heels now can be flat or fair-to-middlin' or nearly three inches high. The newest height: a little more than two inches.

Straight at the inside and somewhat narrowed, it's a really marvelous look with pants—keeps the whole thing absolutely feminine, which is what it's all about, even when one wears the trousers.

These straight and narrow heels are not to be confused with the spikey ones of the 50s. No, these are broader and shaped quite differently, being set rather far back and rising straight to the body of the shoe, without the full curve at the top.

When the height comes down, shape takes over.

There are flares, little trumpets and museum curves, heels that angle in or curve out at the back and, once again, the young look of the chunky, military heel.

THE SHOES that will take a fling this spring are those with the strength to stand up to some of the most positive, individual fashion looks ever put together.

Example: The snub pump, one of the great looks because of its fresh-as-cream clarity, its good lines that stand on their own, don't rely on ornamentation to carry the message.

The message gets there by way of sidelines now, and these can be straight or curvy, notched, scalloped, cut very low, even cut away to make the middle bare.

Teen step is groovy, off-beat

"Go walkin' groovy . . . steppin' softly . . . sportin' lively."

That's the shoe fashion message for girls from fashion authorities, who forecast a big season for three distinct looks — the off-beat the flowery-colored feminine and the sporty red, white and blue.

A shoe wardrobe for the girl who knows where the action is might start with a trend-setting open-toe, closed-heel sandal — and step up a 40s platform that's authentically open at toe and heel.

THE WEDGED slip-on, sling-back spectator and instep-strapped dancing shoe also take strong stands.

Ready to go back to nature? Take the country route in a rugged ankle boot — just like a man's.

Flowery colors skip to a feminine beat — a pumpkin leather crepe-soled sandal, for example, or a pink kid flat petaled at the sides.

Spectators are in step with separates look

Stepping up the spring scene, the new spectator shoe has as many different looks as there are places to wear it.

A throwback to th 30s, it's sometimes two-toned, sometimes monotoned, sling-backed, closed-backed, higher or lower heel and even all laced up.

Color is at its best when done in combinations of neutrals, brown and red, red and white, beige and blue, blue and white. The perforations are exaggerated, the heels are either stacked leather or leather-covered.

A great look is the camel and white spectator that laces up the front, has a low heel and slightly extended sole. Sporty versions like this look nifty for day with pants, skirts and shirts and dresses. Try the spectator with a marvelous classic feeling — navy blue and white with a fringed tongue and white perforations. The ones with the new, slightly higher heel could snap together a terrific late-day look.

SANDAL WITH CARE

Strappy days are here again

Wear them strapped or wear them buckled

The look of today requires kicky shoes with snap and dash . . . such as this smart T-strap (below) which clings at sides, hugs heel . . . and the boldly buckled pump, a perfect go-with for spring's belted dresses. Extra cushioning gives extra comfort; at Naturalizer Shoes, 434 Pine Ave.

It's downright 'sandal-outs'

Straps. Wide straps. That's what smart girls will be wearing this summer. The look of a wider strap (above) sets off opened-up back of this Miss America shoe. In bone or white; at Sammy's Bootery, 2051 Santa Fe Ave.

The look that's up-front

City sandals are on the rise, here with modified broad toe, low flared heel, wide open sides and back, plus the combination of smooth with matching reptile grain time leather-look vinyl.

At Burts, 335 Pine Ave.

An open-shoe policy

The opened shoe is the shoe to have, starting right now, getting the jump on summer and becoming the single most important look on the landscape. These are the shoes to wear with joy, the kicky shoes that match the footloose individuality of today's fashions.

The new sandals can be uncovered everywhere, fore, middle or aft—they can even be a thong as long as the sole is sturdy, the heel is broad.

Spring's open-shoe policy can be a criss-cross of straps or a shelter-toed footnote in a shout of color, buckled off-sides and opened at the back. Or it might be a classic silhouette—an oxford, say; or a spectator, with everything possible pared away until what remains is a sandal.

Straps. Wide straps. That's what smart girls will be wearing this summer. The look of a wider strap (above) sets off opened-up back of this Miss America shoe. In bone or white; at Sammy's Bootery, 2051 Santa Fe Ave.

The look that's up-front

City sandals are on the rise, here with modified broad toe, low flared heel, wide open sides and back, plus the combination of smooth with matching reptile grain time leather-look vinyl. At Burts, 335 Pine Ave.

An open-shoe policy

The opened shoe is the shoe to have, starting right now, getting the jump on summer and becoming the single most important look on the landscape. These are the shoes to wear with joy, the kicky shoes that match the footloose individuality of today's fashions.

The new sandals can be uncovered everywhere, fore, middle or aft—they can even be a thong as long as the sole is sturdy, the heel is broad.

Spring's open-shoe policy can be a criss-cross of straps or a shelter-toed footnote in a shout of color, buckled off-sides and opened at the back. Or it might be a classic silhouette—an oxford, say; or a spectator, with everything possible pared away until what remains is a sandal.

GLAMOUR GIRLS ARE BACK

The look that's hair today

Think Garbo, think Grable. There's a swing back to glamour with a capital "G," say the nation's leading hairstylists.

After a decade given over to hard chic and costume-y whimseys, we can look forward to the day (it may happen tomorrow or next June) when a woman won't be afraid to wear a gardenia in her hair.

Frankly flattering and feminine coiffures are due for a renaissance, they say. Spring fashions are stressing the wide pants, the bare midriffs, the crepe-y looks of the 30s and 40s, and hair styles are destined to follow suit.

MANY JET-SETTERS and with-it fashion individualists like the new-again look of medium-length hair unabashedly curled. Stylists predict curls will be widened at the sides, a little like Irene Castle's first "bob."

The look calls for a smooth crown broken by a wave at one side, another late-movie strategem ignored in recent years. And many feminist advocates are not above adding some "kiss curls" around the hairline to stress the soft, pretty look of the '69 "Glamour Girl."

Curls unfurl again

Shades of yesteryear (above), hair is drawn into a deep side bang, looped back and caught with ribbon just above springy curls. Perky, new, romantic; from Magic Mirror Beauty Salons, 124 Pacific Ave., 4492 Atlantic Ave. and other Southland locations.

Curvy 'n curly

Arrangements for evening, designed by Winnie Fuller (right), allows curls to wind freely upward, forward and down. New curvy, curly style is full in front, buoyantly fluffed in the crown. At Fuller's World of Hair Fashion, 532 E. Willow St.

The all-girl swirl

It's only natural—to go with spring's all-girl fashions—that softly feminine hairstyles of the 30s and 40s should stage a comeback. One of the prettiest: coif (above) emphasizing deeply formed waves flowing from a high part. At Staber's for Beauty, Eighth Street and Locust Avenue.

Braid hairpiece new headband

A braid, banded to bring a fresh new coiffure look to a simple hairdo, is a new accessory that fits on like a headband. The prestyled hairpieces are available in 24 popular shades, just the answer for knacky fashionables looking for an "in" hairstyle.

A prettier you for 1969

Now's the time to turn over a new beauty leaf and the most "instant" way is with a new hairdo! You'll be amazed at the difference a new style can make!

Chiffon makes comeback as beautiful pretender

She may be a business executive; she could be cum laude; she may have a mind like a steel trap. But after five, no man in the room would know it . . .

If she's wearing chiffon, that is.

Today, chiffon is not only pretty, it is THE fashion for after five.

Everybody is talking about girls wanting to look pretty again. This season, pretty is a chiffon dress . . . or a swirl of party pants, often ruffled or pressed into a flurry of accordian pleats.

The all-time classics

The fitting gift for men to give women—and vica versa—always has been jewelry . . . and, today, the ultimate is Linde Stars in rings, pins, cuff links, tie-tacs, bracelets or pendants . . . in cornflower blue, claret red, shell white and honey black. At Star Jewelers, 440 Pine Ave.

Let fashion ring—wear one on every finger!

For the with-it gals, spring is finger-fun time—a dazzle of rings, fingernail decals, kicky nail polish.

Today's rings are smaller—twisted bands of gold or silver, snake rings—rather than the bulkier costume stones. Biggest fashion news of all . . . they pop up on any finger . . . the long middle finger, the index, even the thumb.

Mix the rings, match them, wear them everywhere with minis or culottees or pantsuits.

Pearly or silvery nails are just right for today's glitter fashions. And when you have a date to hear the newest rock group, Finger Things are great fun. They're decorative decals for the nails, sized beautifully for the different fingers, and they come in a variety of designs.

Women are in chains

After years of fighting for equal rights, the modern woman is back in chains. But this time, she doesn't mind a bit.

From the top of her head to the tip of her toes, the fashionable female of 1969 is swathed in chains.

Gold or silver, thick or thin — it doesn't matter, so long as there are lots of them.

The chain belt, which started the whole craze, has branched out from simple little links to elaborately twined strips of metal, often interspersed with discs. Among the most popular are those with antique-style coins or signs of the zodiac.

CHAINS — around the neck — also a fashion standard — have multiplied.

The medallion, worn by both sexes, is still a favorite. Some of the chain necklaces support watches, some are worn intermingled with signature scarves and others are designed to be worn alone.

Chain-handled bags continue to gain in popularity. A clear favorite is the chain-strapped shoulder bag worn with pants suits.

Among the newest chains, shown in spring fashion collections in the U.S. and Europe, are:

—The chain suspender. Princess Irene Galitzine of Rome showed white enamel and gold metal suspenders atop a white silk miniskirt and full-sleeved black chiffon blouse. Bill Blass, in New York, showed chains atop a simple high-waister skirt.

—The half-chain. Several designers featured half-belts of chains, either in back or front. Originala presented a red jumpsuit, with loose chain in front.

—Chains for pants. Tunic-tops of pants suits were belted, low on the hip or high under the bosom, with single or double chains.

—Chains on shoes. Sparked by the newest Gucci moccasin, designers like David Evins draped chains around the vamp of shoes or used them instead of straps on sling pumps.

—Chains as halters. For the really daring, the Rome fashion house of Titti Brugnoli showed halters of strategically placed rhinestones and chains, worn with scanty white miniskirts.

In 1762, opening his "Social Contract," Jean Jacques Rouseau wrote, "Man is born free and everywhere is in chains."

In 1969, it's woman who is born free and everywhere is in chains.

Los Altos concentrates on fashion

Since opening in the early 50s, most of Los Altos Center's stores have remodeled inside and out. Currently celebrating its anniversary, it's the only regional shopping center in the City of Long Beach and boasts dozens of fashion stores, catering to every type from the at-home seamstress to the high fashion individualist. Retail space covers 500,000 square feet and there is parking for 1,900 autos.

Hand care tips

With fashion emphasis on rings this year, hand care is essential. A good once-a-week lightening and softening treatment is a 10-minute soaking in a mixture of lemon juice and baby oil.

—Chains as halters. For the really daring, the Rome fashion house of Titti Brugnoli showed halters of strategically placed rhinestones and chains, worn with scanty white miniskirts.

In 1762, opening his "Social Contract," Jean Jacques Rouseau wrote, "Man is born free and everywhere is in chains."

In 1969, it's woman who is born free and everywhere is in chains.

Los Altos concentrates on fashion

Since opening in the early 50s, most of Los Altos Center's stores have remodeled inside and out. Currently celebrating its anniversary, it's the only regional shopping center in the City of Long Beach and boasts dozens of fashion stores, catering to every type from the at-home seamstress to the high fashion individualist. Retail space covers 500,000 square feet and there is parking for 1,900 autos.

Hand care tips

With fashion emphasis on rings this year, hand care is essential. A good once-a-week lightening and softening treatment is a 10-minute soaking in a mixture of lemon juice and baby oil.

Compromise results in frilly-manly styles

Emancipated women are undecided about their identity and so is fashion.

Some think achieving equal rights arbitrarily entitles them to the ties, jackets, caps and trousers, as well as the shirts off mens' backs. You'd think the right to a man's wardrobe was what suffrage was all about.

Other women are smarter than that. They know they can go places faster and more comfortably by simulating the kind of femininity that many men equate with helplessmess.

Who are they to give up ruffles and frills for the mere sake of equality when they can enslave men by their deceptive fragility?

Is it any wonder fashion designers have not known which road to take? As a consequence, the style pendulum is swinging back and forth from man-tailored to women fashioned in the extreme.

What women really want is equal economic rights and lopsided-in-their-favor social rights, so some critics say. They want men to give them the right to compete for their jobs as well as their seat on the bus.

RECENTLY fashion also has arrived at this interesting compromise: Designers have chosen the best of both situations and combined them into styles, thus having twice as many things going for them.

Take a man's nightshirt for instance. Women had been appropriating them whenever they could get their hands on the garments. Though generously cut, comfortable and practical, they were hardly the most feminine attire a woman could wear in retirement.

So what did an enterprising designer do? He added ruffles, yards and yards of them at cuffs, at the neckline and down the middle until these nightshirts were decidedly ladylike.

More proof is the man's bathrobe. Women have asked for equal wearing privileges here, too, and the answer has been a feminization of the garment.

More than three years ago the furriers wrapped it up in sable skins and made it a status symbol by putting it on the backs of socialites.

Today the man's bathrobe is democratically available to all women. Ruffled or unruffled, in silks, voiles and sheer woolens, the man's bathrobe is now a popular dress style.

Spring fabrics are sew-pretty

MEN, HOW DO YOU RATE?

What's your fashion IQ?

Fittingly tailored

More shaping, gentle waist suppression, the longer jacket, squared-but-narrow shoulders . . . that's how men's suits are shaping up for spring. Example: this semi-Edwardian herringbone jacket paired with all-wool worsted windowpane slacks. Exclusively tailored at John's Men's Shop, Los Altos Center.

There was a time when menswear provided a safe haven from the world of fast-moving changes. Revolutions were left to women and South American dictators.

But times change. And so has menswear. New vitality has been pulsing through the industry in the past year, and the man who wants to keep abreast has to be mindful of trends and fashion directions.

To find out how hep you are, try the following quiz:

1. Spring's new shoes will feature squared toes and lots of "hardware" such as buckles, chains, etc. True or false?

2. Shaped clothing permits you to make a choice of ties, the new wider ones or the narrower width worn previously. True or false?

3. The Edwardian look has been adapted to both single and double-breasted styles. True or false?

4. The military look of the trench raincoat is especially popular today. True or false?

5. Vents in suits and jackets are getting smaller. True or false?

6. The inverted box pleat is replacing the regular vent in many coats. True or false?

7. Deep dark tones in shirts are now accepted in the business world. True or false?

8. There's a new kick in turtlenecks, those with attached ascots which — unlike regular ascots — are worn outside the shirt. True or false?

9. Boots for men are suggested only for casual wear. True or false?

10. Men's hats this summer will complement the new lighter tones in suits with neutral go-with-everything tones. True or false?

See answers, page F-21.

RATINGS: Three or fewer wrong means you're in no danger of being out in the what's-new department. Half right means you'd better do some research in the form of reading and checking at your favorite men's store. Anything below that indicates a crash course in men's fashions.

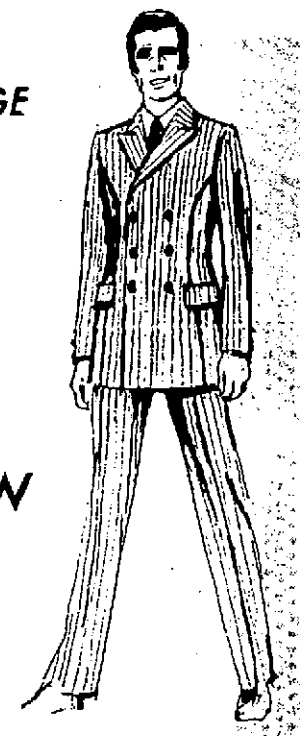

The going looks

Pinstripes and bold plaids recall the flashy fashions of an earlier era, for both guys and gals. The gal — in zippy, zooty 30s stripes. Her guy — in plaid, muted and tone-on-tone, from Louis Roth, exclusively at Howard Amos, 120 E. Broadway.

MALE IMAGE SHAPES UP

New shirts follow suit

Since there's been such a revolution in men's suits, can shirts be far behind? Absolutely not!

A new suit of clothes doesn't end with a jacket and trousers. It also includes the appropriate shirt — that vital fashion accessory integral to a total, coordinated and "with-it" look.

Many of the new styles have been specifically designed to enhance shaped, draped, wider lapeled, two-to-even 10-buttoned suits.

ONE OF the crucial couture changes is that shirt collars are bigger than ever.

They've angled out to conform to more prominent, wider suit lapels. Incidentally, the collar must fit under the jacket lapel — never look stand-offish.

These wider spread collar models also allow for larger neckwear — another de rigeur requisite.

Shirt collars sit higher on the back of the neck, showing slightly between suit and hairline (provided he's not wearing his hair shoulder length). Some collars are stitched, others not — but all make similar spread points.

AND SINCE plumage — not the bloomage of blue serge or grey flannel — is "in," the same holds true of shirts.

Such "spring shades" as black, navy, plum and red, striped slim or wide in white or contrasting color, are primary and proper for even the most formal occasions.

The timid tattersall check of yester-season is now overlayed with a bolder stripe that's perfect with lustrous multi-dimensional suit fabrics.

KNOTTY BUT NICE

Neckwear ties on new look for '69

Back in the days when women preened and men merely paid, ties were something a man got for Christmas, hung in the closet and routinely rotated — brown tie with brown suit, blue tie with blue suit, gray tie with gray suit.

Today, when men's fashions are often more amusing and more newsworthy than women's, ties are carefully selected and even more carefully coordinated to new, brighter wardrobes.

In contrast, bright ties took up 17½ per cent of the sales last year, contrasting with only 10 per cent in 1966.

Not only color, but pattern has changed drastically from the day when you could automatically tell what school a man attended by the tie he wore.

Stripes are still popular — they accounted for 70 per cent of sales in 1968 — but only when they zip across 3½-inch ties in light, bright shades of blue, green, brown and maroon.

ALL-OVER patterns, particularly geometric designs, have jumped in popularity.

Circles, squares, triangles and diamonds in black and white, purple and green, orange and gray are available from designer tie manufacturers like John Weitz, Lanvin and Christian Dior.

Weitz has some of the wildest ties of all — including a new collection that features neckwear with an all-over pattern of dollar signs, percentage signs or cent signs. These are combinations like orange and green or maroon and yellow.

WHEN IT comes to width, the fashion is the wider the better.

In 1966, ties of 2½ inches and less accounted for 81 per cent of sales. The same size ties took only 20 per cent of the business in 1968.

The three-inch tie increased from 7 per cent of sales in 1966 to 28 per cent in 1968 and the five-inch tie, virtually non-existent in 1966, took 5 per cent of the business last year.

Silk and polyester remained the two most popular tie fabrics, while acetate and rayon declined sharply.

WHO'S BUYING all these ties?

Both men and women.

In fact, the women are buying more and more.

In 1968 they bought 48 per cent of all ties sold — and those ties aren't just hanging in the closet today.

Now, footwear joins unisex fashion parade

Footwear manufacturers have finally gotten around to joining the unisex fashion parade with an array of matched, "he or she" shoes.

The shoes are not identical, of course — not yet at least — but they are cut in similar styles with look-a-like trims.

Leather Industries of America reports several clear trends, including the demand for metal buckles, chains, studs and bands on shoes of all kinds.

MATERIALS include polished smooth and glazed leathers, suede, grained leathers and embossed or antiqued hides. They're available in a wide range of colors.

Sandals are popular with both sexes. Most of them feature small cutouts near the back of the foot, seldom in front or at the toe.

Another favorite is the high-tongued slip-on, often decorated with brass or silver hardware, monk straps, spectator-style trim or leather fringe.

Fit and comfort as only Hand-Shaped® tailoring can make them. Trimly suppressed at the waist, fully masculine across the chest. With the added dash of deep side vents. Discover this fashion gem in gold, copper and bronze earthtones of rich iridescence. From $125.

Some how-to-dress strategy

What makes the difference between a man who looks like he's with-it and the out-of-it dresser who comes off like something left over from last season?

The well-put-together fashion man takes time to analyze what's new but, more importantly, to decide what's right for him. No slave of fashion, he. But neither does he reject just because it's new.

It boils down to a matter of line, of color and — the No. 1 ingredient — taste. He assembles components with a view to the total look, and he buys clothing the same way — not piecemeal. He picks the right clothing for the right occasion and knows the fine points in between. If he travels, he considers the climate and the regional differences in what is considered proper attire.

THE WITH-IT man will like many of the following:

*Shaped clothing expressed with moderation.

*Wider ties (in the neighborhood of four inches) with the right clothing.

*Lots of color — in suits, shirts, ties . . . the whole bit.

*Bold patterns that make the most of color.

*Mixed patterns . . . polka dots and stripes, stripes with stripes . . . etc., always being careful to match them with an aesthetic eye, however.

*Trousers without cuffs.

*Slip-on shoes, square-toed and often decorated with an assortment of "hardware."

*Over-the-calf hose with suits.

*Casual slacks that abound both in pattern and color.

The with-it man wears the above with a casual nonchalance that has its own quiet sophisticated bearing. He avoids the conscious air of fashion that makes him more store mannequin than man.

Important look of today: the four-button jacket (right), single-breasted, shaped at the waist . . . three patch pockets give casual look. Shaped trousers are longer—resting on top of shoe.

Style plus comfort are two prime requirements for men's clothes. Answering both is this fisherman's tunic (left) with striped trousers. Everything wrinkle free.

Romance revived

Romantic — but definitely masculine. That's the look achieved above. The flowered pants — all linen in yellow and natural — remind of a time when the more masculine a man — the more he dared wear frills. A swirl of boldly colored scarf romanticizes the pinstriped coat by Palm Beach. At Phil Hahn, 5211 Second St., Belmont Shore.

When men were men

Super-masculine combination recalls era when men were tough and rough-hewn—and proves that fashions can remain manly even while sporting splashy colors, form-fitting lines, vervy fabrics. The sweater: fully-fashioned lambs wool available in 15 colors. The slacks: tattersall checks on Perma Press cotton. Both at Dunn's Men's Shops, Los Altos Shopping Center.

The Articulate Plaid Suit Very Proper . . . Very Cool

Partial to plaids — interesting plaids? Come in and see our Deansgate warm weather collection. The fabric: a crisp 55% Dacron polyester/45% wool blend that keeps its good manners on the warmest days. Important: these suits are tailored in Deansgate's own understated natural shoulder construction, and there are many colors to choose from. $90.00

MEN, HOW DO YOU RATE?

What's your fashion IQ?

There was a time when menswear provided a safe haven from the world of fast-moving changes. Revolutions were left to women and South American dictators.

But times change. And so has menswear. New vitality has been pulsing through the industry in the past year, and the man who wants to keep abreast has to be mindful of trends and fashion directions.

To find out how hep you are, try the following quiz:

1. Spring's new shoes will feature squared toes and lots of "hardware" such as buckles, chains, etc. True or false?

2. Shaped clothing permits you to make a choice of ties, the new wider ones or the narrower width worn previously. True or false?

3. The Edwardian look has been adapted to both single and double-breasted styles. True or false?

4. The military look of the trench raincoat is especially popular today. True or false?

5. Vents in suits and jackets are getting smaller. True or false?

6. The inverted box pleat is replacing the regular vent in many coats. True or false?

7. Deep dark tones in shirts are now accepted in the business world. True or false?

8. There's a new kick in turtlenecks, those with attached ascots which — unlike regular ascots — are worn outside the shirt. True or false?

9. Boots for men are suggested only for casual wear. True or false?

10. Men's hats this summer will complement the new lighter tones in suits with neutral go-with-everything tones. True or false?

See answers, page F-21.

RATINGS: Three or fewer wrong means you're in no danger of being out in the what's-new department. Half right means you'd better do some research in the form of reading and checking at your favorite men's store. Anything below that indicates a crash course in men's fashions.

Fittingly tailored

More shaping, gentle waist suppression, the longer jacket, squared-but-narrow shoulders . . . that's how men's suits are shaping up for spring. Example: this semi-Edwardian herringbone jacket paired with all-wool worsted windowpane slacks. Exclusively tailored at John's Men's Shop, Los Altos Center.

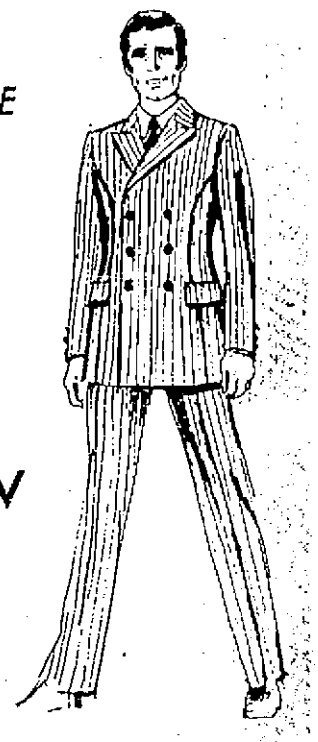

The going looks

Pinstripes and bold plaids recall the flashy fashions of an earlier era, for both guys and gals. The gal — in zippy, zooty 30s stripes. Her guy — in plaid, muted and tone-on-tone, from Louis Roth, exclusively at Howard Amos, 120 E. Broadway.

MALE IMAGE SHAPES UP

New shirts follow suit

Since there's been such a revolution in men's suits, can shirts be far behind? Absolutely not!

A new suit of clothes doesn't end with a jacket and trousers. It also includes the appropriate shirt — that vital fashion accessory integral to a total, coordinated and "with-it" look.

Many of the new styles have been specifically designed to enhance shaped, draped, wider lapeled, two-to-even 10-buttoned suits.

ONE OF the crucial couture changes is that shirt collars are bigger than ever.

They've angled out to conform to more prominent, wider suit lapels. Incidentally, the collar must fit under the jacket lapel — never look stand-offish.

These wider spread collar models also allow for larger neckwear — another de rigeur requisite.

Shirt collars sit higher on the back of the neck, showing slightly between suit and hairline (provided he's not wearing his hair shoulder length). Some collars are stitched, others not — but all make similar spread points.

AND SINCE plumage — not the bloomage of blue serge or grey flannel — is "in," the same holds true of shirts.

Such "spring shades" as black, navy, plum and red, striped slim or wide in white or contrasting color, are primary and proper for even the most formal occasions.

The timid tattersall check of yester-season is now overlayed with a bolder stripe that's perfect with lustrous multi-dimensional suit fabrics.

KNOTTY BUT NICE

Neckwear ties on new look for '69

Back in the days when women preened and men merely paid, ties were something a man got for Christmas, hung in the closet and routinely rotated — brown tie with brown suit, blue tie with blue suit, gray tie with gray suit.

Today, when men's fashions are often more amusing and more newsworthy than women's, ties are carefully selected and even more carefully coordinated to new, brighter wardrobes.

In contrast, bright ties took up 17½ per cent of the sales last year, contrasting with only 10 per cent in 1966.

Not only color, but pattern has changed drastically from the day when you could automatically tell what school a man attended by the tie he wore.

Stripes are still popular — they accounted for 70 per cent of sales in 1968 — but only when they zip across. 3½-inch ties in light, bright shades of blue, green, brown and maroon.

ALL-OVER patterns, particularly geometric designs, have jumped in popularity.

Circles, squares, triangles and diamonds in black and white, purple and green, orange and gray are available from designer tie manufacturers like John Weitz, Lanvin and Christian Dior.

Weitz has some of the wildest ties of all — including a new collection that features neckwear with an all-over pattern of dollar signs, percentage signs or cent signs. These are combinations like orange and green or maroon and yellow.

WHEN IT comes to width, the fashion is the wider the better.

In 1966, ties of 2½ inches and less accounted for 81 per cent of sales. The same size ties took only 20 per cent of the business in 1968.

The three-inch tie increased from 7 per cent of sales in 1966 to 28 per cent in 1968 and the five-inch tie, virtually non-existent in 1966, took 5 per cent of the business last year.

Silk and polyester remained the two most popular tie fabrics, while acetate and rayon declined sharply.

WHO'S BUYING all these ties?

Both men and women.

In fact, the women are buying more and more.

In 1968 they bought 48 per cent of all ties sold — and those ties aren't just hanging in the closet today.

Now, footwear joins unisex fashion parade

Footwear manufacturers have finally gotten around to joining the unisex fashion parade with an array of matched, "he or she" shoes.

The shoes are not identical, of course — not yet at least — but they are cut in similar styles with look-a-like trims.

Leather Industries of America reports several clear trends, including the demand for metal buckles, chains, studs and bands on shoes of all kinds.

MATERIALS include polished smooth and glazed leathers, suede, grained leathers and embossed or antiqued hides. They're available in a wide range of colors.

Sandals are popular with both sexes. Most of them feature small cutouts near the back of the foot, seldom in front or at the toe.

Another favorite is the high-tongued slip-on, often decorated with brass or silver hardware, monk straps, spectator-style trim or leather fringe.

Fit and comfort as only Hand-Shaped® tailoring can make them. Trimly suppressed at the waist, fully masculine across the chest. With the added dash of deep side vents. Discover this fashion gem in gold, copper and bronze earthtones of rich iridescence. From $125.

Ticker rules hems

Wall Street denizens who made headlines last fall by casting their eyes at abundant bosoms might fare better in the market by lowering their sights to the hemline.

There are no figures — not even the 43-25-37 measurements of Francine Gottfried — that correlate the ups and downs of the stock market with the bouncy 21-year-old brunette who caused crowds to swell to unwieldy proportions.

There are, however, indicators that as the hemline fluctuates between ankle and thigh, so goes the stock market from low to high.

THIS STRANGE phenomenon is nothing new.

But Ann Galvin, an executive at Anchor Corp., has documented what people have speculated on for two decades — a cause and effect relationship between fashion and finance.

Miss Galvin, a vice president in the underwriting division of the financial holding company, said that since the turn of the century, dress has reflected the dollar — or vice versa.

When the economy was tight, women tended to "crawl into a shell," hide their limbs.

Prosperity, on the other hand, paralleled ease and abandon, with women kicking up their heels and their hemlines.

IN 1900 hems hugged the floor while people hovered near poverty as a result of a major stock market recession in the late 1890s.

But by 1913, pre-war prosperity put the market on the rise and women revealed their ankles. Six years later hems dropped to their previous low and the position recession set in.

The Roaring Twenties brought inflation, high living and a lot of leg. Specualtive fortunes were being made in the market on paper margin. Women were enjoying new-found economic, political and sexual freedom. Their skirts hit a new high — mid-knee and higher.

The "handkerchief" hemline, high in front and low in back, forecast financial doom early in 1929, and by October of that year the Big Crash was heralded by the plummeting hemline.

Ten years passed. Then a gradual hem hike reflected hope for a return to prosperity. By 1945 war and inflation drove skirts to 17 inches from the floor.

CHRISTIAN DIOR'S "New Look" of 1947 dropped the hemline to 12 inches in preparation for a peacetime recession. The market and dropping hemlines recovered with the beginning of a new decade and American involvement in Korea.

By 1958 hemlines were back up to mid-knee and at the start of the '60s skirts soared to new heights. Hemlines rose to 19 inches, heading for 30 inches by 1967.

Both hemlines and the markets were up in the air in 1968.

Optimism and caution over a new administration and possible peace in Vietnam made for confusion in fashion and finance.

As the stock market fluctuated so did the hemline — mini, midi and maxi.

What 1969 will bring remains to be seen. But if Courreges is any indication, skirts will be longer only at night — long after the markets are closed.

Suffragettes got the vote

--League of Women Voters guards it with information

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

Ever since the Bull Moose party was formed in 1980, it's been out to repeal the 19th Amendment which gave women the right to vote.

Bull Moosers cite statistics that in 1910 there were 9 women to every 10 men in the United States — then came women's suffrage in 1920 and today women outnumber men 11 to 10.

Platform of the all-male party is based on premises that women can't cook (96.4 percent of professional chefs are men) that women can't sew (92.7 percent of couturiers are men) that women can't have babies without assistance of men (92.7 percent of all babies are delivered by men). If they can't do the things they were intended, why should they have the vote?

Now Bull Moosers may lobby and campaign to have women thrown out of the polling booths of America, but we know who's going to keep the vote.

MINDFUL OF the masculine effort to overthrow woman power, League of Women Voters is chalking up its score of accomplishments over the past five decades as 50th anniversary of the women's right to vote approaches.

Sorry, Bull Moosers, but the League has an airtight case proving the strides in social legislation made by women since they got the vote Aug. 26, 1920.

With passage of the 19th Amendment almost at hand in March 1919, the National American Woman Suffrage Association voted to form a national League of Women Voters "to increase effectiveness of women's votes in furthering better government."

Suffragettes had battled to get the vote so as to achieve goals beyond their reach without it.

By the end of 1922, 60 measures in 28 states had been enacted in relation to legal status of women and child labor laws.

TODAY, THE League has 150,000 members from 1,249 chapters in 50 states. It is dedicated to educating the public on voter issues and concerned with the conduct of government.

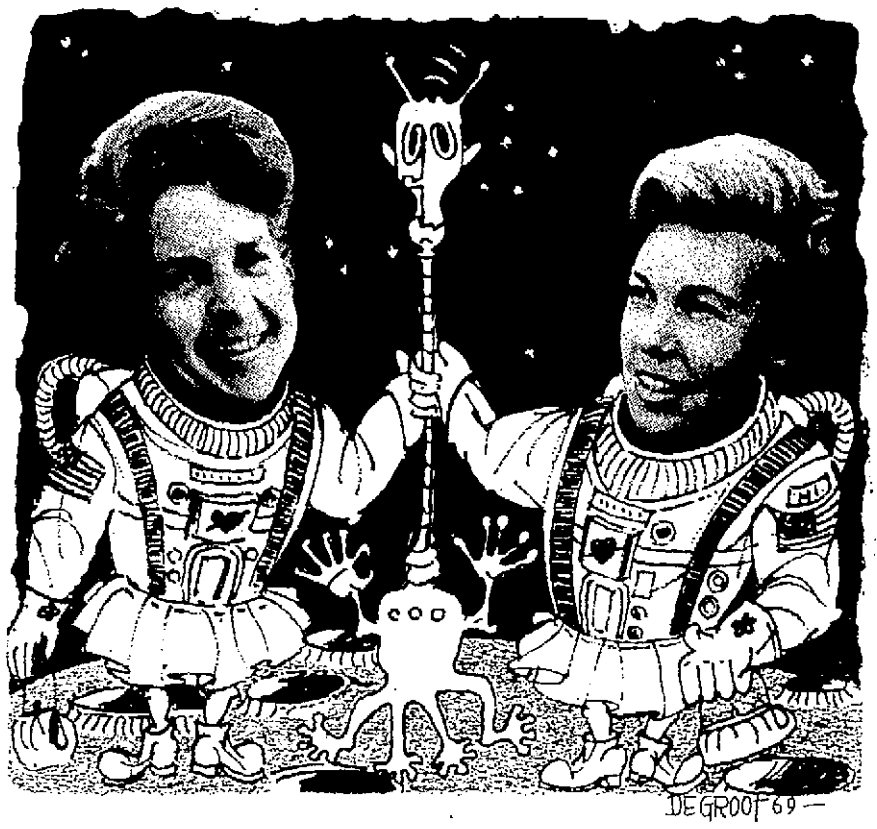

Strictly non-partisan, the League may take a stand on issues but never

Students at California State College, Long Beach, captured all three prizes in the Music Center—San Francisco Opera Associations' contest for scene designs.

Tom Moffett won first place and Maria F. Tisei second place. Each designed two scenes for Act II of Puccini's "Turandot." Richard Bunn took third for his setting of Act III for Wagner's "Die Walkure."

All three students are pupils of Dr. Maxine Merlino at CSLB. Moffett and Bunn are seniors, majoring in theater design; Miss Tisei is a graduate student.

Judging the total of 52 entries from throughout the Southland were John A. McCone, president of the Music Center Opera Association; Kurt Herbert Adler, the association's general director; John Priest, opera designer; and Mary B. Sheridan, professor at Art Center College of Design, Los Angeles.

Each of the winners has a choice of tickets to all remaining productions of the opera season now midway at Shrine Auditorium.

The three students were special guests at a reception in The Music Center to honor artists who will sing at a benefit Opera Gala Concert Monday at 8 p.m. in The Music Center Pavilion.

Ticker rules hems

Wall Street denizens who made headlines last fall by casting their eyes at abundant bosoms might fare better in the market by lowering their sights to the hemline.

There are no figures — not even the 43-25-37 measurements of Francine Gottfried — that correlate the ups and downs of the stock market with the bouncy 21-year-old brunette who caused crowds to swell to unwieldy proportions.

There are, however, indicators that as the hemline fluctuates between ankle and thigh, so goes the stock market from low to high.

THIS STRANGE phenomenon is nothing new.

But Ann Galvin, an executive at Anchor Corp., has documented what people have speculated on for two decades — a cause and effect relationship between fashion and finance.

Miss Galvin, a vice president in the underwriting division of the financial holding company, said that since the turn of the century, dress has reflected the dollar — or vice versa.

When the economy was tight, women tended to "crawl into a shell," hide their limbs.

Prosperity, on the other hand, paralleled ease and abandon, with women kicking up their heels and their hemlines.

IN 1900 hems hugged the floor while people hovered near poverty as a result of a major stock market recession in the late 1890s.

But by 1913, pre-war prosperity put the market on the rise and women revealed their ankles. Six years later hems dropped to their previous low and the position recession set in.

The Roaring Twenties brought inflation, high living and a lot of leg. Speculative fortunes were being made in the market on paper margin. Women were enjoying new-found economic, political and sexual freedom. Their skirts hit a new high — mid-knee and higher.

The "handkerchief" hemline, high in front and low in back, forecast financial doom early in 1929, and by October of that year the Big Crash was heralded by the plummeting hemline.

Ten years passed. Then a gradual hem hike reflected hope for a return to prosperity. By 1945 war and inflation drove skirts to 17 inches from the floor.

CHRISTIAN DIOR'S "New Look" of 1947 dropped the hemline to 12 inches in preparation for a peacetime recession. The market and dropping hemlines recovered with the beginning of a new decade and American involvement in Korea.

By 1958 hemlines were back up to mid-knee and at the start of the '60s skirts soared to new heights. Hemlines rose to 19 inches, heading for 30 inches by 1967.

Both hemlines and the markets were up in the air in 1968.

Optimism and caution over a new administration and possible peace in Vietnam made for confusion in fashion and finance.

As the stock market fluctuated so did the hemline — mini, midi and maxi.

What 1969 will bring remains to be seen. But if Courreges is any indication, skirts will be longer only at night — long after the markets are closed.

Storms don't dampen party moods in beautiful downtown Long Beach

By PAT McDONNELL and MARGARET TUTHILL

IT WAS A fun-for-all take-off of "Laugh-In" when Millikan High School juniors, Cris Zacher, Becky Rule and Sandy Noon, presented their original rendition of the TV show Saturday in Wardlow Park Clubhouse.

More than 200 friends and members of Beachwood Camp 917, Woodmen of the World, were entertained by the teen trio who wrote the script, designed and made stage props and garnered belly-laughs throughout performance.

Occasion was fifth annual fund-raising event of the fraternal group which enlisted talents of neighborhood teens for entertainment portion of the spaghetti feed prepared by Chef Lee Barnes.

Proceeds go to a $200 scholarship annually presented to a deserving high school senior. This year's recipient is Long Beach City College coed Sharon Zimmerman.

The inventive trio made a joke wall out of a refrigerator packing case, covered it with butcher paper and painted on sayings of the mod, mod world. The audience was drawn into the act when the girls called spectators on stage to play impromptu roles in a skit titled "Red the Hood." Furthering the youth theme were Howard Stern and Scott Brodeen, members of Junior Long Beach Mystics, who performed feats of magic.

GLITTER OF ALL the brass was blinding in Contessa Room of Hollywood's Marquis Restaurant when the Fred Rosenbergs gave a surprise dinner party Friday in honor of newly selected Lt. Cmdr. Jerome Fee and his wife, Nancy.

Driving from Long Beach for festive celebration were honored guest's parents, Rear Adm. and Mrs. Jack Fee (Ret.), Capt. and Mrs. Caberon Nixon and Cmdr. and Mrs. David Boslough. Also on hand were Lt. Cmdrs. and Mmes. Douglas Gibson, Paul Carpenter, David Smith, John Miller and Martin Kiefer and Lt. and Mrs. Charles Bartholomew.

FRIENDS OF Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mann had no choice but to break with the tradition of surprise when they honored the Manns Saturday on their 25th wedding anniversary.

More than 40 friends gathered for the silver-themed celebration in Los Alamitos home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles R. Brantingham. Cohosts, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burt, agreed Mrs. Mann has become too knowledgeable in the ways of throwing a surprise party to keep her in the dark.

Two years ago, Mrs. Mann caught the Bratinghams off guard when she honored them on their 25th and, again, a few months ago, she surprised the James Deckers with a party on their silver anniversary.

The Manns may have been alerted as to purpose of party, but the silver hors d'oeuvres dish, compote and pie server they were presented did come as a surprise. Joining in on the fun were the Mann's daughter, Sherry, and son, Steve.

STORM WARNINGS didn't dampen spirits of girl-sailors-every-Friday at Leeway Sailing Club, Alamitos Bay when they met to stow away luncheon at program launching their spring season.

Solo male present was Skipper Jerry Miller (reason being he's one of the few men brave enough to teach sailing to women) who presented trophies to winners of the February series. Fleet-A sailors taking bows were Barbara Katz, Lori Dukes and Adrea Stoker. Phyllis Kronenberg led B-Fleet.

BY THE TIME a fellow hits the ripe old age of 29, he's usually accumulated a great many friends. In Marshall McComb's case, the list is staggering — considering school chums, fraternity brothers and wife's friends from Poly and UC Berkeley.

In fact, it had started to become a state of confusion whenever Marshall and charming wife described high school and college friends to one another. Happy solution was to get everyone together before all reached their 30s — and that's what they did on Marshall's 29th birthday.

Among those finally matching faces with long-heard-of-names at a lively dinner party in the McCombs' 3103 Roxanne Ave. home were Messrs. and Mmes. John Richert, Hal Steuber, John (Steve) Maynard, Fred Nielsen, Barney Calame, Dick Chaffee and William English. Unable to attend because of the early arrival of their third baby girl were the Ken (Barbara Burnett) Bordners.

NAUTICALLY SPEAKING it was a smashing christening party Friday when Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Sharpe had friends aboard their brand new nameless Chris Craft at Bahia Yacht Landing. Center of attention — once guests had toured the 32-foot boat — was a box in which all present placed their suggestions for naming the boat.

Old salts then cruised to the Sharpes' College Park Estates home for dinner and to vote on names proposed by Drs. and Mmes. James Loos, Michael O'Brien, Donald King and the Robert Farleys.

THE CLINTONIAN SOCIETY has a name that rings sonorous and elegant.

Do its members gather to dance Viennese waltzes? Study archaeology? Play cellos?

The answer to these possibilities is no. Identity of the Clintonian Society is almost incredibly straightforward. Its more than 150 members are former residents of Clinton, Iowa, a town on the Mississippi River.

Recently the group met to swap memories at an annual party organized by Howard Dawson, 2178 Tulane Ave. Seven years ago, the transplanted midwesterner was lonesome for home and founded the club singlehandedly.

He took his inspiration from Long Beach's annual Iowa picnic, where grandmothers trade tall stories of how they used to cook for 12 hired men while towhaired youngsters tumbled in the grass.

The Clintonian party was a definitely more swinging affair with buffet supper and dancing until dawn. Among revelers were Messrs. and Mmes. Russell Higgins, Henry Paysens, J. B. Cairns, Robert Haring and Wayne Huebner.

THE SIX PEARSON sisters were together again at the home of Mrs. Dale Bartholomew, 5243 Arbor Road, reliving their British Columbia girlhood. (One can only guess how giddy it must have been then, 40 years ago. Did they fight over the curling iron? Scramble all at once when a Hupmobile honked by the door? Stage boisterous battles with their mama's feather pillows?)

Over finger sandwiches and iced punch the sisters remembered.

Besides the co-hostesses, Mrs. Bartholomew and Mrs. Russell Riley, Newport Beach, they were Mrs. Rae E. Massie, Nakomas, Sask., Mrs. Harold Moriarty, Millbrae, Mrs. Jesse W. Miller, Vallejo, and Mrs. J. T. Thompson, Wyndell, B.C.

There were no pillow fights, no honking Hupmobiles: only the tinkle of coffee spoons.

GLASS STACKER:

Local man pursues art--at 91

HARVEY KUNS, 2552 CEDAR AVE., DEMONSTRATES HIS ARTISTRY IN "GLASS STACKING."

By Margaret Tuthill,
Staff Writer

Harvey A. Kuns is self-made and practical.

Born into a family of midwestern "white shirt" farmers, he grew up following the plow and helping his father judge horse flesh. He came to Long Beach 42 years ago and founded a prosperous business.

He has organized insurance companies, kept a motel, founded a trade association and invested in land. He's been a Scottish Rite Mason for 59 years.

There is, in short, nothing "arty" about Harvey A. Kuns.

But for the last 18 months Kuns has devoted two or three hours a day to making some highly imaginative and creative candelabra from cast-off glassware.

Maybe it's because he's 91 and can do as he pleases.

Kuns celebrated his birthday and his 43rd wedding anniversary Saturday.

HE MAKES THE "glass stacks," as he calls them, from olive jars, cider bottles, dime-store vases and other glass debris.

He starts by gluing the glassware in vertical stacks about five pieces high. After the glue has dried 48 hours, he daubs the creation with crystallizing paint. Kuns' lively wife, Viola, makes candles to put on top.

Lined up on the old gentleman's worktable, the candelabras are shimmering minarets, holding sunlight.

They're lovely, but without frills. They make a simple, straightforward contrast to the enormous, lacey collection of cut glass that Mrs. Kuns keeps in lighted cabinets.

Kuns obtains raw materials from friends and "as is" bins at Goodwill Industries, the Salvation Army and Volunteers of America.

He has given away all 75 of the candleholders he's made.

"It's all just play to keep me busy," he said.

Be that as it may, Kuns goes about his art with businesslike zeal.

IT DOESN'T matter that he may be the world's only practitioner of his art, or that he gives all his candelabras away; the old gentleman is determined to be "the best glass stacker on earth."

He uses a special glue that will hold glass dependably. He roughens the edges with an emory wheel, fits pieces together cleverly and paints them with care.

He's always done everything that way — carefully and determinedly according to his wife.

"He's accomplished so many wonderful things!" she beamed.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuns broke ground for the Harvey Line Motel in North Long Beach in 1927, when Kuns was 50. It was the nation's first really modern, comfortable motel.

Kuns later spearheaded organization of United Motor Courts, the first American association of motel operators. He served as its first president.

The Kunses retired 20 years ago.

"THAT WAS THE worst mistake I ever made in my life," Kuns said. After all his busy years in business, Kuns found there "just wasn't enough to do."

The couple filled their time with trips across the country and in Mexico, Canada and South America.

On many of the trips Mrs. Kuns hunted additional pieces to fill her elegant collection of cut glass.

"Couldn't keep her out of antique shops," Kuns said with a twinkle. "Sometimes we'd have to make two or three stops a day."

One wonders, tongue in cheek, if he has found an amiable way of evening the score.

Now it is HE who makes the stops — at the Goodwill, the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America . . .

Storms don't dampen party moods in beautiful downtown Long Beach

By PAT McDONNELL and MARGARET TUTHILL

IT WAS A fun-for-all take-off of "Laugh-In" when Millikan High School juniors, Cris Zacher, Becky Rule and Sandy Noon, presented their original rendition of the TV show Saturday in Wardlow Park Clubhouse.

More than 200 friends and members of Beachwood Camp 917, Woodmen of the World, were entertained by the teen trio who wrote the script, designed and made stage props and garnered belly-laughs throughout performance.

Occasion was fifth annual fund-raising event of the fraternal group which enlisted talents of neighborhood teens for entertainment portion of the spaghetti feed prepared by Chef Lee Barnes.

Proceeds go to a $200 scholarship annually presented to a deserving high school senior. This year's recipient is Long Beach City College coed Sharon Zimmerman.

The inventive trio made a joke wall out of a refrigerator packing case, covered it with butcher paper and painted on sayings of the mod, mod world. The audience was drawn into the act when the girls called spectators on stage to play impromptu roles in a skit titled "Red the Hood." Furthering the youth theme were Howard Stern and Scott Brodeen, members of Junior Long Beach Mystics, who performed feats of magic.

GLITTER OF ALL the brass was blinding in Contessa Room of Hollywood's Marquis Restaurant when the Fred Rosenbergs gave a surprise dinner party Friday in honor of newly selected Lt. Cmdr. Jerome Fee and his wife, Nancy.

Driving from Long Beach for festive celebration were honored guest's parents, Rear Adm. and Mrs. Jack Fee (Ret.), Capt. and Mrs. Caberon Nixon and Cmdr. and Mrs. David Boslough. Also on hand were Lt. Cmdrs. and Mmes. Douglas Gibson, Paul Carpenter, David Smith, John Miller and Martin Kiefer and Lt. and Mrs. Charles Bartholomew.

FRIENDS OF Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mann had no choice but to break with the tradition of surprise when they honored the Manns Saturday on their 25th wedding anniversary.

More than 40 friends gathered for the silver-themed celebration in Los Alamitos home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles R. Brantingham. Cohosts, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burt, agreed Mrs. Mann has become too knowledgeable in the ways of throwing a surprise party to keep her in the dark.

Two years ago, Mrs. Mann caught the Bratinghams off guard when she honored them on their 25th and, again, a few months ago, she surprised the James Deckers with a party on their silver anniversary.

The Manns may have been alerted as to purpose of party, but the silver hors d'oeuvres dish, compote and pie server they were presented did come as a surprise. Joining in on the fun were the Mann's daughter, Sherry, and son, Steve.

STORM WARNINGS didn't dampen spirits of girl-sailors-every-Friday at Leeway Sailing Club, Alamitos Bay when they met to stow away luncheon at program launching their spring season.

Solo male present was Skipper Jerry Miller (reason being he's one of the few men brave enough to teach sailing to women) who presented trophies to winners of the February series. Fleet-A sailors taking bows were Barbara Katz, Lori Dukes and Adrea Stoker. Phyllis Kronenberg led B-Fleet.

BY THE TIME a fellow hits the ripe old age of 29, he's usually accumulated a great many friends. In Marshall McComb's case, the list is staggering — considering school chums, fraternity brothers and wife's friends from Poly and UC Berkeley.

In fact, it had started to become a state of confusion whenever Marshall and charming wife described high school and college friends to one another. Happy solution was to get everyone together before all reached their 30s — and that's what they did on Marshall's 29th birthday.

Among those finally matching faces with long-heard-of-names at a lively dinner party in the McCombs' 3103 Roxanne Ave. home were Messrs. and Mmes. John Richert, Hal Steuber, John (Steve) Maynard, Fred Nielsen, Barney Calame, Dick Chaffee and William English. Unable to attend because of the early arrival of their third baby girl were the Ken (Barbara Burnett) Bordners.

NAUTICALLY SPEAKING it was a smashing christening party Friday when Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Sharpe had friends aboard their brand new nameless Chris Craft at Bahia Yacht Landing. Center of attention — once guests had toured the 32-foot boat — was a box in which all present placed their suggestions for naming the boat.

Old salts then cruised to the Sharpes' College Park Estates home for dinner and to vote on names proposed by Drs. and Mmes. James Loos, Michael O'Brien, Donald King and the Robert Farleys.

THE CLINTONIAN SOCIETY has a name that rings sonorous and elegant.

Do its members gather to dance Viennese waltzes? Study archaeology? Play cellos?

The answer to these possibilities is no. Identity of the Clintonian Society is almost incredibly straightforward. Its more than 150 members are former residents of Clinton, Iowa, a town on the Mississippi River.

Recently the group met to swap memories at an annual party organized by Howard Dawson, 2178 Tulane Ave. Seven years ago, the transplanted midwesterner was lonesome for home and founded the club singlehandedly.

He took his inspiration from Long Beach's annual Iowa picnic, where grandmothers trade tall stories of how they used to cook for 12 hired men while tow-haired youngsters tumbled in the grass.

The Clintonian party was a definitely more swinging affair with buffet supper and dancing until dawn. Among revelers were Messrs. and Mmes. Russell Higgins, Henry Paysens, J. B. Cairns, Robert Haring and Wayne Huebner.

WHEN A COUPLE of love birds shares the same nest for 45 years they really do have something to crow about and that's just what Mr. and Mrs. C. Earl Hawkins will be doing next Sunday at an open house anniversary celebration in their 2424 Golden Ave. home.

Hostesses for the 2 to 5 p.m. event will be the couple's daughter, Mrs. Earline Rose of Alta Loma, and niece, Mrs. Mary Serjun of Apple Valley.

THE SIX PEARSON sisters were together again at the home of Mrs. Dale Bartholomew, 5243 Arbor Road, reliving their British Columbia girlhood. (One can only guess how giddy it must have been then, 40 years ago. Did they fight over the curling iron? Scramble all at once when a Hupmobile honked by the door? Stage boisterous battles with their mama's feather pillows?)

Over finger sandwiches and iced punch the sisters remembered.

Besides the co-hostesses, Mrs. Bartholomew and Mrs. Russell Riley, Newport Beach, they were Mrs. Rae E. Massie, Nakomas, Sask., Mrs. Harold Moriarty, Millbrae, Mrs. Jesse W. Miller, Vallejo, and Mrs. J. T. Thompson, Wyndell, B.C.

There were no pillow fights, no honking Hupmobiles: only the tinkle of coffee spoons.

Beard survey brings hairy results

By ERMA BOMBECK

As an old learned Chinese philosopher once said, "You show me a man's beard and I'll show you what he had for lunch!"

This is only one of the problems confronting the return of the Neanderthal man to the 20th century. Last week I conducted an impartial survey among wives of bearded men to find out some of the other problems plaguing their hairy husbands. These are some of their answers:

Mrs. Elsie Nurd: "The sideburns have given my husband a new lease on life but they're about to get him fired from his job. You see, Willard's bald as a cue ball. So he let his sideburns grow 18 inches long. Each morning he teases them and flips them back over his bald spot. In a dim light he looks like one of the Andrew Sisters—the one in the middle—but it's so time consuming for his comb-out that he's been late for work for the past three months."

Mrs. D.W.V. (name withheld by request of Mr. Varner): "I don't know whether you could call this a problem but I refuse to sleep with my husband since he grew a face full of hair. It was like going to bed with King Kong . . . What do you mean where does he sleep? On top of the Empire State Building. Where else?"

Mrs. Alice Remple: "My husband's beard has been a source of embarrassment. I wouldn't have minded if he had looked as good with a beard as, say, the Smith Brothers on a box of cough drops, but he's rather frail and he's blonde and his mustache didn't bush out. It grew in stringy. The other day he won a Ho Chi Minh look-alike contest. The children are too embarrassed to even go to school."

MRS. PEGGY WICKS: "My husband's beard is a great big pain in the neck. We used to have some good times together. Now it's 'I can't go out. I have to shampoo my beard' or 'Don't have anyone in. I just washed my beard and can't do a thing with it.' He's fiddling with it all the time . . . clipping, trimming, shaping or stroking it."

Mrs. Selma Farquard: "If the good Lord had meant for men to have beards he'd have put a sweeper nozzle up their nose. I'm married to a slob. His beard looks like a nest for unwed sparrows. Tobacco clippings, eggshells, toothpicks, gum wrappers. We even found the toothpaste cap in there."

The men who grow beards, mustaches and sideburns contend they are doing it to reassert their masculinity in a world where it is difficult to distinguish between the sexes. So who are Burton, Newman and Onassis? The McGuire Sisters?

GLASS STACKER:

Local man pursues art--at 91

By Margaret Tuthill,
Staff Writer

HARVEY KUNS, 2552 CEDAR AVE., DEMONSTRATES HIS ARTISTRY IN "GLASS STACKING."

Harvey A. Kuns is self-made and practical.

Born into a family of midwestern "white shirt" farmers, he grew up following the plow and helping his father judge horse flesh. He came to Long Beach 42 years ago and founded a prosperous business.

He has organized insurance companies, kept a motel, founded a trade association and invested in land. He's been a Scottish Rite Mason for 59 years.

There is, in short, nothing "arty" about Harvey A. Kuns.

But for the last 18 months Kuns has devoted two or three hours a day to making some highly imaginative and creative candelabra from cast-off glassware.

Maybe it's because he's 91 and can do as he pleases.

Kuns celebrated his birthday and his 43rd wedding anniversary Saturday.

HE MAKES THE "glass stacks," as he calls them, from olive jars, cider bottles, dime-store vases and other glass debris.

He starts by gluing the glassware in vertical stacks about five pieces high. After the glue has dried 48 hours, he daubs the creation with crystallizing paint. Kuns' lively wife, Viola, makes candles to put on top.

Lined up on the old gentleman's worktable, the candelabras are shimmering minarets, holding sunlight.

They're lovely, but without frills. They make a simple, straightforward contrast to the enormous, lacey collection of cut glass that Mrs. Kuns keeps in lighted cabinets.

Kuns obtains raw materials from friends and "as is" bins at Goodwill Industries, the Salvation Army and Volunteers of America.

He has given away all 75 of the candleholders he's made.

"It's all just play to keep me busy," he said.

Be that as it may, Kuns goes about his art with businesslike zeal.

IT DOESN'T matter that he may be the world's only practitioner of his art, or that he gives all his candelabras away; the old gentleman is determined to be "the best glass stacker on earth."

He uses a special glue that will hold glass dependably. He roughens the edges with an emory wheel, fits pieces together cleverly and paints them with care.

He's always done everything that way — carefully and determinedly according to his wife.

"He's accomplished so many wonderful things!" she beamed.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuns broke ground for the Harvey Line Motel in North Long Beach in 1927, when Kuns was 50. It was the nation's first really modern, comfortable motel.

Kuns later spearheaded organization of United Motor Courts, the first American association of motel operators. He served as its first president.

The Kunses retired 20 years ago.

"THAT WAS THE worst mistake I ever made in my life," Kuns said. After all his busy years in business, Kuns found there "just wasn't enough to do."

The couple filled their time with trips across the country and in Mexico, Canada and South America.

On many of the trips Mrs. Kuns hunted additional pieces to fill her elegant collection of cut glass.

"Couldn't keep her out of antique shops," Kuns said with a twinkle. "Sometimes we'd have to make two or three stops a day."

One wonders, tongue in cheek, if he has found an amiable way of evening the score.

Now it is HE who makes the stops — at the Goodwill, the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America . . .

CSLB COEDS HANG POSTERS ON CAMPUS TO REMIND FIRST-TIME VOTERS TO REGISTER . . . Susan Ono (left), Marnie Wild and June Van Kampen, president of Cap and Gown, aid League of Women Voters to register student voters Wednesday and Thursday on campus.

LWV strengthens power of vote by studying issues, informing public supports or opposes candidates or parties (Bull Moosers excepted).

This month, the League is kicking off a national fund-raising drive to insure its effectiveness during the next 50 years. Wednesday will mark official opening of the $11 million drive when Mrs. Bruce Benson, national president, meets with President Richard M. Nixon in the White House.

Fund drive will culminate May 1970 in Washington, D.C., with 50th anniversary convention celebration.

ON THE LOCAL level, Long Beach Bull Moosers conceded to the League in May 1968 when members won a five-year campaign to gain city council approval of a new library.

"In the fall of 1963, the Long Beach League adopted a study on the needs for a new library," said Mrs. Marvin Tincher, president.

"The study pointed out urgency of the measure and in 1964 the library was on the ballot, but lacked a two thirds majority for passage.

"From 1966 to 1968, the League worked with such organizations as Friends of the Library and Regional Arts Council to inform the public and generate community support urging the city council to approve a joint powers agreement to finance a library building."

A WORKING, rather than social, organization, the league is headquartered at 1001 E. Fourth St., where volunteers staff offices each weekday morning.

In addition to providing a voter information service, the League maintains a speakers' bureau offering individual lecturers or panel discussion groups on pros and cons of ballot measures. Each year, it makes more than 100 appearances before civic and church organizations.

An unsung community service is sitting in on city council, school board, committee and commission sessions. League members sit in on — but never participate — as the public's representatives at hearings and official meetings. Known as observers, they monitor actions and words of public officials and report back to the League.

"First we educate ourselves on political issues, then we educate the public," said Mrs. Tincher.

To keep informed, the League conducts study meetings on city, county, state and federal levels.

"We meet twice monthly," Mrs. Tincher said, "with sessions staggered for morning and evening groups. This year, we're studying rapid transit on the county level, water pollution, taxes and constitution revision on the state level and pros and cons of Red China's admittance to the United Nations on the federal level."

PUBLICATIONS TURNED out by the League include the booklet "Focus on Long Beach" which pinpoints structure of city government, functions, duties and personnel of each department.

Prior to elections, the League publishes a "Voter's Guide" offering political stands and biographical information supplied by candidates.

It also prepares a digest of state propositions with pro and con arguments in basic English and Spanish, as well as a "California Election Extra" packet with information on party platforms and principal arguments of candidates.

Another publication is "Facts for Voters" offering information on absentee ballots and registration of new residents.

The League also has compiled a directory, titled "Long Beach versus Poverty," of federally funded programs providing equal opportunity in education and employment.

"Currently, our big push is voter registration and candidates' meetings preceding the April 4 school board election, May 13 councilmanic primary and June 3 council election," said Mrs. Sanford Helm, voter service chairman.

Her committee has worked with Cap and Gown senior women's honor society at California State College, Long Beach, and Associated Student Body at Long Beach City College to set up voter registration booths on both campuses Wednesday and Thursday.

The committee also has joined forces with City Employees Association and Chamber of Commerce to sponsor informal coffee hours in public buildings where all city council candidates can meet with interested voters.

To join the League, a woman needs only to be of voting age and pay annual dues of $10.

Women deans, vice principals meet

The bi-annual convention of the California Association of Women Deans and Vice-Principals is being held through today at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

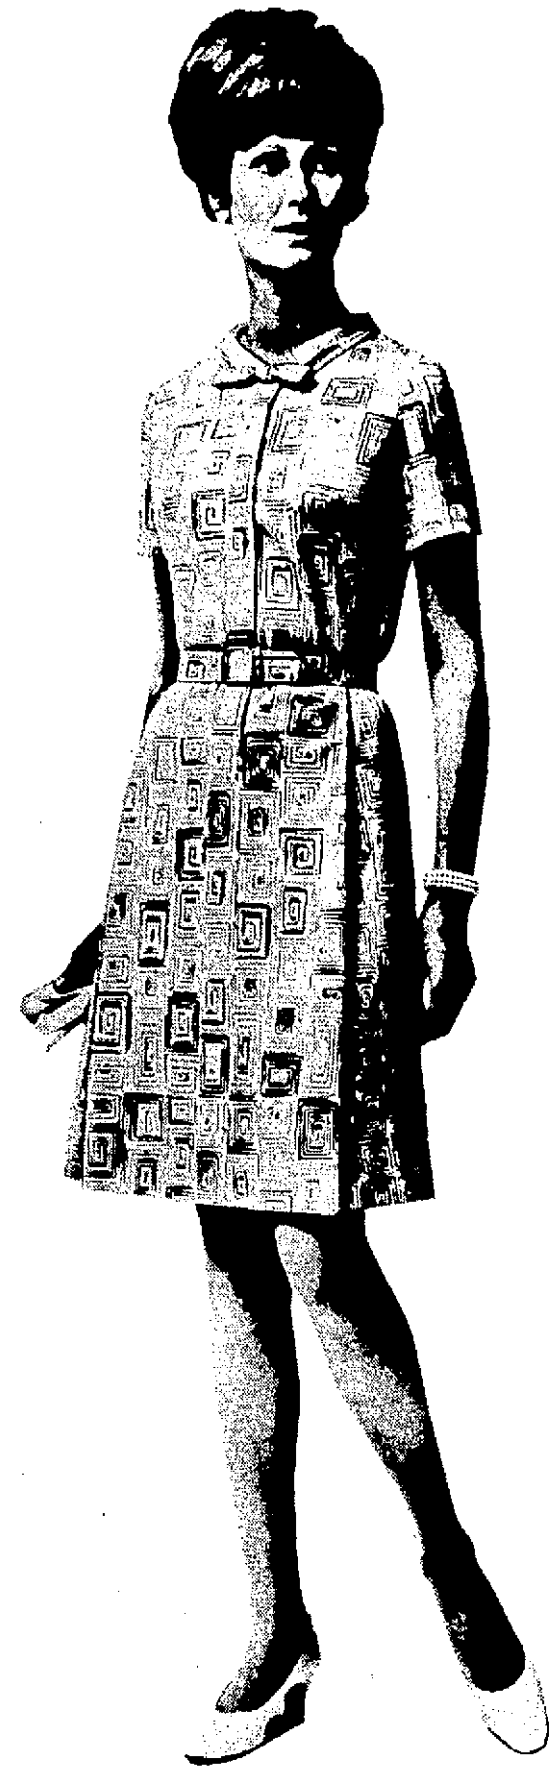

Mrs. Lois Swanson, Associate Dean of Students, California State College at Long Beach, and CAWDVP president, is presiding over the program. The conference will provide a comprehensive view of education, considering the aesthetic, political and social ramifications of the contemporary world.

Dr. Leo Buscaglia, professor of Special Education at the University of Southern California, is keynote speaker on "Education —A Total Experience. The Educator looks at Himself."

Council invites public to dinner

Women's Council of St. Peter and St. Paul's Catholic Church will give an Italian dinner from 1 to 6 p.m. next Sunday in the school auditorium, San Pedro.

The public is invited. Mrs. John Trani and Mrs. Mel Mauro are cochairmen.

Couples recite wedding vows in weekend rites

Huggins-Schlobohm

On a trip up the coastline to Carmel are Mr. and Mrs. Allan Cordell Schlobohm whose wedding took place Saturday at St. Antony Catholic Church, Gardena.

The bride, nee Julia Lesley Page, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Page of Compton. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John Schlobohm of Gardena.

A gown of white peau de soie with chantilly bodice and lace applique was selected by the bride.

Linda Page, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Deborah Snyder was bridesmaid. Joyce Morelos and Jill Schlobohm were flower girls.

John Schlobohm Jr., brother of the bridegroom, was best man; Alvin Schlobohm ushered. Robert Morelos was ring bearer.

A reception followed in the VFW Hall, Hawthorne. The couple will reside in Idaho Falls, Idaho, in late March.

Robinett-Yeisley

Beard survey brings hairy results

By ERMA BOMBECK

As an old learned Chinese philosopher once said, "You show me a man's beard and I'll show you what he had for lunch!"

This is only one of the problems confronting the return of the Neanderthal man to the 20th century. Last week I conducted an impartial survey among wives of bearded men to find out some of the other problems plaguing their hairy husbands. These are some of their answers:

Mrs. Elsie Nurd: "The sideburns have given my husband a new lease on life but they're about to get him fired from his job. You see, Willard's bald as a cue ball. So he let his sideburns grow 18 inches long. Each morning he teases them and flips them back over his bald spot. In a dim light he looks like one of the Andrew Sisters—the one in the middle—but it's so time consuming for his comb-out that he's been late for work for the past three months."

Mrs. D.W.V. (name withheld by request of Mr. Varner): "I don't know whether you could call this a problem but I refuse to sleep with my husband since he grew a face full of hair. It was like going to bed with King Kong . . . What do you mean where does he sleep? On top of the Empire State Building. Where else?"

Mrs. Alice Remple: "My husband's beard has been a source of embarrassment. I wouldn't have minded if he had looked as good with a beard as, say, the Smith Brothers on a box of cough drops, but he's rather frail and he's blonde and his mustache didn't bush out. It grew in stringy The other day he won a Ho Chi Minh look-alike contest. The children are too embarrassed to even go to school."

MRS. PEGGY WICKS: "My husband's beard is a great big pain in the neck. We used to have some good times together. Now it's 'I can't go out. I have to shampoo my beard' or 'Don't have anyone in. I just washed my beard and can't do a thing with it.' He's fiddling with it all the time . . . clipping, trimming, shaping or stroking it."

Mrs. Selma Farquard: "If the good Lord had meant for men to have beards he'd have put a sweeper nozzle up their nose. I'm married to a slob. His beard looks like a nest for unwed sparrows. Tobacco clippings, eggshells, toothpicks, gum wrappers. We even found the toothpaste cap in there."

The men who grow beards, mustaches and sideburns contend they are doing it to reassert their masculinity in a world where it is difficult to distinguish between the sexes. So who are Burton, Newman and Onassis? The McGuire Sisters?

AAUW's fancy soars to fashion

Attentions of Mrs. Louise Leckington (left) and Marion Tripeny are carried "Up and Away with Fashion" in anticipation of annual fellowship fashion luncheon Saturday of Long Beach branch, American Association of University Women. Ensembles from 12 area shops will be shown during the 12:30 p.m. event in the Elks Club. Ascension balloons filled with mod flowers will further the theme of the scholarship benefit. On hand will be Mrs. Margaret Gilliland of Brisbane, Australia, who is doing research work in biochemistry as an AAUW fellow at University of California, San Diego. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Jack Lowe, 307 Euclid Ave.

Scots-born Helen MacInness—one of the world's leading writers of suspense and intrigue —talks of her craft

Don't take gruesome part of life away from children

By JOY STILLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — "Take away the sense of adventure from man and you have 'plab,' " says Helen MacInnes, author of the current best-seller, "The Salzburg Connection," and 13 earlier novels that are crammed with adventure, intrigue and suspense.

"The best thing about the feats of the astronauts," she adds, "is the feeling that adventure is not dead in this mechanical age."

Some five million people reading her books in 18 languages have found plenty of that commodity in her tales of international espionage which, she points out, always have a basic kernel of fact around which her imagination weaves its intricate plot.

Not only in books, but in life too, adventure and some aspects of violence are normal and necessary, believes the petite black-haired woman who talks with the same vivid details as in her writing style.

"If we try to take away the gruesome things in life and keep our children in cotton wool we do them a disservice," she says.

HER LATEST BOOK took shape from a newspaper account she read about diving operations in a Czechoslovakian lake to recover boxes sunk by the Nazis in their retreat.

"I filed it away in the back of my mind because I was finishing 'The Double Image' at the time," she says. "Later I found the same sort of activity had taken place in Austria, which I think is the most physically beautiful country in the world. I visited it again to get the geography and atmosphere of Austrian villages in mind. Most of the book is based on geographical fact but the lake's name, Finstersee, and the village of Unterwald are my invention."

recent gift from her publishers, Harcourt, Brace and World.

She prefers to write in pencil, although her last two books were typed because of writer's cramp, and she imposes no special work regimen on herself.

"I suppose I should take certain hours," she admits, "but I just get every damn minute I can at it." She revises as many as 12 times and her husband never gets a glance at the manuscript until it is ready for the typist.

"When I'm getting towards the end of a novel and all the problems are going to have to be resolved I feel like a man coming down a steep hill on a bicycle juggling three oranges," she laughs.

SHE FINDS joy in the exact meaning of words, their sound, the shape of paragraphs. "Don't always use the same length of sentences," she explains. "Short ones for quicker tempos, longer bits for a quieter mood.

"If you can be a writer there are various things you can be," she remarks, gesturing with an unlighted cigarette. "I'm a novelist. Other writers are journalists or essayists or poets. The tragedy of some people who write novels is that perhaps they should be some other type of writer."

She sees a big difference between detective and espionage stories, each with a different point of view and each using different methods, and thinks that the author of one wouldn't necessarily be good at the other.

"In the detective area the problem is who did this and how and why," she says. "In espionage novels you know who's been doing what. This has happened. How can we stop it from becoming a real threat to our society?"

Fryer to produce top best-seller

"The Salzburg Connection," which in its short time on the market has become one of the literary phenomenons of our day, has been bought by 20th Century-Fox for a major motion picture.

It will be produced by Robert Fryer, highly successful Broadway producer ("Auntie Mame" and other hits) who, since arriving in Hollywood a year ago, has produced "The Boston Strangler" and "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

Featuring an international all-star cast, it will be filmed in Salzburg starting in December or January.

CSLB COEDS HANG POSTERS ON CAMPUS TO REMIND FIRST-TIME VOTERS TO REGISTER . . . Susan Ono (left), Marnie Wild and June Van Kampen, president of Cap and Gown, aid League of Women Voters to register student voters Wednesday and Thursday on campus.

LWV strengthens power of vote by studying issues, informing public supports or opposes candidates or parties (Bull Moosers excepted).

This month, the League is kicking off a national fund-raising drive to insure its effectiveness during the next 50 years. Wednesday will mark official opening of the $11 million drive when Mrs. Bruce Benson, national president, meets with President Richard M. Nixon in the White House.

Fund drive will culminate May 1970 in Washington, D.C., with 50th anniversary convention celebration.

ON THE LOCAL level, Long Beach Bull Moosers conceded to the League in May 1968 when members won a five-year campaign to gain city council approval of a new library.

"In the fall of 1963, the Long Beach League adopted a study on the needs for a new library," said Mrs. Marvin Tincher, president.

"The study pointed out urgency of the measure and in 1964 the library was on the ballot, but lacked a two thirds majority for passage.

"From 1966 to 1968, the League worked with such organizations as Friends of the Library and Regional Arts Council to inform the public and generate community support urging the city council to approve a joint powers agreement to finance a library building."

A WORKING, rather than social, organization, the league is headquartered at 1001 E. Fourth St., where volunteers staff offices each weekday morning.

In addition to providing a voter information service, the League maintains a speakers' bureau offering individual lecturers or panel discussion groups on pros and cons of ballot measures. Each year, it makes more than 100 appearances before civic and church organizations.

An unsung community service is sitting in on city council, school board, committee and commission sessions. League members sit in on — but never participate — as the public's representatives at hearings and official meetings. Known as observers, they monitor actions and words of public officials and report back to the League.

"First we educate ourselves on political issues, then we educate the public," said Mrs. Tincher.

To keep informed, the League conducts study meetings on city, county, state and federal levels.

"We meet twice monthly," Mrs. Tincher said, "with sessions staggered for morning and evening groups. This year, we're studying rapid transit on the county level, water pollution, taxes and constitution revision on the state level and pros and cons of Red China's admittance to the United Nations on the federal level."

PUBLICATIONS TURNED out by the League include the booklet "Focus on Long Beach" which pinpoints structure of city government, functions, duties and personnel of each department.

Prior to elections, the League publishes a "Voter's Guide" offering political stands and biographical information supplied by candidates.

It also prepares a digest of state propositions with pro and con arguments in basic English and Spanish, as well as a "California Election Extra" packet with information on party platforms and principal arguments of candidates.

Another publication is "Facts for Voters" offering information on absentee ballots and registration of new residents.

The League also has complied a directory, titled "Long Beach versus Poverty," of federally funded programs providing equal opportunity in education and employmept.

"Currently, our big push is voter registration and candidates' meetings preceding the April 4 school board election, May 13 councilmanic primary and June 3 council election," said Mrs. Sanford Helm, voter service chairman.

Her committee has worked with Cap and Gown senior women's honor society at California State College, Long Beach, and Associated Student Body at Long Beach City College to set up voter registration booths on both campuses Wednesday and Thursday.

The committee also has joined forces with City Employees Association and Chamber of Commerce to sponsor informal coffee hours in public buildings where all city council candidates can meet with interested voters.

To join the League, a woman needs only to be of voting age and pay annual dues of $10.

Women deans, vice principals meet

The bi-annual convention of the California Association of Women Deans and Vice-Principals is being held through today at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Lois Swanson, Associate Dean of Students, California State College at Long Beach, and CAWDVP president, is presiding over the program. The conference will provide a comprehensive view of education, considering the aesthetic, political and social ramifications of the contemporary world.

Dr. Leo Buscaglia, professor of Special Education at the University of Southern California, is keynote speaker on "Education —A Total Experience. The Educator looks at Himself."

Council invites public to dinner

Women's Council of St. Peter and St. Paul's Catholic Church will give an Italian dinner from 1 to 6 p.m. next Sunday in the school auditorium, San Pedro.

The public is invited. Mrs. John Trani and Mrs. Mel Mauro are cochairmen.

DEAR ABBY

Fiance won't tell about jam

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What kind of a "jam" could a man have gotten himself into that would cost him $6,600?

My fiance tells me that we have to postpone our marriage because a "jam" he got himself into took all his savings. I asked him to tell me the circumstances, but he refused to discuss it. I think that since we are engaged to be married I have a right to know. What do you think? BERTIE

DEAR BERTIE: I think you do, too. A $6,600 "jam" represents a lot of sugar.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law is a doll. I love her as tho she were my own daughter, but here is the problem:

She has been married to my son for over three years now, and she has never had Dad and me to her house for a meal. Not once!

I have her and my son over for meals all the time, and we get along fine, so I know it's not that she doesn't care for me.

I know she has had little company dinners. (She has even asked me for recipes, which I give her gladly.) But we are never invited.

It's not that she can't afford it because money is the least of their worries. Also she has a nice home and beautiful things to entertain with, so WHY hasn't she ever invited Dad and me over for a meal? BEWILDERED IN-LAW.— L.I.

DEAR BEWILDERED: If I had to guess, it would be because she lacks confidence and fears she wouldn't measure up.

DEAR ABBY: I was a student nurse but dropped out after one year. One of the things I learned in training was how to give a massage. In fact, that was just about the only thing I really liked about nursing.

A few months ago my roommate had her boy friend over to the apartment and he complained about some sore muscles he had from playing touch football, so I gave him a massage.

In a few days he asked if I'd give him another massage, but this time he insisted on paying me. Since then he has sent me four other clients, and now I'm massaging regularly.

I enjoy doing this and I also like the extra money, but someone told me I am breaking the law! Is it true a person can't massage without a license? I also heard it's against the law to massage someone of the opposite sex. I can't believe it. DIANE

DEAR DIANE: In all states it is illegal to massage professionally without a license, and in some states one may not massage a member of the opposite sex. Check this with your county or state medical society. Or ask a lawyer to check it out.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HATTIE: A man who really wants to work will take any kind of job he can get until something "more in his line" is available. Your man sounds like the kind who, when opportunity knocks at the front door, is out in the back yard looking for four-leaf clovers.

Scots-born Helen MacInness—one of the world's leading writers of suspense and intrigue —talks of her craft

Don't take gruesome part of life away from children

By JOY STILLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — "Take away the sense of adventure from man and you have 'plab,' " says Helen MacInnes, author of the current best-seller, "The Salzburg Connection," and 13 earlier novels that are crammed with adventure, intrigue and suspense.

"The best thing about the feats of the astronauts," she adds, "is the feeling that adventure is not dead in this mechanical age."

Some five million people reading her books in 18 languages have found plenty of that commodity in her tales of international espionage which, she points out, always have a basic kernel of fact around which her imagination weaves its intricate plot.

Not only in books, but in life too, adventure and some aspects of violence are normal and necessary, believes the petite black-haired woman who talks with the same vivid details as in her writing style.

"If we try to take away the gruesome things in life and keep our children in cotton wool we do them a disservice," she says.

HER LATEST BOOK took shape from a newspaper account she read about diving operations in a Czechoslovakian lake to recover boxes sunk by the Nazis in their retreat.

"I filed it away in the back of my mind because I was finishing 'The Double Image' at the time," she says. "Later I found the same sort of activity had taken place in Austria, which I think is the most physically beautiful country in the world. I visited it again to get the geography and atmosphere of Austrian villages in mind. Most of the book is based on geographical fact but the lake's name, Finstersee, and the village of Unterwald are my invention."

In the living room of her large but cozy East Side Manhattan apartment, lined with bookshelves and filled with momentos gathered in her travels, the vibrant author proudly displays the 100,000th copy of "The Salzburg Connection." Bound in blue leather tooled in gold and bearing her signature in gold on the cover, the special volume is a recent gift from her publishers, Harcourt, Brace and World.

She prefers to write in pencil, although her last two books were typed because of writer's cramp, and she imposes no special work regimen on herself.

"I suppose I should take certain hours," she admits, "but I just get every damn minute I can at it." She revises as many as 12 times and her husband never gets a glance at the manuscript until it is ready for the typist.

"When I'm getting towards the end of a novel and all the problems are going to have to be resolved I feel like a man coming down a steep hill on a bicycle juggling three oranges," she laughs.

SHE FINDS joy in the exact meaning of words, their sound, the shape of paragraphs. "Don't always use the same length of sentences," she explains. "Short ones for quicker tempos, longer bits for a quieter mood.

"If you can be a writer there are various things you can be," she remarks, gesturing with an unlighted cigarette. "I'm a novelist. Other writers are journalists or essayists or poets. The tragedy of some people who write novels is that perhaps they should be some other type of writer."

She sees a big difference between detective and espionage stories, each with a different point of view and each using different methods, and thinks that the author of one wouldn't necessarily be good at the other.

"In the detective area the problem is who did this and how and why," she says. "In espionage novels you know who's been doing what. This has happened. How can we stop it from becoming a real threat to our society?"

Fryer to produce top best-seller

"The Salzburg Connection," which in its short time on the market has become one of the literary phenomenons of our day, has been bought by 20th Century-Fox for a major motion picture.

It will be produced by Robert Fryer, highly successful Broadway producer ("Auntie Mame" and other hits) who, since arriving in Hollywood a year ago, has produced "The Boston Strangler" and "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie."

Featuring an international all-star cast, it will be filmed in Salzburg starting in December or January.

LBMA opens juried show

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

The public is invited to a reception today from 2 to 4 p.m. at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., to honor participating artists in the Seventh Annual Juried Exhibition. Hosts are Friends of the Museum.

Jason Wong, museum director, has announced that the museum has a record amount — $5,000 — for purchase of art for its Permanent Collection.

Gifts from groups, clubs and individuals with no formal affiliations have made possible purchase of works in the exhibit by Anthony Berlant, James Bradley, Tony DeLap, Guy Williams and Norman Zammitt, all of Los Angeles.

A total of $600 will go to these award winners: Clonard of Hollywood, Don Lagerberg of Whittier, Malcolm A. McClain and Jack Stuck of Los Angeles, and Bradley Smith of North Hollywood.

The 48 paintings, sculpture and graphics in the exhibit are by as many Southern California artists. Abstract and figurative, styles make use of many unconventional materials and techniques. All work was done during the past two years by artists who reside in counties south of Fresno. Jan van der Marck, director of Chicago's new Museum of Contemporary Art, was juror.

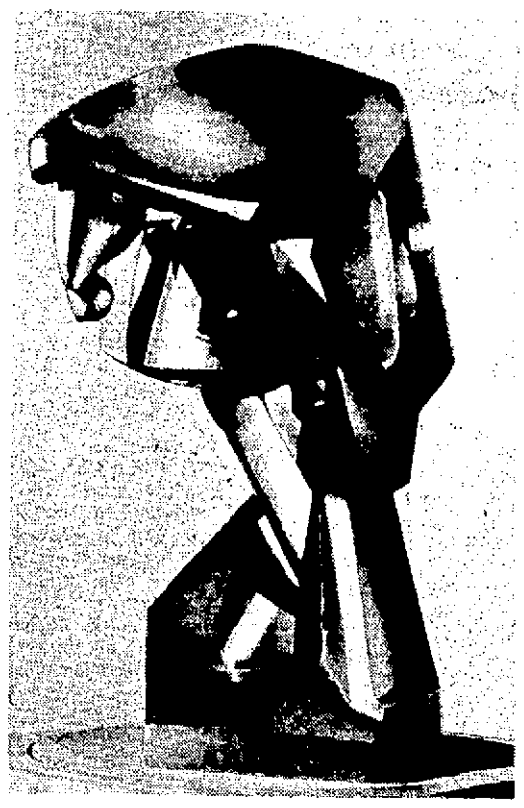

In conjunction with this show, the Museum Association is sponsoring four lectures on contemporary art. Speakers and dates are: Delmore Scott, art historian at California Institute of the Arts, March 19; Don Lagerberg, assistant professor of art at California State College, Fullerton, March 26; Virginia Laddey, art reviewer for the Independent, Press-Telegram, April 9; and Josine Ianco, former director of Lytton Center of the Visual Arts, April 16.

Lectures will begin at 8 p.m. at the museum. As seating is limited, audiences are asked to arrive by 7:30 p.m. when doors open. The fee for each lecture is $2, free to association members. New members may sign up at the door.

NOW PERMANENTLY installed in the Atrium of the Ahmanson Building of Los Angeles County Museum of Art is "Le Cheval Majeur" (The Great Horse) by Raymond Duchamp-Villon. The bronze sculpture, 59-inches high, was given to the museum in October by Mrs. Anna Bing Arnold.

Walter Pach has described the sculpture as "A climactic monument and moment in the formal development of 20th century sculpture."

"The Horse" was done in five stages in addition to at least five studies and many drawings. Duchamp-Villon began his final model in the spring of 1914 before the outbreak of World War I on Aug. 3, and completed the model while on leave from military service in the fall. Before his death in the war, he asked his brothers, Jacques Villon and Marcel Duchamp, to enlarge the work. The first enlargement was done by Villon in 1930-31, the final one under supervision of Duchamp in 1966.

'GREAT HORSE' IN THE ATRIUM

A LIVELY discussion of "Censorship in the Arts" is scheduled at California State College, Long Beach, Friday at 2 p.m. in Lecture Hall 151.

State Assemblyman Alan Sieroty (D) will present the legislative aspects of censorship. Barbara Garson, author of "MacBird", and composer Ed Applebaum, assistant professor of music at the college, will give the artists' point of view.

FOUNDED IN 1909 and now one of the largest art clubs in the West, California Art Club Friday named winners in its 1969 Gold Medal Award Exhibition.

Eunice Martchenko of North Hollywood won the $100 President's Award. First place winners also received $100. Robert Schaar of Sierra Madre took firsts in three categories — figures, portraits and landscape. Others are Ethel Elliott Von Zell of Torrance, marine; M. Hale Brown of Century City, still life; Wilson Cutler of Manhattan Beach, watercolor and graphics; and Robert Ortleib of Inglewood, sculpture.

The exhibit of 125 works will be on view through March 26 in the Gallery Area of California Federal Plaza, 5670 Wilshire Blvd. Admission is free.

THE LECTURE on "Anatomy of Destruction" by Julius Shulman, scheduled for Friday at Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery, has been postponed until Friday, March 28 at 8 p.m.

Exhibit at Cerritos has broad spectrum

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Cerritos College Art Gallery is having its annual Community Show which consists of 100 works, mostly paintings. These come from juryings of the memberships of the art associations in Artesia, Bellflower, Downey, Lakewood, La Mirada and Lakewood (as well as a dozen "independents"). As a consequence, a broad spectrum of endeavor, largely amateur, is represented.

This year the exhibit has a fresh air. While standard subject matter — still life, life, land and seascape — predominates, the many avenues of approach avoid the conventional and hackneyed in a number of cases.

Through March 28, the serious amateur has both a showing and an opportunity to see how he, or she, stacks up with peers. It is an opportunity, also, for beginning collectors to discover works which will brighten home decor.

AMONG THE several ceramics is a plump, white, matte-glazed weed pot by Judy Yoder of Norwalk. From Downey, Claire Lopez presents a unique stoneware wind chime. Myriad shell-thin pendants hang from two lacy crossbars, and rows of beads—all fired in sawdust so silvery grey tones are achieved.

Michiel R. Daniel's nude exploits a rich, painterly technique in oils and an unusual pink and olive color harmony. Astrid Johnson layers acrylic with the effect of tissue collage in "Lulu" who wears a striped sweater and tam.

WILLELLYN McFARLAND (Downey) calls her rollicking seashore watercolor "Fun Fun," an appropriate title for subject, composition and medium. Also from Downey is Rosalie Sciortino's "Formas Negras Y Morenas," a highly sophisticated tissue collage in beiges, brown and black.

Viewing hours at 11110 Alondra Blvd., Norwalk, are from noon to 4:30 p.m. daily, except Saturdays, and from 6 to 9 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays.

Mahalia is billed in L.B. Arena

Quietly, from the strength of the deep faith that makes her gospel singing a rich art form, Mahalia Jackson has engaged in two great fights —one against racial discrimination, the other a continuing struggle to help her own Black Americans.

The latter will be her goal next Sunday when she appears in concert at 4 p.m. in Long Beach Arena. Purpose of this gospel music sing-in is to raise funds for a children's nursery at Community Baptist Church of Compton. Rounding out the program will be 150 of the Southland's best gospel singers and church choirs under direction of Gwen Lightner. Many celebrities have promised to attend.

Fiance won't tell about jam

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What kind of a "jam" could a man have gotten himself into that would cost him $6,600?

My fiance tells me that we have to postpone our marriage because a "jam" he got himself into took all his savings. I asked him to tell me the circumstances, but he refused to discuss it. I think that since we are engaged to be married I have a right to know. What do you think? BERTIE

DEAR BERTIE: I think you do, too. A $6,600 "jam" represents a lot of sugar.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law is a doll. I love her as tho she were my own daughter, but here is the problem:

She has been married to my son for over three years now, and she has never had Dad and me to her house for a meal. Not once!

I have her and my son over for meals all the time, and we get along fine, so I know it's not that she doesn't care for me.

I know she has had little company dinners. (She has even asked me for recipes, which I give her gladly.) But we are never invited.

It's not that she can't afford it because money is the least of their worries. Also she has a nice home and beautiful things to entertain with, so WHY hasn't she ever invited Dad and me over for a meal? BEWILDERED IN-LAW.— L.I.

DEAR BEWILDERED: If I had to guess, it would be because she lacks confidence and fears she wouldn't measure up.

DEAR ABBY: I was a student nurse but dropped out after one year. One of the things I learned in training was how to give a massage. In fact, that was just about the only thing I really liked about nursing.

A few months ago my roommate had her boy friend over to the apartment and he complained about some sore muscles he had from playing touch football, so I gave him a massage.

In a few days he asked if I'd give him another massage, but this time he insisted on paying me. Since then he has sent me four other clients, and now I'm massaging regularly.

I enjoy doing this and I also like the extra money, but someone told me I am breaking the law! Is it true a person can't massage without a license? I also heard it's against the law to massage someone of the opposite sex. I can't believe it. DIANE

DEAR DIANE: In all states it is illegal to massage professionally without a license, and in some states one may not massage a member of the opposite sex. Check this with your county or state medical society. Or ask a lawyer to check it out.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HATTIE: A man who really wants to work will take any kind of job he can get until something "more in his line" is available. Your man sounds like the kind who, when opportunity knocks at the front door, is out in the back yard looking for four-leaf clovers.

JACOBY

Play is cause of trouble

There is no particularly scientific way to bid the North - South cards and there is no really outstanding contract. However, the chances are that almost any road would lead to the final contract of six hearts.

So you get there and West opens the eight of clubs. You look over dummy and count 11 sure tricks.

One way to get 12 is to finesse dummy's queen of clubs right away. Against some players that might be the winner. We know players who like to make declarer decide at trick one.

That type would lead from the king of clubs to force an immediate decision. On the other hand the eight does look like a short suit lead and you would do well to rise with dummy's ace of clubs.

You do this and are in dummy for the first and last time. You can try the trump finesse. If it works you can lay down the ace next and hope to drop the king. Failing that you give the defense a trump trick, get back on lead and run all your red cards. Maybe the man with the king of spades will unguard it.

There is little chance for this to happen. Neither opponent has anything else to hold except the king of clubs and somehow or other a club count will be available.

This leaves the immediate spade finesse at your disposal and you should try it. It is an even money chance and much better from a mathematical standpoint than the trump play. In addition, you can lose the spade finesse and still make your contract.

You only miss five trumps. Therefore when you lay down your ace you have better than a five per cent chance of picking up the king.

LBMA opens juried show

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

The public is invited to a reception today from 2 to 4 p.m. at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., to honor participating artists in the Seventh Annual Juried Exhibition. Hosts are Friends of the Museum.

Jason Wong, museum director, has announced that the museum has a record amount — $5,000 — for purchase of art for its Permanent Collection.

Gifts from groups, clubs and individuals with no formal affiliations have made possible purchase of works in the exhibit by Anthony Berlant, James Bradley, Tony DeLap, Guy Williams and Norman Zammitt, all of Los Angeles.

A total of $600 will go to these award winners: Clonard of Hollywood, Don Lagerberg of Whittier, Malcolm A. McClain and Jack Stuck of Los Angeles, and Bradley Smith of North Hollywood.

The 48 paintings, sculpture and graphics in the exhibit are by as many Southern California artists. Abstract and figurative, styles make use of many unconventional materials and techniques. All work was done during the past two years by artists who reside in counties south of Fresno. Jan van der Marck, director of Chicago's new Museum of Contemporary Art, was juror.

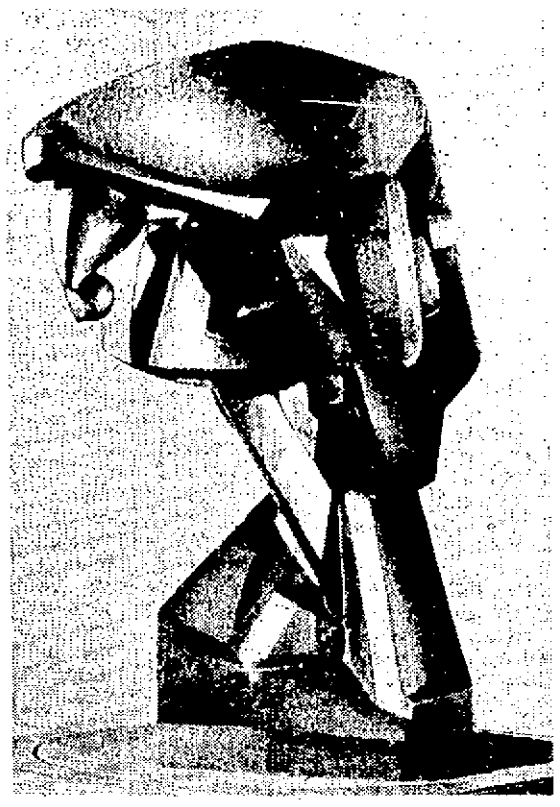

In conjunction with this show, the Museum Association is sponsoring four lectures on contemporary art. Speakers and dates are: Delmore Scott, art historian at California Institute of the Arts, March 19; Don Lagerberg, assistant professor of art at California State College, Fullerton, March 26; Virginia Laddey, art reviewer for the Independent, Press-Telegram, April 9; and Josine Ianco, former director of Lytton Center of the Visual Arts, April 16.

Lectures will begin at 8 p.m. at the museum. As seating is limited, audiences are asked to arrive by 7:30 p.m. when doors open. The fee for each lecture is $2, free to association members. New members may sign up at the door.

NOW PERMANENTLY installed in the Atrium of the Ahmanson Building of Los Angeles County Museum of Art is "Le Cheval Majeur" (The Great Horse) by Raymond Duchamp-Villon. The bronze sculpture, 59-inches high, was given to the museum in October by Mrs. Anna Bing Arnold.

Walter Pach has described the sculpture as "A climactic monument and moment in the formal development of 20th century sculpture."

"The Horse" was done in five stages in addition to at least five studies and many drawings. Duchamp-Villon began his final model in the spring of 1914 before the outbreak of World War I on Aug. 3, and completed the model while on leave from military service in the fall. Before his death in the war, he asked his brothers, Jacques Villon and Marcel Duchamp, to enlarge the work. The first enlargement was done by Villon in 1930-31, the final one under supervision of Duchamp in 1966.

'GREAT HORSE' IN THE ATRIUM

Robert Schaar of Sierra Madre took firsts in three categories — figures, portraits and landscape. Others are Ethel Elliott Von Zell of Torrance, marine; M. Hale Brown of Century City, still life; Wilson Cutler of Manhattan Beach, watercolor and graphics; and Robert Ortleib of Inglewood, sculpture.

The exhibit of 125 works will be on view through March 26 in the Gallery Area of California Federal Plaza, 5670 Wilshire Blvd. Admission is free.

THE LECTURE on "Anatomy of Destruction" by Julius Shulman, scheduled for Friday at Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery, has been postponed until Friday, March 28 at 8 p.m.

Cosby Cancels

A prior commitment has forced Bill Cosby to cancel his concert Saturday at Long Beach Arena. Cosby is taking over the Tonight Show for Johnny Carson while Carson is on vacation. The show emanates from New York City, making it impossible for Cosby to appear here. Refunds for the Cosby show may be obtained at the Arena box office.

Exhibit at Cerritos has broad spectrum

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Cerritos College Art Gallery is having its annual Community Show which consists of 100 works, mostly paintings. These come from juryings of the memberships of the art associations in Artesia, Bellflower, Downey, Lakewood, La Mirada and Lakewood (as well as a dozen "independents"). As a consequence, a broad spectrum of endeavor, largely amateur, is represented.

This year the exhibit has a fresh air. While standard subject matter — still life, life, land and seascape — predominates, the many avenues of approach avoid the conventional and hackneyed in a number of cases.

Through March 28, the serious amateur has both a showing and an opportunity to see how he, or she, stacks up with peers. It is an opportunity, also, for beginning collectors to discover works which will brighten home decor.

AMONG THE several ceramics is a plump, white, matte-glazed weed pot by Judy Yoder of Norwalk. From Downey, Claire Lopez presents a unique stoneware wind chime. Myriad shell-thin pendants hang from two lacy crossbars, and rows of beads—all fired in sawdust so silvery grey tones are achieved.

Michiel R. Daniel's nude exploits a rich, painterly technique in oils and an unusual pink and olive color harmony. Astrid Johnson layers acrylic with the effect of tissue collage in "Lulu" who wears a striped sweater and tam.

WILLELLYN McFARLAND (Downey) calls her rollicking seashore watercolor "Fun Fun," an appropriate title for subject, composition and medium. Also from Downey is Rosalie Sciortino's "Formas Negras Y Morenas," a highly sophisticated tissue collage in beiges, brown and black.

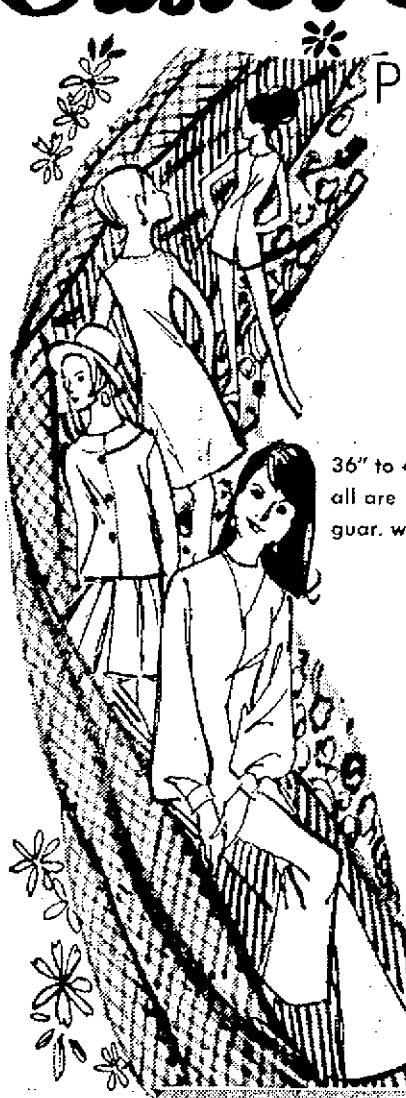

Viewing hours at 11110 Alondra Blvd., Norwalk, are from noon to 4:30 p.m. daily, except Saturdays, and from 6 to 9 p.m., Mondays through Thursdays.

Mahalia is billed in L.B. Arena

Quietly, from the strength of the deep faith that makes her gospel singing a rich art form, Mahalia Jackson has engaged in two great fights —one against racial discrimination, the other a continuing struggle to help her own Black Americans.

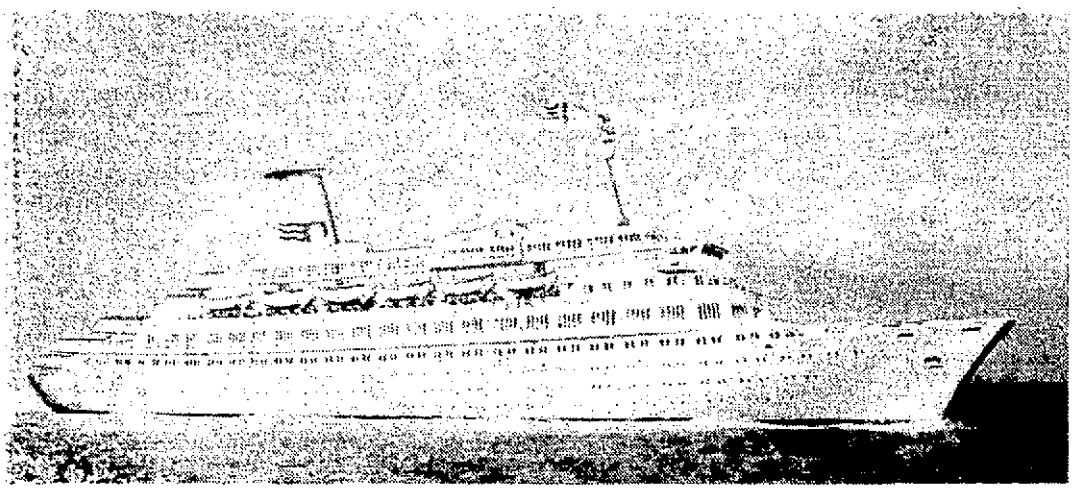

The latter will be her goal next Sunday when she appears in concert at 4 p.m. in Long Beach Arena. Purpose of this gospel music sing-in is to raise funds for a children's nursery at Community Baptist Church of Compton. Rounding out the program will be 150 of the Southland's best gospel singers and church choirs under direction of Gwen Lightner. Many celebrities have promised to attend.

$20 MILLION INVESTMENT

Third Princess Cruises liner to embody futuristic concepts

"PRINCESS III," third cruiseship of Princess Cruises of Los Angeles, now under construction, will be 10 decks tall, comfortably accommodate 670 passengers. She will cost $20 million, embody many new ideas in luxury ship construction. Completion is set for August, 1970.

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

Futuristic but at the same time utilitarian concepts in passenger ship design not even dreamed of a few years ago are being incorporated into a $20 million luxury cruiseliner now under construction in Emden, Germany, for service in the Pacific from Los Angeles.

KRAFT

The 20,500 - ton, 670-passenger "Princess III" — as yet unnamed — will be the third of six ocean-going country clubs to be added to the fast-growing fleet of Princess Cruises, Inc., the Los Angeles-based line whose Princess Italia and Princess Carla are sailing this year throughout the Pacific and Caribbean.

"When we designed the Italia and the Carla, we attempted to come up with a complete resort-type complex," Princess Cruises' president Stanley B. McDonald told me. "When we planned the 'Princess III' — we'll call her that for now — we added still more innovations that will add immensely to the comfort and convenience of our passengers."

* * * *

ONE IMPORTANT departure from traditional passenger ship construction will be that all staterooms with the exception of suites will be similarly designed, and similarly priced, based on their location. "This way," McDonald pointed out, "we think all of our passengers will feel thay are getting the same treatment, that none will feel slighted."

Four-fifths of the staterooms will be outside rooms. All will have custom climate control, private baths, telephones and music.

The "Princess III" will be geared for group travel, such as seminars and conventions, without interference with normal shipboard activities and routine.

Passenger amenities also will include three dance floors, two swimming pools, two whirl pools, numerous lounges, four roomy elevators, library and writing rooms, card room, gymnasium, sauna, beauty and barber shops, dining salons, complete medical facilities, duty-free shops and, importantly, a 350-seat theater-nightclub.

* * * *

UNIQUE IDEAS are being incorporated in arrangement of the deck areas which, McDonald said, would be ample for all activities.

On one deck, for example, a nightclub-theater separates two large public rooms. When entertainment is presented in the public rooms, the walls of the nightclub-theater may be collapsed to form a single room that will comfortably accommodate everyone on the ship. Group seating in the nightclub-theater — still another major departure from the traditional rows of seats — will then conform to the seating in the public rooms.

The main pool area will be protected by a solid glass wall rising two decks in height. On the second deck a verandah-type bar will be available to serve sunbathers and those who enjoy watching the sea and still be out of the wind.

The shopping center or arcade will also occupy two decks, connected by open, spiral staircases.

"We believe," say McDonald, "that the overall effect will be one of deluxe spaciousness."

* * * *

THE MAIN dining salon will accommodate 400 persons at a sitting. Wall murals, appropriately lighted for best effect, will depict the various areas into which the ship sails. Adjoining will be rooms for smaller groups of diners.

Adding to the international tone, the hotel and catering staff will be Italian, the deck and engine officers and crew, Norwegian.

The liner will sail under the Norwegian flag.

The "Princess III" — and again it should be emphasized that this is only a temporary name given her for the sake of clarity — is being built from scratch by its owners, Fearnley & Eger and Oivind Loententzen, both of Oslo, Norway, and chartered to Princess Cruises, a subsidiary of Boise Cascade Corporation. She will be 10 decks tall, 550 feet long and 80 feet in beam. She will be equipped with box side thrusters — still another innovation — which will enable her to reach or push away from her berth without assistance from tugboats.

Powered at 21 knots cruising speed by four diesel engines, the vessel will feature twin variable-pitch propellors, twin rudders, and fin-type stabilizers for smooth sailing. Built to rigid Method One standards, she will be equipped with virtually every available navigational aid.

* * * *

"PRINCESS III," the third of six superliners Princess Cruises plans to have in operation by 1973, is scheduled for completion in August, 1970, and on her maiden voyage is expected to call Nov. 15 of that year at Nassau, the Bahamas, en route to her home port of Los Angeles via the Panama Canal and Acapulco.

McDonald said no specific cruiseship service has yet been set up for her but that under study were far-flung ports in the South Pacific and South America, the latter an area virtually untapped by cruise ships but destined for a tremendous tide of tourism in the next decade.

Princess Cruises engaged New York ship decorators and interior designers who are now traveling on ships throughout the world to study the movement of the passengers, hoping that in so doing they may originate still more fresh ideas to the comfort and convenience of cruising.

"Sure," promises McDonald, "our third vessel will boast an array of entirely new ideas in passenger liner construction, but just wait until you see our Princesses Nos. IV, V and VI. Nothing on land or sea will compare with them as a complete resort complex."

7-DAY EASTER CRUISE DEPARTS L.A. APRIL 4

LOS ANGELES — To accommodate the steadily growing demand for a cruise designed especially as a short Spring break, and for families, Princess Cruises is offering a special seven-day "Easter Cruise" to Mexico aboard the Princess Carla, according to Bruce A. Beatty, general manager.

Rates for the cruise, which leaves Los Angeles on April 4 and which involve only four work days, start at $245. Evening departure time has been scheduled to come well after Good Friday services.

Easter activities will feature traditional hunts for Easter eggs, sunrise ceremonies on Easter Sunday, April 6, and an Easter Bunny Dance. The Princess Carla chefs will also prepare special Easter dishes, in addition to the popular continental cuisine, according to operations manager Phil Sandello. Ports of call will be Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and Acapulco.

Spain shops go duty free

MADRID — The Spanish press has reported that all major airports in Spain dealing with international passenger traffic will open duty free shops and sell articles of domestic manufacture to intransit passengers and those departing for foreign destinations.

The shops will be located within the customs departure areas of all international airports and sell all nationally manufactured articles duty free to departing passengers upon presentation of passports and embarkation cards.

All that's green cannot be jade

Oaxaca, the "city of jade," which is a nine-hour drive from Mexico City, can be reached in half an hour via Mexicana Airlines' newly scheduled Boeing 727 jets which fly there from the Mexican capital. No real jade will be found there, nor anywhere in Mexico. Oaxaca gets its name from the green stone blocks with which many of its colonial buildings were constructed, including the Cathedral, Museum and State University.

The city is the site of a major festival on March 21, birth date of its most famous son, Benito Juarez, president of Mexico and nemesis of the French-backed Emperor Maximilian in the 1860s.

Canoes race April 18-19 at Kernville

KERNVILLE — The most thrilling spectator event for visitors in the southern Sierra Nevada Mountains this year is going to be the 5th annual Whitewater Races on rapids of the Kern River. Both men and women paddlers in gaily decorated canoes and kayaks will compete April 18 and 19 for a chance at the world championships in France this summer.

The Kern rises on flanks of Mt. Whitney, highest U.S. mountain south of Alaska, and flows in steep rapids through the Sierra to Kern Valley where it is backed up behind a dam to form the year-around fishing waters of Lake Isabella not far from Los Angeles and Bakersfield in the San Joaquin Valley.

Because of heavy rains, the race is going to be longer and more hazardous — high waters changed the river's course and crested more natural obstacles.

* * * *

THERE ARE two kinds of races. The downriver is a straight race against time. The Slalom is a hazardous forward and reverse course through "gates" around boulders and through deep and shallow waters. Women as well as men compete in this. So far, there has never been a serious accident or injury.

Some 250 paddlers and related personnel will participate. Pacific Coast champions will compete. Thomas W. Johnson, commodore of the American Canoe Association, moved to Kernville because of the fine waters and is now training Boy Scouts for the 1972 Olympic Games.

Climax of the affair is the "Hooligan race" in which "any one on anything that floats" makes the downriver run "just for fun."

Galaxy of bridges add beauty to Paris

If you have ever thrilled to the soaring grandeur of a bridge . . . admired the peaceful flow of a great river . . . there's one place on earth most likely to delight you. It is Paris, where more than 30 bridges span the Seine. Some have retained their usefulness and civic beauty — from oxcart to taxi-cab traffic — for more than 450 years, according to Air France.

Cigar maker to President

Of the many fiestas in Mexico, only five are national days of rest — or of double pay for employes. One, on March 21, marks the birth date of Benito Juarez, president of Mexico and leader of the nation's fight for freedom against Emperor Maximilian's French army (1864-67).

Juarez played a lesser role as an exile when he worked in a New Orleans cigar factory. On returning to Mexico, Juarez landed at the port of Acapulco and rushed on a horseback trip of more than a week to Mexico City. The trip now takes 30 minutes by Mexicana Airlines' Jet.

Danes open hall of Viking ships

In 1962, five Viking ships were found on the bottom of the Fjord of Roskilde, 28 miles west of Copenhagen. After an extensive archeological accomplishment these 1,000-year-old ships have been brought to the surface and are being restored in a Vikingship Hall at Roskilde which will open to the public in May 1969.

Fares to South Seas cut 20 per cent on 3 cruises

Matson Lines has scheduled three 42-day cruises from the West Coast to the South Pacific this Spring which offer a 20 per cent cut in fares.

Gracious living aboard the twin luxury liners SS Monterey and SS Mariposa as they cruise through the South Seas will be unchanged — only the cost is reduced.

The special rates are based on a 20 per cent reduction on the normal each-way Matson fare. Savings range from $177.50 to $642.50 per person, depending on the accommodation selected.

Sailings from Los Angeles will be: March 31 (SS Monterey); April 25 (SS Mariposa); and June 9 (SS Mariposa).

The lines will call at Bora Bora, Tahiti, Rarotonga, Auckland, Sydney, Suva, Niuafo'ou, Pago Pago and Honolulu before returning to the West Coast.

Fares for the spring cruises commence at $1,417.50 per person.

Giant live oak has seven large trunks

The largest live oak in Louisiana is the Doby Seven Sisters Oak at Mandeville. This huge champion tree, with seven large trunks growing from one main base, measures 37 feet, one inch in circumference, and is one of many large oaks throughout the state, according to the Louisiana Tourist Commission.

Play is cause of trouble

There is no particularly scientific way to bid the North - South cards and there is no really outstanding contract. However, the chances are that almost any road would lead to the final contract of six hearts.

So you get there and West opens the eight of clubs. You look over dummy and count 11 sure tricks.

One way to get 12 is to finesse dummy's queen of clubs right away. Against some players that might be the winner. We know players who like to make declarer decide at trick one.

That type would lead from the king of clubs to force an immediate decision. On the other hand the eight does look like a short suit lead and you would do well to rise with dummy's ace of clubs.

You do this and are in dummy for the first and last time. You can try the trump finesse. If it works you can lay down the ace next and hope to drop the king. Failing that you give the defense a trump trick, get back on lead and run all your red cards. Maybe the man with the king of spades will unguard it.

There is little chance for this to happen. Neither opponent has anything else to hold except the king of clubs and somehow or other a club count will be available.

This leaves the immediate spade finesse at your disposal and you should try it. It is an even money chance and much better from a mathematical standpoint than the trump play. In addition, you can lose the spade finesse and still make your contract.

You only miss five trumps. Therefore when you lay down your ace you have better than a five per cent chance of picking up the king.

Spring posies herald Britain's 'fun season'

THE MOST EVENTFUL SUMMER in Britain's history is coming up and, as Spring begins, daffodils spread from Scilly Islands to London. Here Compton Wynyates, one of England's lovely country houses, wears a tiara of blossoms. (British Travel Association photo)

LONDON — This is a beautiful Spring in Britain, like all British springs — cool — (not cold) — green, blossom laden, and months long. It's also an eventful spring, and one leading to an even more eventful summer.

The biggest event promised for this year is the Royal Investiture July 1. Prince Charles will be welcomed with pomp and display to Caernarvon Castle in North Wales and proclaimed 20th Prince of Wales. About 100,000 people are expected to gather for the ceremony.

An unusual tour offering tickets to the Investiture procession is being offered by a London tour operator. It will include seven days in a private home, Welsh singing, receptions and excursions, first class rail travel from London, all for $300 from Evan Evans tours, 72-73 Russell Square, London. Individual tickets to the Investiture may be bought from the Wales Tourist Board, 7 Park Place, Cardiff, Wales, CF 1 3 U.J., price $12.50, $25.20.

* * * *

THERE ARE other happenings on the griddle. For instance, regular giant hovercraft service to France will begin April 2 from the world's first hoverport at Pegwell Bay, Southeast of London, to Calais. A company named Hoverlloyd will join British Rail's service from Dover to Boulogne and expects to carry a million passengers this year and thousands of cars. By giant Hovercraft the trip only takes 30 to 40 minutes.

Getting into London will be a lot cheaper if you go by cab. A new set rate of $6 to $7 has been legislated from Heathrow Airport. The bus fare is still $1.

On April 12 a beacon-fire and exhibition at Minehead upon the Bristol Channel will signal the 100th anniversary of "Lorna Doone," the famous novel. Exhibitions, readings, balls will follow during the summer at Lynton, Porlock, Dulverton, Tiverton and Oare.

In the Thames Valley there have always been exciting out-of-the-way things to dream of doing but few practical ways for doing them. Now, a day's stage-coaching along the Thames, an inn's tour (any length) a tour of houses belonging to the Churchills, Washingtons, the Duke of Bedford, a hunting or racing tour; tours of the hills of Berkshire by pony, or fishing and Thames River cruises can all be arranged for as little as $10 a day by the Thames Valley Tourist Assn., High Street, Dorchester-on-Thames.

A TOUR this year includes the famous Glyndebourne Festival (May 25-Aug. 10). It will feature Mozart's "Entfuhrung Aus Dem Serail," Verdi's "Macbeth," and Tchaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin." Evan-Evans Tours, (address above) will offer not only tours of the Glyndebourne Festival, but of the Chichester Festival, (June-September) and of Benjamin Britten's Aldeburgh Festival June 7-29. The latter like Glyndebourne is a traditionally tough-ticket.

A 14-day tour of southwest England offering a knighthood (conferred at King Arthur's birthplace above the rocks of the Cornish sea-coast) and a square foot of Dorset soil, with deed, is also on tap. The bus tour goes to Bath, Plymouth, Thomas Hardy's Dorset, and St. Michael's Mount in Cornwall. The price is $264. From Frames Tours, 114 E. 32nd St., New York City, N.Y. 10016.

On May 29 will come the first departure of a "Great Writer's Tour" planned by the distinguished American poet and anthologist Louis Untermeyer. It will visit the Yeats country in Ireland, then Scottish landmarks associated with Stevenson, Scott, and Robert Burns. Into England it will go to the Lake District for Wordsworth and Coleridge memories, to Haworth for the Brontes (in Yorkshire), then on to London. There the shades of Dickens, the Brownings and Keats will be courted. Nearby Milton's, Blake's, Kipling's houses will be visited before coming to Canterbury and Chaucer and Becket. Hardy's home in Dorset and Trollope's haunts in Salisbury will be visited. A second departure will take place July 29. This is from Vision Travel, 29 E. 61st St., New York City, 10021, which also runs a ghost tour of England and Europe.

ON JUNE 20 the Triennial Festival of the York Mystery plays begins in the North of England. This 14th century cycle of charming and naive religious plays is performed from June 20 through July 13 as the centerpiece of a major festival. The plays are done on the greensward of ruined St. Mary's Abbey. A few will be presented in the streets or on the banks of the River Ouse as they were done originally. Other events will be symphony and choral concerts, ballet, opera, plays and popular music and comedy entertainments.

In connection with the Investiture of Prince Charles and his four-day progress about Wales following the ceremony, there are several tours besides those already mentioned. For instance, there is a "Castles of Wales" tour by car, lasting six days, for $214; a seven-day "Royal Wales" tour at $240. Both include a medieval banquet at Ruthin Castle in North Wales. The Castle Tour is available from Frames Tours, 114 E. 32nd St., New York City, and the "Royal Wales Tour" from Evan-Evans, London.

A colorful and unusual event coming in July is the first ever running of the Round-Britain power boat race. It will start at Portsmouth July 21. The course will be 1,700 miles, round Land's End, up the Irish sea, and through St. George's Channel. Stages are to be 210 miles per day. The boats will cross the waist of Scotland through the Caledonian Canal and return by the North Sea. Seven countries have already registered entries.

These are only a few samples. There are many more festivals, unusual tours, and out-of-the-way events coming up in Britain's "fun" summer. For further information, write British Travel, 680 Fifth Ave., New York City, N.Y. 10019.

This may be the greatest Latin American cruise yet.

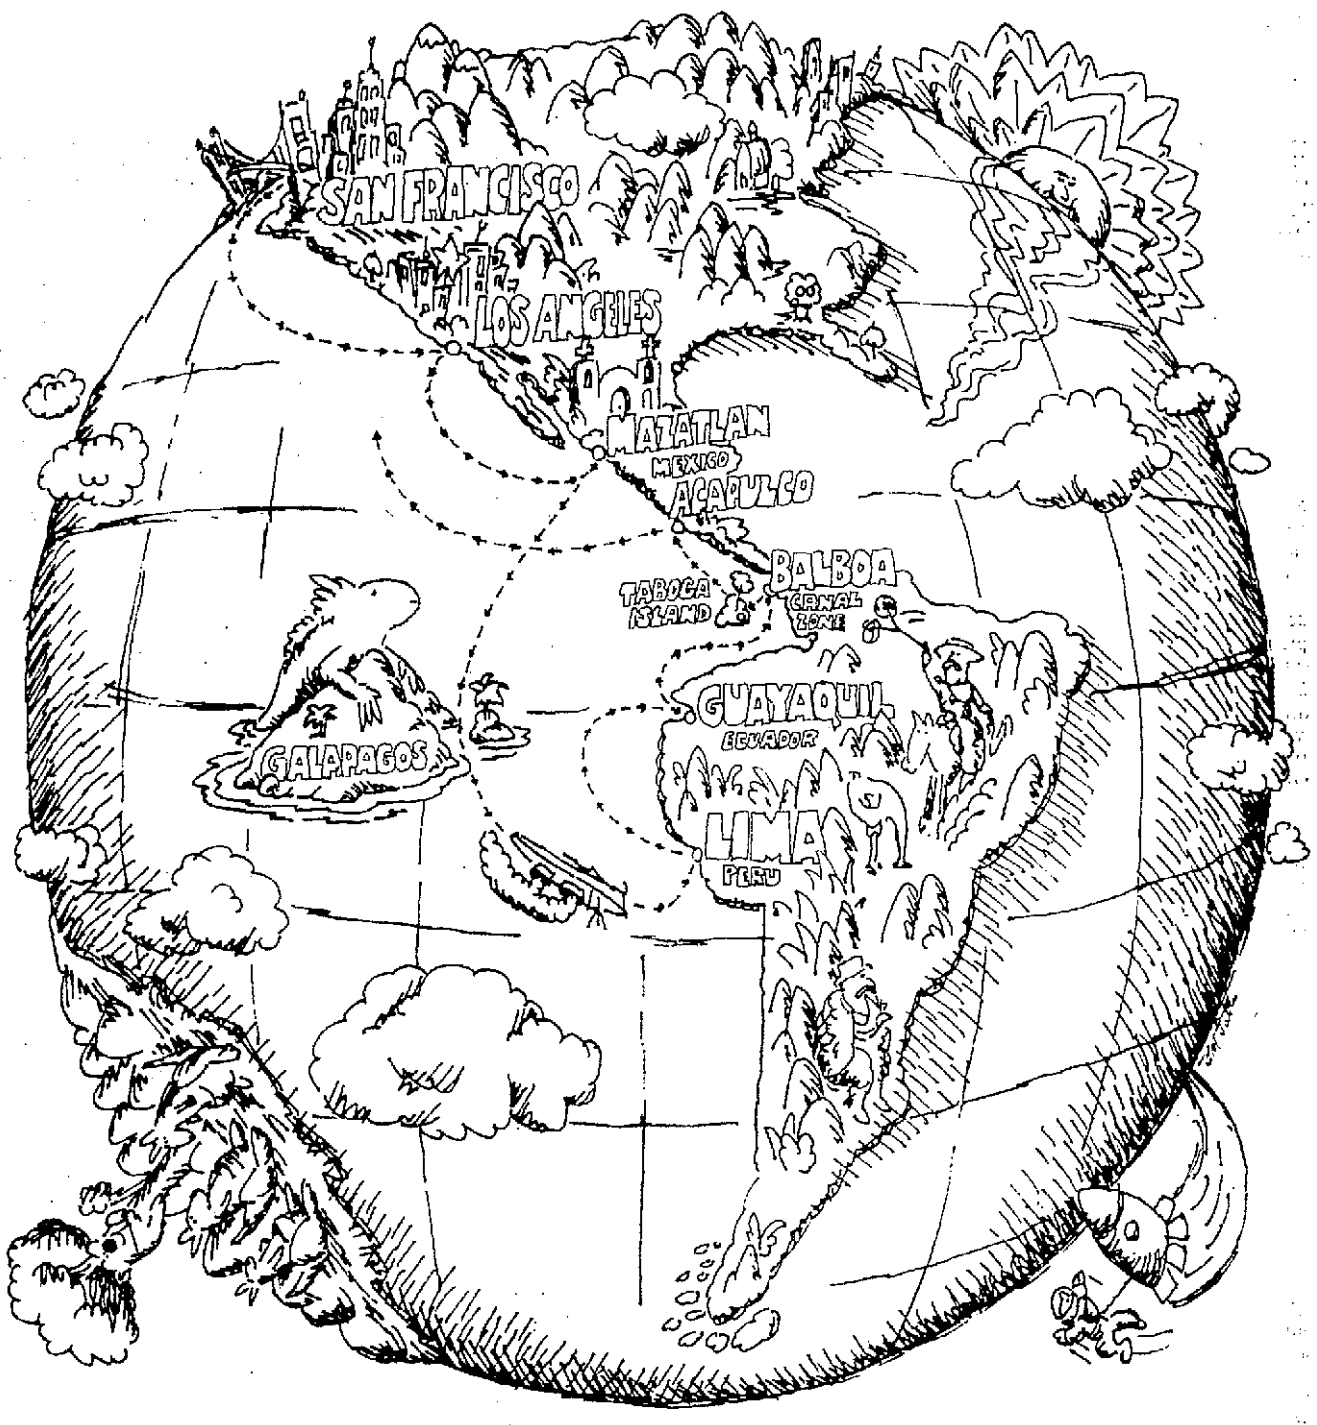

(At least, that's the way we've got it mapped out.)

And it even includes the Galapagos Islands. Certainly no ordinary Latin American cruise does that.
The Galapagos! Land of huge tortoises. Land of beautiful iguanas. Land of the Galapagos finches—the birds that provided the key to Darwin's theory of evolution.
Plus Lima, Guayaquil, Acapulco, Mazatlan, Taboga Island, Balboa. Lands of excitement, laughter and oles.
Plus a trip through the Panama Canal.
Plus Matson's SS Monterey, and all that connotes: Great food. Great entertainment. Great service.
All those things, plus several shore events to boot.
And fares begin at just $1180.
Come along. We're sailing from California on May 17. For more information and reservations, just contact your Travel Agent. Or call Paul Thompson, our cruise consultant, at 626-0501

Third Princess Cruises liner to embody futuristic concepts

"PRINCESS III," third cruiseship of Princess Cruises of Los Angeles, now under construction, will be 10 decks tall, comfortably accommodate 670 passengers. She will cost $20 million, embody many new ideas in luxury ship construction. Completion is set for August, 1970.

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

KRAFT

Futuristic but at the same time utilitarian concepts in passenger ship design not even dreamed of a few years ago are being incorporated into a $20 million luxury cruiseliner now under construction in Emden, Germany, for service in the Pacific from Los Angeles.

The 20,500 - ton, 670-passenger "Princess III" — as yet unnamed — will be the third of six ocean-going country clubs to be added to the fast-growing fleet of Princess Cruises, Inc., the Los Angeles-based line whose Princess Italia and Princess Carla are sailing this year throughout the Pacific and Caribbean.

"When we designed the Italia and the Carla, we attempted to come up with a complete resort-type complex," Princess Cruises' president Stanley B. McDonald told me. "When we planned the 'Princess III' — we'll call her that for now — we added still more innovations that will add immensely to the comfort and convenience of our passengers."

* * * *

ONE IMPORTANT departure from traditional passenger ship construction will be that all staterooms with the exception of suites will be similarly designed, and similarly priced, based on their location. "This way," McDonald pointed out, "we think all of our passengers will feel thay are getting the same treatment, that none will feel slighted."

Four-fifths of the staterooms will be outside rooms. All will have custom climate control, private baths, telephones and music.

The "Princess III" will be geared for group travel, such as seminars and conventions, without interference with normal shipboard activities and routine.

Passenger amenities also will include three dance floors, two swimming pools, two whirl pools, numerous lounges, four roomy elevators, library and writing rooms, card room, gymnasium, sauna, beauty and barber shops, dining salons, complete medical facilities, duty-free shops and, importantly, a 350-seat theater-nightclub.

* * * *

UNIQUE IDEAS are being incorporated in arrangement of the deck areas which, McDonald said, would be ample for all activities.

On one deck, for example, a nightclub-theater separates two large public rooms. When entertainment is presented in the public rooms, the walls of the nightclub-theater may be collapsed to form a single room that will comfortably accommodate everyone on the ship. Group seating in the nightclub-theater — still another major departure from the traditional rows of seats — will then conform to the seating in the public rooms.

The main pool area will be protected by a solid glass wall rising two decks in height. On the second deck a verandah-type bar will be available to serve sunbathers and those who enjoy watching the sea and still be out of the wind.

The shopping center or arcade will also occupy two decks, connected by open, spiral staircases.

"We believe," say McDonald, "that the overall effect will be one of deluxe spaciousness."

* * * *

THE MAIN dining salon will accommodate 400 persons at a sitting. Wall murals, appropriately lighted for best effect, will depict the various areas into which the ship sails. Adjoining will be rooms for smaller groups of diners.

Adding to the international tone, the hotel and catering staff will be Italian, the deck and engine officers and crew, Norwegian.

The liner will sail under the Norwegian flag.

The "Princess III" — and again it should be emphasized that this is only a temporary name given her for the sake of clarity — is being built from scratch by its owners, Fearnley & Eger and Oivind Loententzen, both of Oslo, Norway, and chartered to Princess Cruises, a subsidiary of Boise Cascade Corporation. She will be 10 decks tall, 550 feet long and 80 feet in beam. She will be equipped with box side thrusters — still another innovation — which will enable her to reach or push away from her berth without assistance from tugboats.

Powered at 21 knots cruising speed by four diesel engines, the vessel will feature twin variable-pitch propellors, twin rudders, and fin-type stabilizers for smooth sailing. Built to rigid Method One standards, she will be equipped with virtually every available navigational aid.

* * * *

"PRINCESS III," the third of six superliners Princess Cruises plans to have in operation by 1973, is scheduled for completion in August, 1970, and on her maiden voyage is expected to call Nov. 15 of that year at Nassau, the Bahamas, en route to her home port of Los Angeles via the Panama Canal and Acapulco.

McDonald said no specific cruiseship service has yet been set up for her but that under study were far-flung ports in the South Pacific and South America, the latter an area virtually untapped by cruise ships but destined for a tremendous tide of tourism in the next decade.

Princess Cruises engaged New York ship decorators and interior designers who are now traveling on ships throughout the world to study the movement of the passengers, hoping that in so doing they may originate still more fresh ideas to the comfort and convenience of cruising.

"Sure," promises McDonald, "our third vessel will boast an array of entirely new ideas in passenger liner construction, but just wait until you see our 'Princesses Nos. IV, V and VI. Nothing on land or sea will compare with them as a complete resort complex."

7-DAY EASTER CRUISE DEPARTS L.A. APRIL 4

LOS ANGELES — To accommodate the steadily growing demand for a cruise designed especially as a short Spring break, and for families, Princess Cruises is offering a special seven-day "Easter Cruise" to Mexico aboard the Princess Carla, according to Bruce A. Beatty, general manager.

Rates for the cruise, which leaves Los Angeles on April 4 and which involve only four work days, start at $245. Evening departure time has been scheduled to come well after Good Friday services.

Easter activities will feature traditional hunts for Easter eggs, sunrise ceremonies on Easter Sunday, April 6, and an Easter Bunny Dance. The Princess Carla chefs will also prepare special Easter dishes, in addition to the popular continental cuisine, according to operations manager Phil Sandello. Ports of call will be Puerto Vallarta, Mazatlan and Acapulco.

Spain shops go duty free

MADRID — The Spanish press has reported that all major airports in Spain dealing with international passenger traffic will open duty free shops and sell articles of domestic manufacture to intransit passengers and those departing for foreign destinations.

The shops will be located within the customs departure areas of all international airports and sell all nationally manufactured articles duty free to departing passengers upon presentation of passports and embarkation cards.

All that's green cannot be jade

Oaxaca, the "city of jade," which is a nine-hour drive from Mexico City, can be reached in half an hour via Mexicana Airlines' newly scheduled Boeing 727 jets which fly there from the Mexican capital. No real jade will be found there, nor anywhere in Mexico. Oaxaca gets its name from the green stone blocks with which many of its colonial buildings were constructed, including the Cathedral, Museum and State University.

The city is the site of a major festival on March 21, birth date of its most famous son, Benito Juarez, president of Mexico and nemesis of the French-backed Emperor Maximilian in the 1860s.

Travel and RESORTS

Canoes race April 18-19 at Kernville

KERNVILLE — The most thrilling spectator event for visitors in the southern Sierra Nevada Mountains this year is going to be the 5th annual Whitewater Races on rapids of the Kern River. Both men and women paddlers in gaily decorated canoes and kayaks will compete April 18 and 19 for a chance at the world championships in France this summer.

The Kern rises on flanks of Mt. Whitney, highest U.S. mountain south of Alaska, and flows in steep rapids through the Sierra to Kern Valley where it is backed up behind a dam to form the year-around fishing waters of Lake Isabella not far from Los Angeles and Bakersfield in the San Joaquin Valley.

Because of heavy rains, the race is going to be longer and more hazardous — high waters changed the river's course and crested more natural obstacles.

* * * *

THERE ARE two kinds of races. The downriver is a straight race against time. The Slalom is a hazardous forward and reverse course through "gates" around boulders and through deep and shallow waters. Women as well as men compete in this. So far, there has never been a serious accident or injury.

Some 250 paddlers and related personnel will participate. Pacific Coast champions will compete. Thomas W. Johnson, commodore of the American Canoe Association, moved to Kernville because of the fine waters and is now training Boy Scouts for the 1972 Olympic Games.

Climax of the affair is the "Hooligan race" in which "any one on anything that floats" makes the downriver run "just for fun."

Galaxy of bridges add beauty to Paris

If you have ever thrilled to the soaring grandeur of a bridge . . . admired the peaceful flow of a great river . . . there's one place on earth most likely to delight you. It is Paris, where more than 30 bridges span the Seine. Some have retained their usefulness and civic beauty — from oxcart to taxi-cab traffic — for more than 450 years, according to Air France.

Cigar maker to President

Of the many fiestas in Mexico, only five are national days of rest — or of double pay for employes. One, on March 21, marks the birth date of Benito Juarez, president of Mexico and leader of the nation's fight for freedom against Emperor Maximiljan's French army (1864-67).

Juarez played a lesser role as an exile when he worked in a New Orleans cigar factory. On returning to Mexico, Juarez landed at the port of Acapulco and rushed on a horseback trip of more than a week to Mexico City. The trip now takes 30 minutes by Mexicana Airlines' Jet.

Danes open hall of Viking ships

In 1962, five Viking ships were found on the bottom of the Fjord of Roskilde, 28 miles west of Copenhagen. After an extensive archeological accomplishment these 1,000-year-old ships have been brought to the surface and are being restored in a Vikingship Hall at Roskilde which will open to the public in May 1969.

Travel and RESORTS

SOME OF THE WEST'S MOST RUGGED COUNTRY, such as the Needles area of Canyonlands National Park, Utah, will be explored on organized wilderness trips during the coming summer. Above, the weirdly eroded minarets, buttes and mesas in Canyonland.

Expand wilderness trips

WASHINGTON — Forty-five wilderness trips ranging from the Kenai Peninsula in Alaska to the Gila Wilderness in New Mexico and the Boundary Waters Canoe Area in Minnesota are offered to the public this year by The Wilderness Society, a private citizen organization which has its national headquarters here.

These popular expeditions conducted in all seasons provide opportunities to explore on horseback, foot, boat, canoe, and skis many of the nation's most beautiful areas of wilderness. The trips, sponsored as a not-for-profit educational program of the Society, are designed to acquaint people with wilderness and how it can properly be used.

Free folders, reservation forms, and details regarding the greatly expanded trip series may be obtained from The Wilderness Society, Western Regional Office, 5850 E. Jewell Ave., Denver, Colo. 80222. Information about the Society's conservation programs, its publications, and how to become a member is available upon request from its headquarters office, 729 15th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

* * * *

EXPERIENCED trip directors and physicians accompany the "A Way to the Wilderness" expeditions, which are conducted by some of the best guides and outfitters in the United States, according to the Society. Outfitters provide excellent meals and all camping equipment. Guests supply only their own clothing and personal items. The adventure-filled trips offer superb opportunities for sightseeing, nature study, and healthful outdoor recreation in pristine wild country. Many of the areas provide outstanding fishing. Frequent layover days enable guests to participate in interesting side trips or enjoy wilderness camping. Family groups as well as individual guests are invited to participate in the outings.

The spring outdoor adventures begin with a horseback ride, April 1-7, in the fabled Superstition Wilderness east of Phoenix, Ariz. Scheduled for the peak of the desert wildflower season, the ride takes the guests through the land of the legendary Lost Dutchman mine.

* * * *

HELLS CANYON and the Middle Snake River along the Oregon-Idaho border provide the primitive settings for a ride May 5-15. The outing, in America's deepest gorge through which thunders the whitewater of the Snake, offers visits to high country wilderness in both states.

A horseback holiday in the Pecos Wilderness, north of Santa Fe, N.M., June 21-30, is timed to enjoy the natural beauty of the high country in the spring.

Walking trips with packstock carrying all the equipment have proved very popular, according to the Society. The first walking trip is in the Escalante Canyon wilderness of Utah, April 12-20. Desert wildflowers, natural arches, Indian ruins, and the incomparable natural beauty of colorful canyons are among the attractions on this outing.

Costs for the 10 to 14-day horseback trips range from $190 to $335. The walking trips are priced from $170 to $220. The backpacking expeditions cost from $170 to $190. The price of the waterway trips range from $175 to $310, the Tundra Trek is priced at $360, and the ski tours cost $175.

Small groups on each trip assure a realistic experience in wilderness living, according to the Society. A maximum of 10 guests is planned for each of the backpacking trips, and a limit of 15 to 18 participants is placed on each of the other outings. Because of the limited number of openings on each expedition, it is important that reservations be made early, the Society pointed out.

Subsidence may doom ancient city of Venice

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eugenio Miozzi believes the ancient city of Venice, one of man's finest works, will sink beneath the encompassing sea some 80 years hence unless something is done soon to save it.

In a recent UPI dispatch Miozzi, a Venetian engineer, was quoted as forecasting that by 2048 A.D. the city will have sunk 31.4 inches below its present level.

And, said Miozzi, "that will be the end."

Venice's threatened doom dramatizes something that is going on in many other places, though with possibly less fateful and unhappy consequences.

Scientists of the U. S. Geological Survey refer to is as "sinkage" or "subsidence." In this country subsidence has occurred when surface-dwelling man has mined the earth beneath him for coal, oil, or water, especially water.

* * * *

SOME Eastern coal towns have suffered surface damage to homes and other buildings when mined out subterranean caverns have collapsed.

The most recently publicized sinkage cases have resulted, however, from man's increasing thirst.

But what about Venice, the city of canals and the Rialto and palaces and splendid churches, of great painters — Titian, Tintoretto, Giorgione, Tiepolo, Canaletto; of pigeons and St. Marks, of gondoliers and amorous intrigue? Can it be saved?

Eugenio Miozzi hopes so. He has consulted with Dr. Joseph P. Poland of the Geological Survey and has come up with some ideas:

Close all artesian wells in the area, stop drilling for gas in the Adriatic, pump water back into the depleted depths to restore the underground pressures which support the city.

Otherwise — farewell to the shimmering city which for centuries has been revered by mankind as "the Queen of the Seas."

Twenty nights in Europe, car, discounts for $70

Trans World Airlines announces a "Great Get-Away Plan" which offers travel from eight major European cities, guesthouse accommodations, auto rental with free mileage and an exclusive discount card for one free night's lodging and 10 per cent discount for other nights at any one of 123 motor hotels. Total price: $70.

Here's how it works:

You prepay $70 for the land tour services for the entire stay abroad plus the airline's jet fare to Frankfurt, Zurich, Milan, Rome or Athens. Weekend departure dates from New York are set from March through October.

The $70 charge includes a Volkswagen, Fiat or similar rental car and 620 free miles (fewer in Greece) or equivalent rail transportation, 20 nights in a guesthouse or inn, airport transfers upon arrival and departure, six travelers' guides prepared by the carrier's travel advisor Mary Gordon, the discount card and a motoring atlas.

The atlas contains maps of all main roads, strip maps for daily tour planning and additional discount coupons for sightseeing and nightclub tours.

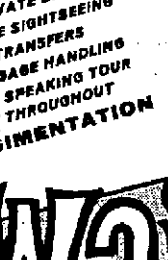

More than two persons sharing a car receive additional mileage allowances.

Air France to build huge hotel in Paris

Citing a need for supplying additional rooms to accommodate the greater influx of passengers expected in the 1970s, Air France has announced plans to enter the hotel field. The airline's first facility, scheduled for completion in 1975, will be a 950-room complex in the Paris residential suburb of Neuilly.

Set sail with Matson May 17 for South America and the incredible Galapagos Islands. Olé!

There'll be all the wonderful fun of every Matson cruise but this time with a little Latin flavor. Parties. Native entertainment. Great food. A trip through the Panama Canal. Laughter. Congeniality. Olés. And exotic ports of call: Mazatlan, Acapulco, Lima, Guayaquil, Balboa, Taboga Island. What makes this cruise like no other cruise ever is the visit to the Galapagos. The stop there will be brief, but unforgettable. You'll have a rare opportunity to see the fantastic wildlife of these islands—including the birds which provided the key to Darwin's theory of evolution: the Galapagos finches. The SS Monterey sails from San Francisco May 17 and Los Angeles May 18. Fares begin at $1,180, including many special events compliments of Matson. Call or see.

Spring posies herald Britain's 'fun season'

THE MOST EVENTFUL SUMMER in Britain's history is coming up and, as Spring begins, daffodils spread from Scilly Islands to London. Here Compton Wynyates, one of England's lovely country houses, wears a tiara of blossoms. (British Travel Association photo)

LONDON — This is a beautiful Spring in Britain, like all British springs — cool — (not cold) — green, blossom laden, and months long. It's also an eventful spring, and one leading to an even more eventful summer.

The biggest event promised for this year is the Royal Investiture July 1. Prince Charles will be welcomed with pomp and display to Caernarvon Castle in North Wales and proclaimed 20th Prince of Wales. About 100,000 people are expected to gather for the ceremony.

An unusual tour offering tickets to the Investiture procession is being offered by a London tour operator. It will include seven days in a private home, Welsh singing, receptions and excursions, first class rail travel from London, all for $300 from Evan Evans tours, 72-73 Russell Square, London. Individual tickets to the Investiture may be bought from the Wales Tourist Board, 7 Park Place, Cardiff, Wales, CF 1 3 U.J., price $12.50, $25.20.

* * * *

THERE ARE other happenings on the griddle. For instance, regular giant hovercraft service to France will begin April 2 from the world's first hoverport at Pegwell Bay, Southeast of London, to Calais. A company named Hoverlloyd will join British Rail's service from Dover to Boulogne and expects to carry a million passengers this year and thousands of cars. By giant Hovercraft the trip only takes 30 to 40 minutes.

Getting into London will be a lot cheaper if you go by cab. A new set rate of $6 to $7 has been legislated from Heathrow Airport. The bus fare is still $1.

On April 12 a beacon-fire and exhibition at Minehead upon the Bristol Channel will signal the 100th anniversary of "Lorna Doone," the famous novel. Exhibitions, readings, balls will follow during the summer at Lynton, Porlock, Dulverton, Tiverton and Oare.

In the Thames Valley there have always been exciting out-of-the-way things to dream of doing but few practical ways for doing them. Now, a day's stage-coaching along the Thames, an inn's tour (any length) a tour of houses belonging to the Churchills, Washingtons, the Duke of Bedford; a hunting or racing tour; tours of the hills of Berkshire by pony, or fishing and Thames River cruises can all be arranged for as little as $10 a day by the Thames Valley Tourist Assn., High Street, Dorchester-on-Thames.

A TOUR this year includes the famous Glyndebourne Festival (May 25-Aug. 10). It will feature Mozart's "Entfuhrung Aus Dem Serail," Verdi's "Macbeth," and Tchaikowsky's "Eugen Onegin." Evan-Evans Tours, (address above) will offer not only tours of the Glyndebourne Festival, but of the Chichester Festival, (June-September) and of Benjamin Britten's Aldeburgh Festival June 7-29. The latter like Glyndebourne is a traditionally tough-ticket.

A 14-day tour of southwest England offering a knighthood (conferred at King Arthur's birthplace above the rocks of the Cornish sea-coast) and a square foot of Dorset soil, with deed, is also on tap. The bus tour goes to Bath, Plymouth, Thomas Hardy's Dorset, and St. Michael's Mount in Cornwall. The price is $264. From Frames Tours, 114 E. 32nd St., New York City, N.Y. 10016.

On May 29 will come the first departure of a "Great Writer's Tour" planned by the distinguished American poet and anthologist Louis Untermeyer. It will visit the Yeats country in Ireland, then Scottish landmarks assciated with Stevenson, Scott, and Robert Burns. Into England it will go to the Lake District for Wordsworth and Coleridge memories, to Haworth for the Brontes (in Yorkshire), then on to London. There the shades of Dickens, the Brownings and Keats will be courted. Nearby Milton's, Blake's, Kipling's houses will be visited before coming to Canterbury and Chaucer and Becket, Hardy's home in Dorset and Trollope's haunts in Salisbury will be visited. A second departure will take place July 29. This is from Vision Travel, 29 E. 61st St., New York City, 10021, which also runs a ghost tour of England and Europe.

* * * *

ON JUNE 20 the Triennial Festival of the York Mystery plays begins in the North of England. This 14th century cycle of charming and naive religious plays is performed from June 20 through July 13 as the centerpiece of a major festival. The plays are done on the greensward of ruined St. Mary's Abbey. A few will be presented in the streets or on the banks of the River Ouse as they were done originally. Other events will be symphony and choral concerts, ballet, opera, plays and popular music and comedy entertainments.

In connection with the Investiture of Prince Charles and his four-day progress about Wales following the ceremony, there are several tours besides those already mentioned. For instance, there is a "Castles of Wales" tour by car, lasting six days, for $214; a seven-day "Royal Wales" tour at $240. Both include a medieval banquet at Ruthin Castle in North Wales. The Castle Tour is available from Frames Tours, 114 E. 32nd St., New York City, and the "Royal Wales' Tour" from Evan-Evans, London.

A colorful and unusual event coming in July is the first ever running of the Round-Britain power boat race. It will start at Portsmouth July 21. The course will be 1,700 miles, round Land's End, up the Irish sea, and through St. George's Channel. Stages are to be 210 miles per day. The boats will cross the waist of Scotland through the Caledonian Canal and return by the North Sea. Seven countries have already registered entries.

These are only a few samples. There are many more festivals, unusual tours, and out-of-the-way events coming up in Britain's "fun" summer. For further information, write British Travel, 680 Fifth Ave., New York City, N.Y. 10019.

This may be the greatest Latin American cruise yet.

(At least, that's the way we've got it mapped out.)

And it even includes the Galapagos Islands. Certainly no ordinary Latin American cruise does that.

The Galapagos! Land of huge tortoises. Land of beautiful iguanas. Land of the Galapagos finches—the birds that provided the key to Darwin's theory of evolution.

Plus Lima, Guayaquil, Acapulco, Mazatlan, Taboga Island, Balboa. Lands of excitement, laughter and oles.

Plus a trip through the Panama Canal.

Plus Matson's SS Monterey, and all that connotes: Great food. Great entertainment. Great service.

All those things, plus several shore events to boot.

And fares begin at just $1180.

Come along. We're sailing from California on May 17. For more information and reservations, just contact your Travel Agent. Or call Paul Thompson, our cruise consultant, at 626-0501

STAN DELAPLANE

Those Indian girls down in Paraguay!

By STAN DELAPLANE

ASUNCION, Paraguay — This pocket-size capital has only 300,000 people. Across the river, Indian girls come down to the river to wash clothes. (They're topless — I mean National Geographically, not Playboyish.)

Asuncion is a gas stop on Braniff's round-South American run, and we got off for a walkabout of two days. It's hot as a sheriff's pistol now in the South American Summer-going-on-fall. But the Guarani Hotel is air-conditioned. Food not bad — the restaurants set up tables in the street at night to catch the breeze.

And in the morning, across the river, you can see ostriches come from the wild back country to drink.

* * * *

"Whom do you tip checking out of hotel in Europe? And how do you know?"

JUST ABOUT everybody in sight. You will know because they'll be there making it clear. (Especially true in France, Italy, Spain.) When you call down to get your bags picked up, the operator passes the word.

Immediately the room is full of people who expect to be tipped. The maid hustles through the drawers. The room waiter shows up. The night porter is around.

Now, there's already 15 per cent service charge on your bill downstairs. But these people expect an extra expression of your gratitude. So make it the local equivalent of the quarter tip — one each day for each person. Example: five days in France, five francs for each person.

It will fry you to tip the night porter if you know he never touched the shoes you left outside your door each night. (It's one of my hangups to put a fingerprint of toothpowder on the back of one shoe. See if it's been brushed off in the morning.) If you want to stiff this goof-off, give him the tip in American coins. He can't change it anywhere except at the airport.

"What would you suggest for hotels in a driving trip around England? We have sent for the Trust Houses catalog."

THE TRUST Houses are a good idea — mostly modernized old coaching inns. Apparently management has no quality control. They must leave it to each local manager for I've been in some that were delightful and couple I'd rate strictly Skid Row.

With Trust Houses, I wouldn't move in until the clerk showed me the room first. In fact, I'd case the whole place — dining room, too. Trust Houses can be booked now in the U.S. through Western Hotels whose hotels here and in Central America are splendid. (Maybe they'll shake up the Trust Houses. They need it.)

"Do you feel Eurailpass is worthwhile? We are two elderly ladies in Europe for the first time."

YES. Unlimited train travel, anytime, any direction plus some lake and river boats. Only thing I've heard against this pass is some trains are so crowded you can't get on. This will be true out of any capital city on weekends.

Don't carry much baggage! European porters put your baggage in the overhead. But they won't come on the train to take it off.

SOME OF THE WEST'S MOST RUGGED COUNTRY, such as the Needles area of Canyonlands National Park, Utah, will be explored on organized wilderness trips during the coming summer. Above, the weirdly eroded minarets, buttes and mesas in Canyonland.

Expand wilderness trips

WASHINGTON — Forty-five wilderness trips ranging from the Kenai Peninsula in Alaska to the Gila Wilderness in New Mexico and the Boundary Waters Canoe Area in Minnesota are offered to the public this year by The Wilderness Society, a private citizen organization which has its national headquarters here.

These popular expeditions conducted in all seasons provide opportunities to explore on horseback, foot, boat, canoe, and skis many of the nation's most beautiful areas of wilderness. The trips, sponsored as a not-for-profit educational program of the Society, are designed to acquaint people with wilderness and how it can properly be used.

Free folders, reservation forms, and details regarding the greatly expanded trip series may be obtained from The Wilderness Society, Western Regional Office, 5850 E. Jewell Ave., Denver, Colo. 80222. Information about the Society's conservation programs, its publications, and how to become a member is available upon request from its headquarters office, 729 15th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005.

* * * *

EXPERIENCED trip directors and physicians accompany the "A Way to the Wilderness" expeditions, which are conducted by some of the best guides and outfitters in the United States, according to the Society. Outfitters provide excellent meals and all camping equipment. Guests supply only their own clothing and personal items. The adventure-filled trips offer superb opportunities for sightseeing, nature study, and healthful outdoor recreation in pristine wild country. Many of the areas provide outstanding fishing. Frequent layover days enable guests to participate in interesting side trips or enjoy wilderness camping. Family groups as well as individual guests are invited to participate in the outings.

The spring outdoor adventures begin with a horseback ride, April 1-7, in the fabled Superstition Wilderness east of Phoenix, Ariz. Scheduled for the peak of the desert wildflower season, the ride takes the guests through the land of the legendary Lost Dutchman mine.

* * * *

HELLS CANYON and the Middle Snake River along the Oregon-Idaho border provide the primitive settings for a ride May 5-15. The outing, in America's deepest gorge through which thunders the whitewater of the Snake, offers visits to high country wilderness in both states.

A horseback holiday in the Pecos Wilderness, north of Santa Fe, N.M., June 21-30, is timed to enjoy the natural beauty of the high country in the spring.

Walking trips with packstock carrying all the equipment have proved very popular, according to the Society. The first walking trip is in the Escalante Canyon wilderness of Utah, April 12-20. Desert wildflowers, natural arches, Indian ruins, and the incomparable natural beauty of colorful canyons are among the attractions on this outing.

Costs for the 10 to 14-day horseback trips range from $190 to $335. The walking trips are priced from $170 to $220. The backpacking expeditions cost from $170 to $190. The price of the waterway trips range from $175 to $310, the Tundra Trek is priced at $360, and the ski tours cost $175.

Small groups on each trip assure a realistic experience in wilderness living, according to the Society. A maximum of 10 guests is planned for each of the backpacking trips, and a limit of 15 to 18 participants is placed on each of the other outings. Because of the limited number of openings on each expedition, it is important that reservations be made early, the Society pointed out.

Subsidence may doom ancient city of Venice

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eugenio Miozzi believes the ancient city of Venice, one of man's finest works, will sink beneath the encompassing sea some 80 years hence unless something is done soon to save it.

In a recent UPI dispatch Miozzi, a Venetian engineer, was quoted as forecasting that by 2048 A.D. the city will have sunk 31.4 inches below its present level.

And, said Miozzi, "that will be the end."

Venice's threatened doom dramatizes something that is going on in many other places, though with possibly less fateful and unhappy consequences.

Scientists of the U. S. Geological Survey refer to is as "sinkage" or "subsidence." In this country subsidence has occurred when surface-dwelling man has mined the earth beneath him for coal, oil, or water, especially water.

* * * *

SOME Eastern coal towns have suffered surface damage to homes and other buildings when mined out subterranean caverns have collapsed.

The most recently publicized sinkage cases have resulted, however, from man's increasing thirst.

But what about Venice, the city of canals and the Rialto and palaces and splendid churches, of great painters — Titian, Tintoretto, Giorgione, Tiepolo, Canaletto; of pigeons and St. Marks, of gondoliers and amorous intrigue? Can it be saved?

Eugenio Miozzi hopes so. He has consulted with Dr. Joseph P. Poland of the Geological Survey and has come up with some ideas:

Close all artesian wells in the area, stop drilling for gas in the Adriatic, pump water back into the depleted depths to restore the underground pressures which support the city.

Otherwise — farewell to the shimmering city which for centuries has been revered by mankind as "the Queen of the Seas."

Twenty nights in Europe, car, discounts for $70

Trans World Airlines announces a "Great Get-Away Plan" which offers travel from eight major European cities, guesthouse accommodations, auto rental with free mileage and an exclusive discount card for one free night's lodging and 10 per cent discount for other nights at any one of 123 motor hotels. Total price: $70.

Here's how it works:

You prepay $70 for the land tour services for the entire stay abroad plus the airline's jet fare to Frankfurt, Zurich, Milan, Rome or Athens. Weekend departure dates from New York are set from March through October.

The $70 charge includes a Volkswagen, Fiat or similar rental car and 620 free miles (fewer in Greece) or equivalent rail transportation, 20 nights in a guesthouse or inn, airport transfers upon arrival and departure, six travelers' guides prepared by the carrier's travel advisor Mary Gordon, the discount card and a motoring atlas.

The atlas contains maps of all main roads, strip maps for daily tour planning and additional discount coupons for sightseeing and nightclub tours.

More than two persons sharing a car receive additional mileage allowances.

Air France to build huge hotel in Paris

Citing a need for supplying additional rooms to accommodate the greater influx of passengers expected in the 1970s, Air France has announced plans to enter the hotel field. The airline's first facility, scheduled for completion in 1975, will be a 950-room complex in the Paris residential suburb of Neuilly.

Set sail with Matson May 17 for South America and the incredible Galapagos Islands. Olé!

There'll be all the wonderful fun of every Matson cruise but this time with a little Latin flavor. Parties. Native entertainment. Great food. A trip through the Panama Canal. Laughter. Congeniality. Olés. And exotic ports of call: Mazatlan, Acapulco, Lima, Guayaquil, Balboa, Taboga Island. What makes this cruise like no other cruise ever is the visit to the Galapagos. The stop there will be brief, but unforgettable. You'll have a rare opportunity to see the fantastic wildlife of these islands—including the birds which provided the key to Darwin's theory of evolution: the Galapagos finches. The SS Monterey sails from San Francisco May 17 and Los Angeles May 18. Fares begin at $1,180, including many special events compliments of Matson. Call or see.

STAN DELAPLANE

Those Indian girls down in Paraguay!

By STAN DELAPLANE

ASUNCION, Paraguay — This pocket-size capital has only 300,000 people. Across the river, Indian girls come down to the river to wash clothes. (They're topless — I mean National Geographically, not Playboyish.)

Asuncion is a gas stop on Braniff's round-South American run, and we got off for a walkabout of two days. It's hot as a sheriff's pistol now in the South American Summer-going-on-fall. But the Guarani Hotel is air-conditioned. Food not bad — the restaurants set up tables in the street at night to catch the breeze.

And in the morning, across the river, you can see ostriches come from the wild back country to drink.

* * * *

"Whom do you tip checking out of hotel in Europe? And how do you know?"

JUST ABOUT everybody in sight. You will know because they'll be there making it clear. (Especially true in France, Italy, Spain.) When you call down to get your bags picked up, the operator passes the word.

Immediately the room is full of people who expect to be tipped. The maid hustles through the drawers. The room waiter shows up. The night porter is around.

Now, there's already 15 per cent service charge on your bill downstairs. But these people expect an extra expression of your gratitude. So make it the local equivalent of the quarter tip — one each day for each person. Example: five days in France, five francs for each person.

It will fry you to tip the night porter if you know he never touched the shoes you left outside your door each night. (It's one of my hangups to put a fingerprint of toothpowder on the back of one shoe. See if it's been brushed off in the morning.) If you want to stiff this goof-off, give him the tip in American coins. He can't change it anywhere except at the airport.

"What would you suggest for hotels in a driving trip around England? We have sent for the Trust Houses catalog."

THE TRUST Houses are a good idea — mostly modernized old coaching inns. Apparently management has no quality control. They must leave it to each local manager for I've been in some that were delightful and couple I'd rate strictly Skid Row.

With Trust Houses, I wouldn't move in until the clerk showed me the room first. In fact, I'd case the whole place — dining room, too. Trust Houses can be booked now in the U.S. through Western Hotels whose hotels here and in Central America are splendid. (Maybe they'll shake up the Trust Houses. They need it.)

"Do you feel Eurailpass is worthwhile? We are two elderly ladies in Europe for the first time."

YES. Unlimited train travel, anytime, any direction plus some lake and river boats. Only thing I've heard against this pass is some trains are so crowded you can't get on. This will be true out of any capital city on weekends.

Don't carry much baggage! European porters put your baggage in the overhead. But they won't come on the train to take it off.

MINUTE DETAIL CHECK BY YOUNG . . . Before Concrete Is Poured

A ROCKWIN FIRST

It's 'Heavy' Art

Rockwin Corporation has produced some eye-opening items at its modernistic Santa Fe Springs plant.

Add one more item: a 40-ton work of art.

The proof is seen high on the new Mathematical Sciences Building at UCLA.

The story now can be told:

Artist Joseph L. Young labored more than two and a half years to create, design and assemble approximately half a million tiny marble and glass pieces into the largest polychromed bas-relief yet created by an American muralist.

* * * *

THIS NEWEST cultural landmark, a 1,000-foot-long frieze, expresses the development of mathematics as a universal language.

As the eye traverses this new building, the panoramic history of the mathematical sciences, from caveman to spaceman, unfolds in chronological sequence.

Colorfully depicted in beautiful detail are contributions by the early Egyptians, Greeks, Babylonians, Phoenicians, Romans, Chinese, Middle Age and Renaissance Europeans, computer and atomic scientists of our day.

* * * *

EMBEDDED in 14 large concrete panels precast at Rockwin Corporation's production facility at Santa Fe Springs, the mural covers an area of 1,300 square feet.

Creator of this mural is a multi-dimensional talent with studios in Santa Barbara and Los Angeles.

As an internationally acclaimed pioneer of art in contemporary architecture, Young was commissioned to execute this mural by the Los Angeles architectural firm of Stanton & Stockwell.

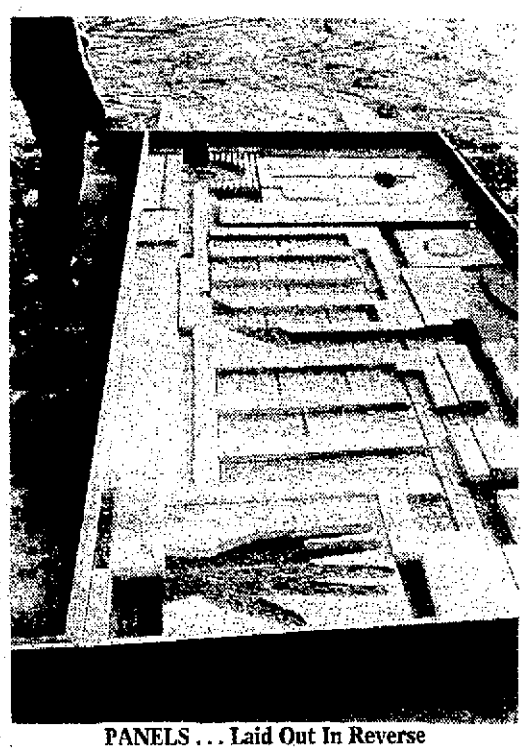

* * * *

AFTER the massive sections were all in place at Westwood, Steven Galezewski, executive vice president of Rockwin, which undertook the production and installation of the precast panel work for Young, said simply: "My company was proud to be associated with this very fine artist in his magnificent contribution to modern architecture."

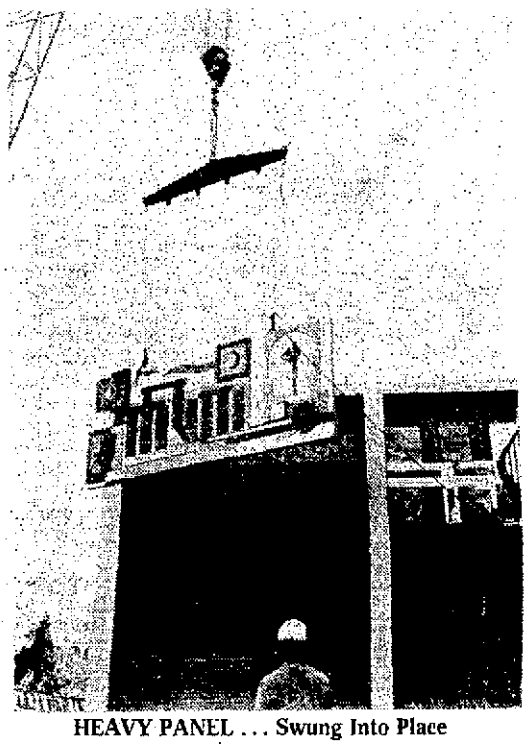

Rockwin employes, swiping at sweaty brows, nodded in agreement.

Supermarkets' Check-Cashing Losses May Be Curbed

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Section Editor

Bad-check passers face a bleak future.

At the same time, more than one million Southlanders will find it easier to cash checks in their nearby supermarket.

This is the dual goal of a new, computerized "Welcome Check" program to be inaugurated next month.

More than 1½ million check-cashing credentials are being mailed to individuals who applied for them.

The "Welcome Check" program will be initiated April 21 in all major supermarkets, according to Lee A. Ault III, president of Telecredit, Inc., electronic check verification firm headquartered at Century City.

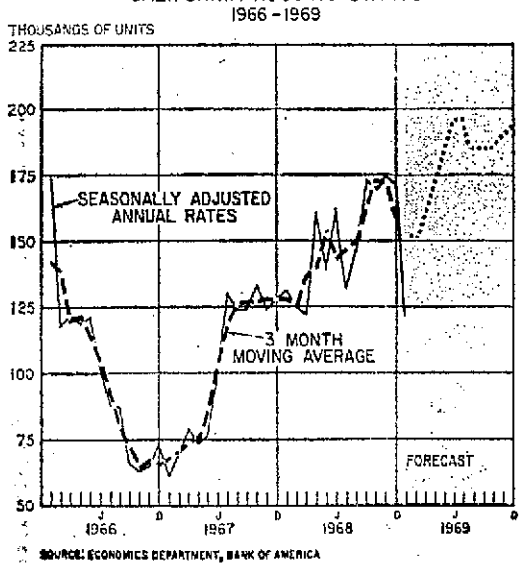

The new system will replace check-cashing programs at all subscribing supermarkets, Ault said. The new credential, a plastic card, will entitle holders to cash checks even if the customer has never shopped there before.

A 10-cent fee will be charged for checks cashed under the "Welcome Check" program, but in return, Ault adds, card holders now will have check-cashing privileges in nearly 900 stores.

Major supermarkets participating in the new program include Alpha Beta Acme Markets, Inc.; Boys Market; Food Fair Stores, Inc.; Mayfair Markets; Ralphs Grocery Co.; Safeway Stores, Inc.; E. F. MacDonald Shopping Bag Food Stores, Inc.; Thrifti Mart, Inc., and Von's Grocery Co.

CALIFORNIA HOUSING STARTS
1966 - 1969

SOURCE: ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT, BANK OF AMERICA

HOUSING STARTS IN CALIFORNIA fell sharply in January to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 123,000, 29 per cent below the average for the previous four months.

The decrease was primarily attributed to the state's recent heavy rainfall.

However, Bank of America economists expect a strong rebound in starts by March, as permits for future construction continued to climb in January. For 1969 as a whole, the bank predicts 180,000 housing units will be started.

AMERICANS BURNED UP ALMOST 6 per cent more energy in 1968 than in the previous year, the U.S. Bureau of Mines reported last week.

Petroleum provided 43.26 per cent of the nation's total energy in 1968, slightly increasing its leadership over other fuels. Natural gas use increased slightly, meeting 31.23 per cent of the energy needs.

In terms of British Thermal Units — the standard energy measurement — the nation used 62,258 trillion BTU's last year, compared with 58,873 trillion in 1967.

Atomic energy provided only 0.17 per cent of the energy, but that was a substantial increase over the previous year's 0.13 per cent.

Other energy sources saw their share of the growing market shrink a little: bituminous coal and lignite to just over 21 per cent; hydroelectric power to to 3.8 per cent; and anthracite to 0.42 per cent.

The pattern of energy use changed only slightly with transportation, at 24 per cent, and electric power generation, at 22 per cent, creating a slightly greater share of the demand. Industrial use at 31 per cent and household and commercial consumption at 22 per cent showed absolute growth, but relatively smaller importance in the total picture.

SOME BUYERS COULDN'T WAIT

McFarland's Showcase Homes Open Today

THIS SHOWCASE DEN . . . May Later Be Bedroom

A gala grand opening is in progress this weekend at Showcase Homes developments in Westminster and Huntington Beach, Frank McFarland Sr., sales agent and president McFarland Company, reported.

"We've already recorded over one million dollars in sales before the official opening," McFarland said. "In one day, we sold 17 homes at Huntington Beach."

Expecting large numbers of home buyers for the opening, the sales agent said refreshments are being served from 1 to 5 p.m., "with roast beef sandwiches that are really great," he added.

The gourmet sandwiches are through the courtesy of the Southern California Edison Company and O'Keefe and Merritt.

A combination of buyer advantages is credited with the sales success of Showcase Home developments. Builder-developer Bill Kruegers' revolutionary Custom Completion Plan and Growing Room is of major interest to buyers.

THIS CONCEPT allows a family to design the home to suit its own individual needs and tastes. Doors, windows, fireplace location, kitchen arrangements, number and size of the rooms may all be changed. The only exception is the location of the actual bearing walls.

The Growing Room is an unfinished area in the one and two-story homes that may be utilized in a number of days as an extra three-bedroom and bath wing, a study and bedrooms, a large game room, or a spacious bed-sitting room retreat for parents.

In addition, McFarland pointed out, Showcase Homes are "Extra Ready" for a complete move-in. "We've taken care of the 'extras' that usually take a couple of years to incorporate into a new home. They are carpeted, draped, and the back yard is fenced. Sprinklers are in, a green lawn is growing in front and the concrete driveway is waiting for the family car."

Priced from $29,750, plans provide for up to six bedrooms, with three baths and may be purchased under a number of financing programs, with down payments as low as 5 per cent.

Huntington Beach model homes are located at Bushard and Hamilton Avenue. They may be reached from the Pacific Coast Highway, by driving north on Brookhurst Street to Bushard Street and continuing north on Bushard to Hamilton.

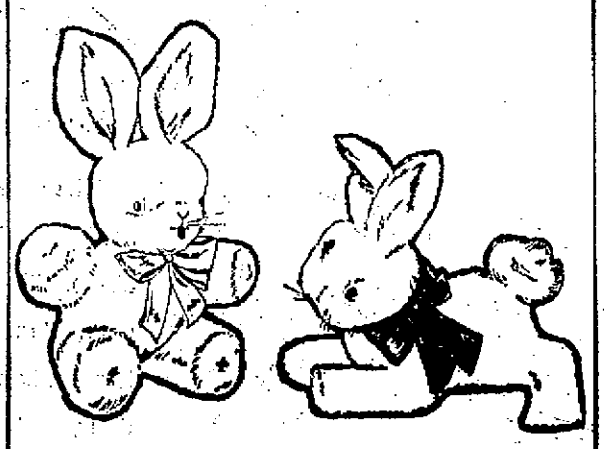

From the San Diego Freeway, they are accessible via the Brookhurst turnoff, south to Hamilton and east to Bushard Street.

by The Bank of California. Personal and government spending advanced modestly in the month, while business spending for fixed investment remained level with January.

The Bank of California Economic Series measures economic activity in its tri-state service area and encompasses production of both goods and services to determine Gross State Product.

Income from nine separate industrial classifications also measures, in balance, spending by persons, government, and by business for fixed investment. The Bank's estimates are seasonally adjusted at an annual rate.

The output of the commodity producing industries, which include manufacturing, construction, agriculture, and mining, and account for one third of total production, increased 4.0 per cent in a year to $32.26 billion.

The distributing industries (trade and utilities), representing approximately one quarter of all production, continued to rise in February to $24.03 billion.

The bank forecasts that California's Gross State Product will advance to $97.92 billion in March, with increases in all four major classifications of production.

Personal spending is expected to reach $60.20 billion, business spending for fixed investment $12.90 billion and government spending $24.82 billion.

RECORD PURCHASES OF PRODUCE from various areas throughout the United States during 1968 have been reported by F. W. Woolworth Co.

H. W. Bode, vice president of restaurant operations, in a summary report on last year's food business at Woolworth's, said new purchase records were set in the following categories: beef, a total of 7.2 million pounds; pork, including ham and bacon, 3.1 million pounds; poultry, 8.1 million pounds; eggs, 3.7 million pounds; butter, 2.1 million pounds, and potatoes, 17.8 million pounds.

Bode said whenever possible these items are purchased from local sources of supply. "Woolworth's is the country's largest purveyor of foods prepared and served on the premises," he said, "and our long-standing policy of buying locally benefits both our customer and the economy of the communities we serve."

He predicted the company's produce purchases would increase during 1969 because of Woolworth's continuing expansion program and accelerated promotions during the company's 90th anniversary year.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE NATION'S fertilizer industry scored critics of agricultural fertilization practices last week and implied they were operating outside the facts, and without considering the end result of a "return to nature" philosophy.

"Make no mistake," warned Dr. W. H. Garman, vice president for member services, National Plant Food Institute, Washington, D.C., "if man had to rely on nature alone, his world would be faced with wholesale starvation and chaos, for nature could not sustain the world's population for one day — not in food, nor in fiber for clothing."

With specific reference to those who accuse nitrogen fertilizers of contributing to lake and stream pollution, Garman said "they lack the knowledge to analyze or to criticize constructively the effects of agriculture on the nitrogen cycle," and stated that the amount of nitrogen applied as fertilizer in the U.S. is small compared to that which occurs naturally and as animal waste.

In answer to those who say modern agricultural techniques "upset the balance of nature," Garman indicated that advancements in technology never have been, nor ever will be in accord with nature, and "man must continue to depend on his ingenuity in devising ways and means to thwart adverse effects of nature in food and fiber production."

This will necessitate more use of agricultural fertilizers and other proven farm production practices, rather than less, he added.

Boulevard Buick Picks New GM

G. E. DAELEY

Appointment of Gerald E. Daeley, 35, former director of service, as general manager of Boulevard Buick was announced last week by James Willingham, president of the Long Beach Buick-Opel-Jaguar dealership.

Daeley's responsibilities will extend over all departments of Boulevard Buick which, in 1968, grossed more than $10 million in new and used-car sales and related services.

The youthful executive, who lives in Garden Grove, joined Boulevard Buick in 1966 as service coordinator.

Since that time Daeley increased the service department's gross revenues by 74.8 per cent.

Daeley's procedures cover not only new and used Buicks and Opels but Jaguars, the British sports roadsters, coupes and gran tourismo sedans.

* * * *

WILLINGHAM, said Daeley revolutionized the firm's new car service program by instituting "one-car, one-mechanic" service wherein a factory trained service and maintenance specialist is assigned to the same new car from the day of delivery until the owner has accumulated 4,000 miles.

Despite his comparative youth, Daeley has been well-grounded in the automobile buisness.

Of his 17 years of experience which includes all phases of repair, bodyshop, ignition, chassis and engines, Daeley spent nine years specializing on Buick products.

Ceramic Show Set to Open

The West's largest Hobby Ceramics Show opens for three days next Friday at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles. The work of thousands of hobby ceramists in Southern California will be on display.

Ceramic studios from Bakersfield to Costa Mesa will also exhibit and conduct demonstrations of clay casting, decorating, work with glass, copper enameling, and the other forms of this ancient art.

Among the exhibits are ceramics made by patients at the City of Hope, one of the beneficiaries of the show, and the sightless children at the Foundation for the Junior Blind.

The Ceramic Hobby Crafts Associates, sponsor of the show, has established a ceramic workshop for the blind children.

MINUTE DETAIL CHECK BY YOUNG . . . Before Concrete Is Poured

A ROCKWIN FIRST

It's 'Heavy' Art

Rockwin Corporation has produced some eye-opening items at its modernistic Santa Fe Springs plant.

Add one more item: a 40-ton work of art.

The proof is seen high on the new Mathematical Sciences Building at UCLA.

The story now can be told:

Artist Joseph L. Young labored more than two and a half years to create, design and assemble approximately half a million tiny marble and glass pieces into the largest polychromed bas-relief yet created by an American muralist.

* * * *

THIS NEWEST cultural landmark, a 1,000-foot-long frieze, expresses the development of mathematics as a universal language.

As the eye traverses this new building, the panoramic history of the mathematical sciences, from caveman to spaceman, unfolds in chronological sequence.

Colorfully depicted in beautiful detail are contributions by the early Egyptians, Greeks, Babylonians, Phoenicians, Romans, Chinese, Middle Age and Renaissance Europeans, computer and atomic scientists of our day.

* * * *

EMBEDDED in 14 large concrete panels precast at Rockwin Corporation's production facility at Santa Fe Springs, the mural covers an area of 1,300 square feet.

Creator of this mural is a multi-dimensional talent with studios in Santa Barbara and Los Angeles.

As an internationally acclaimed pioneer of art in contemporary architecture, Young was commissioned to execute this mural by the Los Angeles architectural firm of Stanton & Stockwell.

* * * *

AFTER the massive sections were all in place at Westwood, Steven Galezewski, executive vice president of Rockwin, which undertook the production and installation of the precast panel work for Young, said simply: "My company was proud to be associated with this very fine artist in his magnificent contribution to modern architecture."

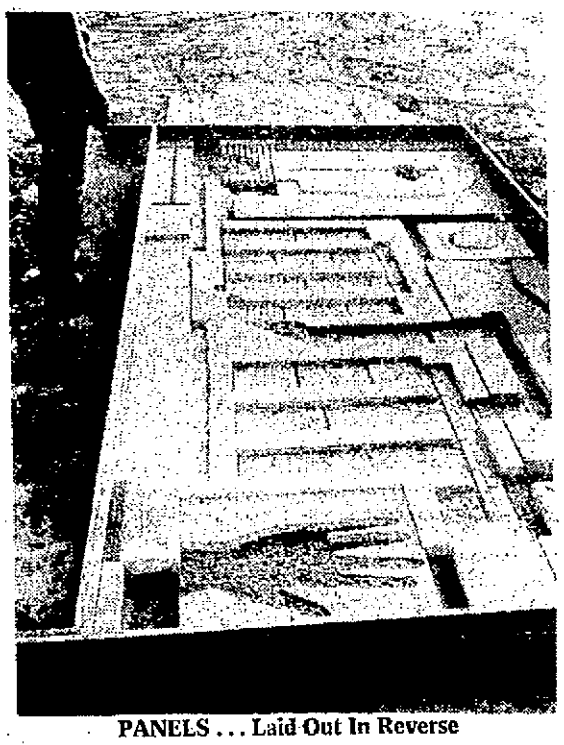

Rockwin employes, swiping at sweaty brows, nodded in agreement.

Supermarkets' Check-Cashing Losses May Be Curbed

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Section Editor

Bad-check passers face a bleak future.

At the same time, more than one million Southlanders will find it easier to cash checks in their nearby supermarket.

This is the dual goal of a new, computerized "Welcome Check" program to be inaugurated next month.

More than 1½ million check-cashing credentials are being mailed to individuals who applied for them.

The "Welcome Check" program will be initiated April 21 in all major supermarkets, according to Lee A. Ault III, president of Telecredit, Inc., electronic check verification firm headquartered at Century City.

The new system will replace check-cashing programs at all subscribing supermarkets, Ault said. The new credential, a plastic card, will entitle holders to cash checks even if the customer has never shopped there before.

A 10-cent fee will be charged for checks cashed under the "Welcome Check" program, but in return, Ault adds, card holders now will have check-cashing privileges in nearly 900 stores.

Major supermarkets participating in the new program include Alpha Beta Acme Markets, Inc.; Boys Market; Food Fair Stores, Inc.; Mayfair Markets; Ralphs Grocery Co.; Safeway Stores, Inc.; E. F. MacDonald Shopping Bag Food Stores, Inc.; Thrifti Mart, Inc., and Von's Grocery Co.

HOUSING STARTS IN CALIFORNIA fell sharply in January to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 123,000, 29 per cent below the average for the previous four months.

The decrease was primarily attributed to the state's recent heavy rainfall.

However, Bank of America economists expect a strong rebound in starts by March, as permits for future construction continued to climb in January. For 1969 as a whole, the bank predicts 180,000 housing units will be started.

AMERICANS BURNED UP ALMOST 6 per cent more energy in 1968 than in the previous year, the U.S. Bureau of Mines reported last week.

Petroleum provided 43.26 per cent of the nation's total energy in 1968, slightly increasing its leadership over other fuels. Natural gas use increased slightly, meeting 31.23 per cent of the energy needs.

In terms of British Thermal Units — the standard energy measurement — the nation used 62,258 trillion BTU's last year, compared with 58,873 trillion in 1967.

Atomic energy provided only 0.17 per cent of the energy, but that was a substantial increase over the previous year's 0.13 per cent.

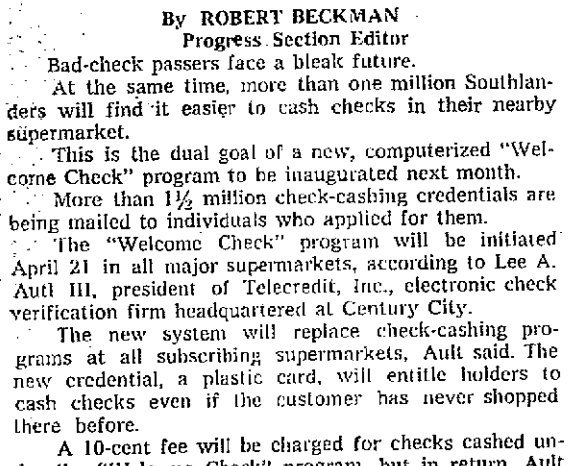

Other energy sources saw their share of the growing market shrink a little: bituminous coal and lignite to just over 21 per cent; hydroelectric power to to 3.8 per cent; and anthracite to 0.42 per cent.

The pattern of energy use changed only slightly with transportation, at 24 per cent, and electric power generation, at 22 per cent, creating a slightly greater share of the demand. Industrial use at 31 per cent and household and commercial consumption at 22 per cent showed absolute growth, but relatively smaller importance in the total picture.

SOME BUYERS COULDN'T WAIT

McFarland's Showcase Homes Open Today

THIS SHOWCASE DEN . . . May Later Be Bedroom

A gala grand opening is in progress this weekend at Showcase Homes developments in Westminster and Huntington Beach, Frank McFarland Sr., sales agent and president McFarland Company, reported.

"We've already recorded over one million dollars in sales before the official opening," McFarland said. "In one day, we sold 17 homes at Huntington Beach."

Expecting large numbers of home buyers for the opening, the sales agent said refreshments are being served from 1 to 5 p.m., "with roast beef sandwiches that are really great," he added.

The gourmet sandwiches are through the courtesy of the Southern California Edison Company and O'Keefe and Merritt.

A combination of buyer advantages is credited with the sales success of Showcase Home developments. Builder-developer Bill Kruegers' revolutionary Custom Completion Plan and Growing Room is of major interest to buyers.

THIS CONCEPT allows a family to design the home to suit its own individual needs and tastes. Doors, windows, fireplace location, kitchen arrangements, number and size of the rooms may all be changed. The only exception is the location of the actual bearing walls.

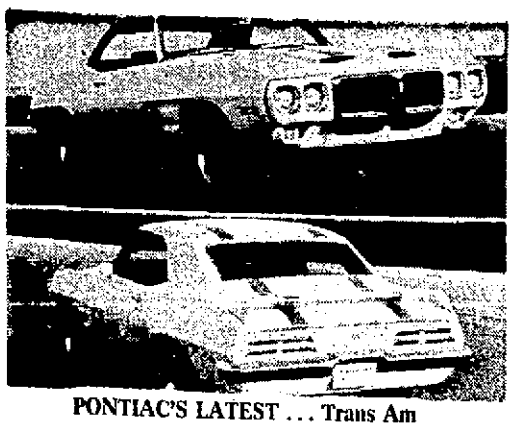

The Growing Room is an unfinished area in the one and two-story homes that may be utilized in a number of days as an extra three-bedroom and bath wing, a study and bedrooms, a large game room, or a spacious bed-sitting room retreat for parents.

In addition, McFarland pointed out, Showcase Homes are "Extra Ready" for a complete move-in. "We've taken care of the 'extras' that usually take a couple of years to incorporate into a new home. They are carpeted, draped, and the back yard is fenced. Sprinklers are in, a green lawn is growing in front and the concrete driveway is waiting for the family car."

Priced from $29,750, plans provide for up to six bedrooms, with three baths and may be purchased under a number of financing programs, with down payments as low as 5 per cent.

Huntington Beach model homes are located at Bushard and Hamilton Avenue. They may be reached from the Pacific Coast Highway, by driving north on Brookhurst Street to Bushard Street and continuing north on Bushard to Hamilton.

From the San Diego Freeway, they are accessible via the Brookhurst turnoff, south to Hamilton and east to Bushard Street.

PONTIAC'S LATEST . . . Trans Am

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

On the eve of opening of the 61st annual Chicago Automobile Show, Pontiac Motor Division introduced a new high-performance Firebird called the Trans Am.

As with The Judge, a new super GTO, which was unveiled by Pontiac earlier this year, the Trans Am will "go performance one step better," says F. James McDonald, Pontiac's new general manager.

The most striking styling feature of the new Trans Am will be a floating 60-inch air foil spanning the rear deck. The car also features a special hood with full length, functional hood scoops and functional air outlets behind the front wheel openings for added engine compartment cooling.

THE TRANS AM, according to McDonald, will be available as a hardtop and convertible.

Striping will run the full length of the car over the hood, roof, rear deck and air foil. The rear end panel will be painted to match the striping.

The standard power plant will be a 400 cubic-inch Ram Air engine developing 335 horsepower, a four-barrel Quadra-jet carburetor and dual exhausts. This will be mated with a three-speed floor mounted stick shift and 3.55:1 locking axle.

The Trans Am will have special high effort variable ratio power steering and high effort power brakes with front discs. These specially designed systems have a higher degree of road feel than ordinary power steering and brakes.

SUSPENSION WILL FEATURE heavy-duty springs and shocks and a heavy-duty, one-inch stabilizer bar with high-rate bushings.

Riding on a 108.1" wheelbase, the Trans Am will have F70-14 Fiberglas belted tires mounted on seven-inch wheels with a Wide Track stance of 60-inches both front and rear.

Bucket seats, sports-styled instrumentation and a new, 14-inch diameter European-style sports steering wheel will be standard equipment.

Trans Am options and accessories include an optional Ram Air IV engine, developing 345 horsepower, a close-ratio four-speed manual transmission of a three-speed Turbo Hydra-matic. Additional options are a hood-mounted tachometer and a rally gauge cluster.

WORLD OF WINGS

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

A San Pedro mother of a flying family will be sponsored by a Long Beach firm in the All-Women's International Air Race starting March 24 from New Orleans to Managua, Nicaragua.

Mrs. Margaret Callaway, of 943 13th St. in the hillside city overlooking the harbor, who has finished in the top 10 in 12 of the annual transcontinental Powder Puff Derbies, will be striving for a victory in the international distaff event with co-pilot Marge Mitchell of Plainview, Texas.

The team is sponsored in the challenging 2,185-mile race, crossing the borders of five nations, by Rose Bellanca Sales, 2825 E. Spring St., Long Beach Airport.

* * * *

THE THREE-DAY RACE, popularly termed the "Angel Derby," offers purses totaling $2,500 and will traverse the Gulf Coasts of Texas and Mexico before crossing to the Pacific Coast and overflying Guatemala to El Salvador and the finish line in Nicaragua.

MARGARET CALLAWAY

Mrs. Callaway has logged more than 9,300 hours and adds to the total daily as a flight instructor for Peninsula Aviation at Torrance Airport.

She is the wife of Lt. Col. Richard D. Callaway (USAF-Ret.), a military pilot for 28 years. They have two daughters, Sandra and Margo, both of whom are active pilots.

Mrs. Callaway taught both girls to fly when they were 11 and 12 years old, and took them on races as co-pilots. In 1958, when the daughters were 16 and 17, they teamed up for the first time to enter the International Air Race from Canada to the Bahamas, placing second.

* * * *

THE FOLLOWING YEAR THE GIRLS again flew as a team with the Powder Puffers from Lawrence, Mass. to Spokane, Wash., winning third prize and the Flying Magazine award for the youngest competitors.

Mother has her share of trophy awards, too. In 24 years of flying she had entered almost as many races. She placed fifth in the 1967 Powder Puff Derby from Atlantic City to Torrance and previously had won the international event from Canada to Cuba.

Recently Mrs. Callaway won the Howard Fisher Trophy Race from San Diego to Lake Tahoe and placed second in the Henry Ohye Air Race from Long Beach to Las Vegas.

Wall Street Briefs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Spear & Staff, Inc. feels that a healthy cash position makes sense at present, but a time will come when bargain buying can begin in earnest. "As investor confidence buckled under the strain of adverse monetary and geo-political developments," the firm says, "brokers began to draw up lists of stocks to be picked up at the approaching bottom."

The Janeway Letter says that the big investors, having put togethr a "high-powered, free-wheeling apparatus for mobilizing money," now find that money is "all dressed up with no place to go." The funds, now that stocks are "out" for the time being, are "wheeling their formidable capacity for dealing in an altogether different direction — they are on the hunt for tax avoidance shelters. Putting them together is shaping up as the next big inning in the money game."

Wright Advisory Reports does not believe the 1969 market will record a price decline either as steep or as deep as the 1962 and 1966 debacles — as measured by the Dow Jones Industrial Average. But it is evident, the firm says, in Washington's money and economy managing policies, and the appraisal of business prospects reflected by the market thus far this year that the result of the decline for secondary stocks and speculative issues may well be at least as devastating.

Union Pacific Railroad and Shell Oil Co. have announced a joint venture to engage in extensive oil exploration in Central Colorado. Drilling will start this month. The tracts to be explored are in the northeast parts of Elbert and El Paso Counties adjoining the Denver-Julesburg Basin.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Dow Badische Co. plans to add 25 million pounds of annual capacity to its Anderson, N.C., Nylon 6 fiber plant. The new fiber output will be entirely for the carpet market.

BURBANK (UPI) — Heath Tecna Corp.'s plastics division at Kent, Wash., has been given a contract to build 77-foot wing-to-fuselage fairing sections for the Lockheed 1011 Tristar jet airliner.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Flying Tiger Line announced it has completed financing arrangements for the purchase of seven new DC-8 Super-63 aircraft from McDonnell Douglas Corp. costing $80 million. They all are to be delivered this year.

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Electric Co's Chemical and Medical Division has obtained a license from Rhone-Poulenc Co. of Paris to produce certain new polymide polymers which withstand high temperatures and have unique processing advantages for electrical insulation and laminated and molded products.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FMC Corp. has obtained a $31.3 million first increment of a $93.8 million three-year Army contract to provide M113 tracked vehicles.

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (UPI) — Susquehanna Corp. has formed a subsidiary at Denver called Mercator, Inc., to engage in exploration for uranium, silver, sulphur and other materials.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Athena communications, the Community Antenna Television subsidiary of Gulf & Western Industries, Inc., has obtained a franchise to establish a CATV system with 15 channels in Beaumont, Tex. One channel will be reserved for public service programs in cooperation with Lamar State College.

by The Bank of California. Personal and government spending advanced modestly in the month, while business spending for fixed investment remained level with January.

The Bank of California Economic Series measures economic activity in its tri-state service area and encompasses production of both goods and services to determine Gross State Product.

Income from nine separate industrial classifications also measures, in balance, spending by persons, government, and by business for fixed investment. The Bank's estimates are seasonally adjusted at an annual rate.

The output of the commodity producing industries, which include manufacturing, construction, agriculture, and mining, and account for one third of total production, increased 4.0 per cent in a year to $32.26 billion.

The distributing industries (trade and utilities), representing approximately one quarter of all production, continued to rise in February to $24.03 billion.

The bank forecasts that California's Gross State Product will advance to $97.92 billion in March, with increases in all four major classifications of production.

Personal spending is expected to reach $60.20 billion, business spending for fixed investment $12.90 billion and government spending $24.82 billion.

RECORD PURCHASES OF PRODUCE from various areas throughout the United States during 1968 have been reported by F. W. Woolworth Co.

H. W. Bode, vice president of restaurant operations, in a summary report on last year's food business at Woolworth's, said new purchase records were set in the following categories: beef, a total of 7.2 million pounds; pork, including ham and bacon, 3.1 million pounds; poultry, 8.1 million pounds; eggs, 3.7 million pounds; butter, 2.1 million pounds, and potatoes, 17.8 million pounds.

Bode said whenever possible these items are purchased from local sources of supply. "Woolworth's is the country's largest purveyor of foods prepared and served on the premises," he said, "and our long-standing policy of buying locally benefits both our customer and the economy of the communities we serve."

He predicted the company's produce purchases would increase during 1969 because of Woolworth's continuing expansion program and accelerated promotions during the company's 90th anniversary year.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE NATION'S fertilizer industry scored critics of agricultural fertilization practices last week and implied they were operating outside the facts, and without considering the end result of a "return to nature" philosophy.

"Make no mistake," warned Dr. W. H. Garman, vice president for member services, National Plant Food Institute, Washington, D.C., "if man had to rely on nature alone, his world would be faced with wholesale starvation and chaos, for nature could not sustain the world's population for one day — not in food, nor in fiber for clothing."

With specific reference to those who accuse nitrogen fertilizers of contributing to lake and stream pollution, Garman said "they lack the knowledge to analyze or to criticize constructively the effects of agriculture on the nitrogen cycle," and stated that the amount of nitrogen applied as fertilizer in the U.S. is small compared to that which occurs naturally and as animal waste.

In answer to those who say modern agricultural techniques "upset the balance of nature," Garman indicated that advancements in technology never have been, nor ever will be in accord with nature, and "man must continue to depend on his ingenuity in devising ways and means to thwart adverse effects of nature in food and fiber production."

This will necessitate more use of agricultural fertilizers and other proven farm production practices, rather than less, he added.

Boulevard Buick Picks New GM

G. E. DAELEY

Appointment of Gerald E. Daeley, 35, former director of service, as general manager of Boulevard Buick was announced last week by James Willingham, president of the Long Beach Buick-Opel-Jaguar dealership.

Daeley's responsibilities will extend over all departments of Boulevard Buick which, in 1968, grossed more than $10 million in new and used-car sales and related services.

The youthful executive, who lives in Garden Grove, joined Boulevard Buick in 1966 as service coordinator.

Since that time Daeley increased the service department's gross revenues by 74.8 per cent.

Daeley's procedures cover not only new and used Buicks and Opels but Jaguars, the British sports roadsters, coupes and gran tourismo sedans.

★ ★ ★ ★

WILLINGHAM, said Daeley revolutionized the firm's new car service program by instituting "one-car, one-mechanic" service wherein a factory trained service and maintenance specialist is assigned to the same new car from the day of delivery until the owner has accumulated 4,000 miles.

Despite his comparative youth, Daeley has been well-grounded in the automobile buisness.

Of his 17 years of experience which includes all phases of repair, body-shop, ignition, chassis and engines, Daeley spent nine years specializing on Buick products.

The Industrial Park division of the R. A. Watt Company, a subsidiary of the Boise Cascade Corporation, has been presented the "Design Recognition Award" from the American Institute of Building Design for outstanding contribution to building design and to the development and planning of industrial parks.

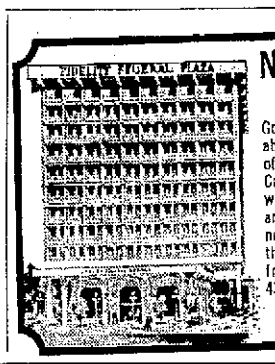

The award was made for concept and design of the Sta-Lube office and warehouse building recently completed in the R. A. Watt Company's Dominguez Industrial Park near Los Angeles.

THE 28,000-square-foot concrete tilt-up building is planned for expansion to double its size. The building features 4,000 square feet of air conditioned office space, exposed aggregate exterior, and a "flow-line" front and back loading system.

Crown Associates, Industrial Properties, exclusive agents for Dominguez Industrial Park, stated that a unique aspect of the industrial facility was its delivery to the owner fully landscaped with all interior finishings and appointments complete.

PONTIAC'S LATEST . . . Trans Am

WORLD OF WHEELS

By ART STEPHAN
Auto Editor

On the eve of opening of the 61st annual Chicago Automobile Show, Pontiac Motor Division introduced a new high-performance Firebird called the Trans Am.

As with The Judge, a new super GTO, which was unveiled by Pontiac earlier this year, the Trans Am will "go performance one step better," says F. James McDonald, Pontiac's new general manager.

The most striking styling feature of the new Trans Am will be a floating 60-inch air foil spanning the rear deck. The car also features a special hood with full length, functional hood scoops and functional air outlets behind the front wheel openings for added engine compartment cooling.

THE TRANS AM, according to McDonald, will be available as a hardtop and convertible.

Striping will run the full length of the car over the hood, roof, rear deck and air foil. The rear end panel will be painted to match the striping.

The standard power plant will be a 400 cubic-inch Ram Air engine developing 335 horsepower, a four-barrel Quadra-jet carburetor and dual exhausts. This will be mated with a three-speed floor mounted stick shift and 3.55:1 locking axle.

The Trans Am will have special high effort variable ratio power steering and high effort power brakes with front discs. These specially designed systems have a higher degree of road feel than ordinary power steering and brakes.

SUSPENSION WILL FEATURE heavy-duty springs and shocks and a heavy-duty, one-inch stabilizer bar with high-rate bushings.

Riding on a 108.1" wheelbase, the Trans Am will have F70-14 Fiberglas belted tires mounted on seven-inch wheels with a Wide Track stance of 60-inches both front and rear.

Bucket seats, sports-styled instrumentation and a new, 14-inch diameter European-style sports steering wheel will be standard equipment.

Trans Am options and accessories include an optional Ram Air IV engine, developing 345 horsepower, a close-ratio four-speed manual transmission of a three-speed Turbo Hydra-matic. Additional options are a hood-mounted tachometer and a rally gauge cluster.

WORLD OF WINGS

By HERB SHANNON

A San Pedro mother of a flying family will be sponsored by a Long Beach firm in the All-Women's International Air Race starting March 24 from New Orleans to Managua, Nicaragua.

Mrs. Margaret Callaway, of 943 13th St. in the hillside city overlooking the harbor, who has finished in the top 10 in 12 of the annual transcontinental Powder Puff Derbies, will be striving for a victory in the international distaff event with co-pilot Marge Mitchell of Plainview, Texas.

The team is sponsored in the challenging 2,185-mile race, crossing the borders of five nations, by Rose Bellanca Sales, 2825 E. Spring St., Long Beach Airport.

• • • •

THE THREE-DAY RACE, popularly termed the "Angel Derby," offers purses totaling $2,500 and will traverse the Gulf Coasts of Texas and Mexico before crossing to the Pacific Coast and overflying Guatemala to El Salvador and the finish line in Nicaragua.

MARGARET CALLAWAY

Mrs. Callaway has logged more than 9,300 hours and adds to the total daily as a flight instructor for Peninsula Aviation at Torrance Airport.

She is the wife of Lt. Col. Richard D. Callaway (USAF-Ret.), a military pilot for 28 years. They have two daughters, Sandra and Margo, both of whom are active pilots.

Mrs. Callaway taught both girls to fly when they were 11 and 12 years old, and took them on races as co-pilots. In 1958, when the daughters were 16 and 17, they teamed up for the first time to enter the International Air Race from Canada to the Bahamas, placing second.

• • • •

THE FOLLOWING YEAR THE GIRLS again flew as a team with the Powder Puffers from Lawrence, Mass. to Spokane, Wash., winning third prize and the Flying Magazine award for the youngest competitors.

Mother has her share of trophy awards, too. In 24 years of flying she had entered almost as many races. She placed fifth in the 1967 Powder Puff Derby from Atlantic City to Torrance and previously had won the international event from Canada to Cuba.

Recently Mrs. Callaway won the Howard Fisher Trophy Race from San Diego to Lake Tahoe and placed second in the Henry Ohye Air Race from Long Beach to Las Vegas.

Wall Street Briefs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Spear & Staff, Inc. feels that a healthy cash position makes sense at present, but a time will come when bargain buying can begin in earnest. "As investor confidence buckled under the strain of adverse monetary and geopolitical developments," the firm says, "brokers began to draw up lists of stocks to be picked up at the approaching bottom."

The Janeway Letter says that the big investors, having put togethr a "high-powered, free-wheeling apparatus for mobilizing money," now find that money is "all dressed up with no place to go." The funds, now that stocks are "out" for the time being, are "wheeling their formidable capacity for dealing in an altogether different direction — they are on the hunt for tax avoidance shelters. Putting them together is shaping up as the next big inning in the money game."

Wright Advisory Reports does not believe the 1969 market will record a price decline either as steep or as deep as the 1962 and 1966 debacles — as measured by the Dow Jones Industrial Average. But it is evident, the firm says, in Washington's money and economy managing policies, and the appraisal of business prospects reflected by the market thus far this year that the result of the decline for secondary stocks and speculative issues may well be at least as devastating.

Union Pacific Railroad and Shell Oil Co. have announced a joint venture to engage in extensive oil exploration in Central Colorado. Drilling will start this month. The tracts to be explored are in the northeast parts of Elbert and El Paso Counties adjoining the Denver-Julesburg Basin.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) — Dow Badische Co. plans to add 25 million pounds of annual capacity to its Anderson, N.C., Nylon 6 fiber plant. The new fiber output will be entirely for the carpet market.

COMFORTABLE LIVING ROOM . . . At Troy/La Palma

Troy-La Palma Homes Can Grow With Family

Inner space means something different to each prospective buyer, said James H. McCarthy, principal of the McCarthy-Sant Organization, builders and developers of Troy, La Palma.

"Because of this we decorated our three inner-space rooms in the furnished model homes, three entirely different ways. This will show just some of the countless possibilities open to todays home-buyer," McCarthy said.

"A young growing family who buys a home today doesn't want to face the bleak possibility of moving in four or five years as his family grows, nor does he want to pay for a four bedroom home when presently he needs only three."

"That's why we offer our inner space room finished or unfinished, it's the buyers choice. A family who needs that extra bedroom of a play area now, can have it immediately, thereby adding thousands of dollars to the value of his home."

* * * *

"BEST of all," continued McCarthy, "all buyers can buy one of these two, three or four bedroom homes for only $995 down. Prices start at $25,525 and feature cedar shingle roofs, concrete driveways and woodburning fireplaces."

Immediate possession is available in some models.

Troy Homes are located on La Palma Avenue, one block east of Moody (Carmenita) in the City of La Palma. From the Santa Ana Freeway drive south on Valley View to La Palma and right to Inwood Lane.

PORTS O'PROGRESS

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

The port warden's office of the Los Angeles Harbor Department reported that during the past year its force of 35 men in boats, patrol cars, and on three-wheel motorcyles logged 9,000 hours patroling harbor waters and traveled more than 125,000 miles on land.

According to Capt. Lionel H. de Santy, the port warden's force rescued 25 persons, assisted 176 small craft in distress, and called for the removal of more than 300 floating hazards to navigation.

Skippers of the patrol boats cited more than 70 boaters for violation of safe boating laws and issued warnings to another 500 pleasure craft operators.

The errant boaters were encouraged to enroll in the safe small boat handling classes offered by the United States Power Squadron and the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Supporters of the "Bring-Back-the-San-Pedro-Terminal Island-Ferry" should be interested in the news the state is going to sell two famous San Diego ferries known for years as "nickle snatchers."

As in the case of the San Pedro-Terminal Island ferry, the two San Diego Bay ferries will have little value as ferries after a new bridge is completed.

The state has agreed to try to negotiate the sale of the two wooden ferries to "nostalgic local civic groups." Oldest of the wooden vessels, the North Island, was built in 1923. The other, the Silver Strand, dates back to 1927.

The two ferries previosuly were used in the Puget Sound area in Washington and later carried commuters across the Golden Gate between San Francisco and Marin County under the names Golden Shore and Golden West.

G.G. Firm Obtains Contract

Aer-O-Lite Draperies, Inc., Garden Grove, has been awarded the contract to manufacture and install the drapes and window coverings in the Travelodge Motor Hotel at Fisherman's Wharf, San Francisco, it was announced last week by Maury Silverman, president.

The contract will involve approximately 10,000 yards of various matrials and will include draperies for about 300 rooms including guest accommodations, public areas of the motel, the lobby, manager's operating and living quarters and several apartments to be located on the first floor.

* * * *

ONCE underway, the project will be completed in seven working days, according to Silverman. "The primary fabric to be used is the newly developed blackout material that completely excludes all light," he said.

Headquartered in Orange County, Aero-O-Lite provides draperies for hospitals, medical centers, commercial office ventures, hotels and residential developments across the nation.

Downey Realtors

Philip J. Yeager, president and director of sales, Covina Realty Co., Inc. will speak on "Listing Techniques" next Wednesday at a general membership meeting of the Downey Board of Realtors to be held at the Downey YMCA at 8 a.m., according to Guy Thomas, president.

NAMED

Phillip Moore, of Westminster, has been named treasurer-controller of Robert H. Grant and Company, Anaheim-headquartered builder and developer firm.

ELECTED

J. M. Moore, vice president of Del Amo Properties — developers of Del Amo Center, Torrance, has been elected executive vice president and a director of The City Management Corporation, Orange County project.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Each Construction Change Could Add to Total

By DON CAMPBELL

Except for a rabid wolverine, the world's most dangerous animal is undoubtedly a housewife who makes up her mind to order a "little change" in the plans of the house that is being built for her.

Both architects and builders have been known to break into tears at the sight of the owner's wife appearing on the scene when the new house is half-built.

MR. CAMPBELL:

We are having a running battle with the contractor who recently finished our new home for us over the matter of roughly $650 which he has billed us for "extras."

It's quite true that most of these changes in the original plans were dreamed up by us — or my wife, rather — in the middle of the job.

What makes us mad, though, is that when we ordered these changes the contractor indicated that these were minor matters that wouldn't change the cost much, if any.

Well, in my book, $650 is a lot of money and is no "minor" matter and I am thinking seriously of getting a lawyer, because the contractor misrepresented what these extras would cost. Don't you agree that he took advantage of us? — Mr. L. W.

ANSWER: He may have, or may not have — there's a good lawyer-like answer for you. This business of extras is probably the biggest cause of friction between home owner and contractor that the building industry experiences.

Sometimes this is because the builder will bid low on a job in order to get the contract and then try to flesh out his profit with "extras" where he isn't subject to competitive bidding. But, in even more cases, it arises simply because little additions occur to the buyer halfway through the job.

I don't see any way out for you here except to pay for the extras. Next time, however, specify in the contract that all extra charges must be in writing, signed by you, and specifying exactly what work is to be performed and what it is going to cost. It saves a lot of hard feelings on everyone's part.

* * * *

MR. CAMPBELL:

Last August I moved from one part of my state to another with my family to accept a new job. Subsequently, I paid a deposit on a home to be built in a new subdivision. Unfortunately I have been unable to sell my old home, and my savings are depleted through having to rent accommodations and make payments on my vacant home.

I now have the opportunity to return to my previous employer under more favorable circumstances, and would like to know the legal and moral implications of asking for my deposit to be refunded. — Mr. T. O.

ANSWER: I am afraid that you are going to have to throw yourself on the builder's mercy, because the legal leg on which you are standing has more breaks in it than a piece of dropped peanut brittle.

Unfortunately, a contract has been executed and the deposit is the builder's insurance that you would go through with your end of the deal — which you are not, now, prepared to do.

Your reasons for wanting to back out are perfectly understandable and logical but, legally, this doesn't cut much ice. Your best bet is to go to the developer and lay your cards on the table.

Perhaps, if construction hasn't yet started on your house and the developer hasn't really incurred any out-of-pocket expenses yet in connection with it, he might be persuaded to strike a compromise with you.

Philosophically, it could be worse, you know. You could have signed the final papers by now and found yourself in the position of owning TWO houses.

* * * *

MR. CAMPBELL:

Our problem is very important to us as a lot of oldsters like us are involved.

The wife and I sold a corner house 10 blocks from where we have now bought a condominium. Our problem is that we paid for the abstract when we sold our home and, in buying this apartment we have been told by the mortgage company's lawyer that we must pay for the abstract on it. How is it that we have to pay for this at both ends? — Mr. B. A.

ANSWER: How, indeed? Normally it is the seller who must furnish and pay for the abstract unless, in the process of negotiations, the buyer specifically agrees to shoulder this cost.

COMFORTABLE LIVING ROOM . . . At Troy/La Palma

Troy-La Palma Homes Can Grow With Family

Inner space means something different to each prospective buyer, said James H. McCarthy, principal of the McCarthy-Sant Organization, builders and developers of Troy, La Palma.

"Because of this we decorated our three inner-space rooms in the furnished model homes, three entirely different ways. This will show just some of the countless possibilities open to todays home-buyer," McCarthy said.

"A young growing family who buys a home today doesn't want to face the bleak possibility of moving in four or five years as his family grows, nor does he want to pay for a four bedroom home when presently he needs only three."

"That's why we offer our inner space room finished or unfinished, it's the buyers choice. A family who needs that extra bedroom or a play area now, can have it immediately, thereby adding thousands of dollars to the value of his home."

* * * *

"BEST of all," continued McCarthy, "all buyers can buy one of these two, three or four bedroom homes for only $995 down. Prices start at $25,525 and feature cedar shingle roofs, concrete driveways and woodburning fireplaces."

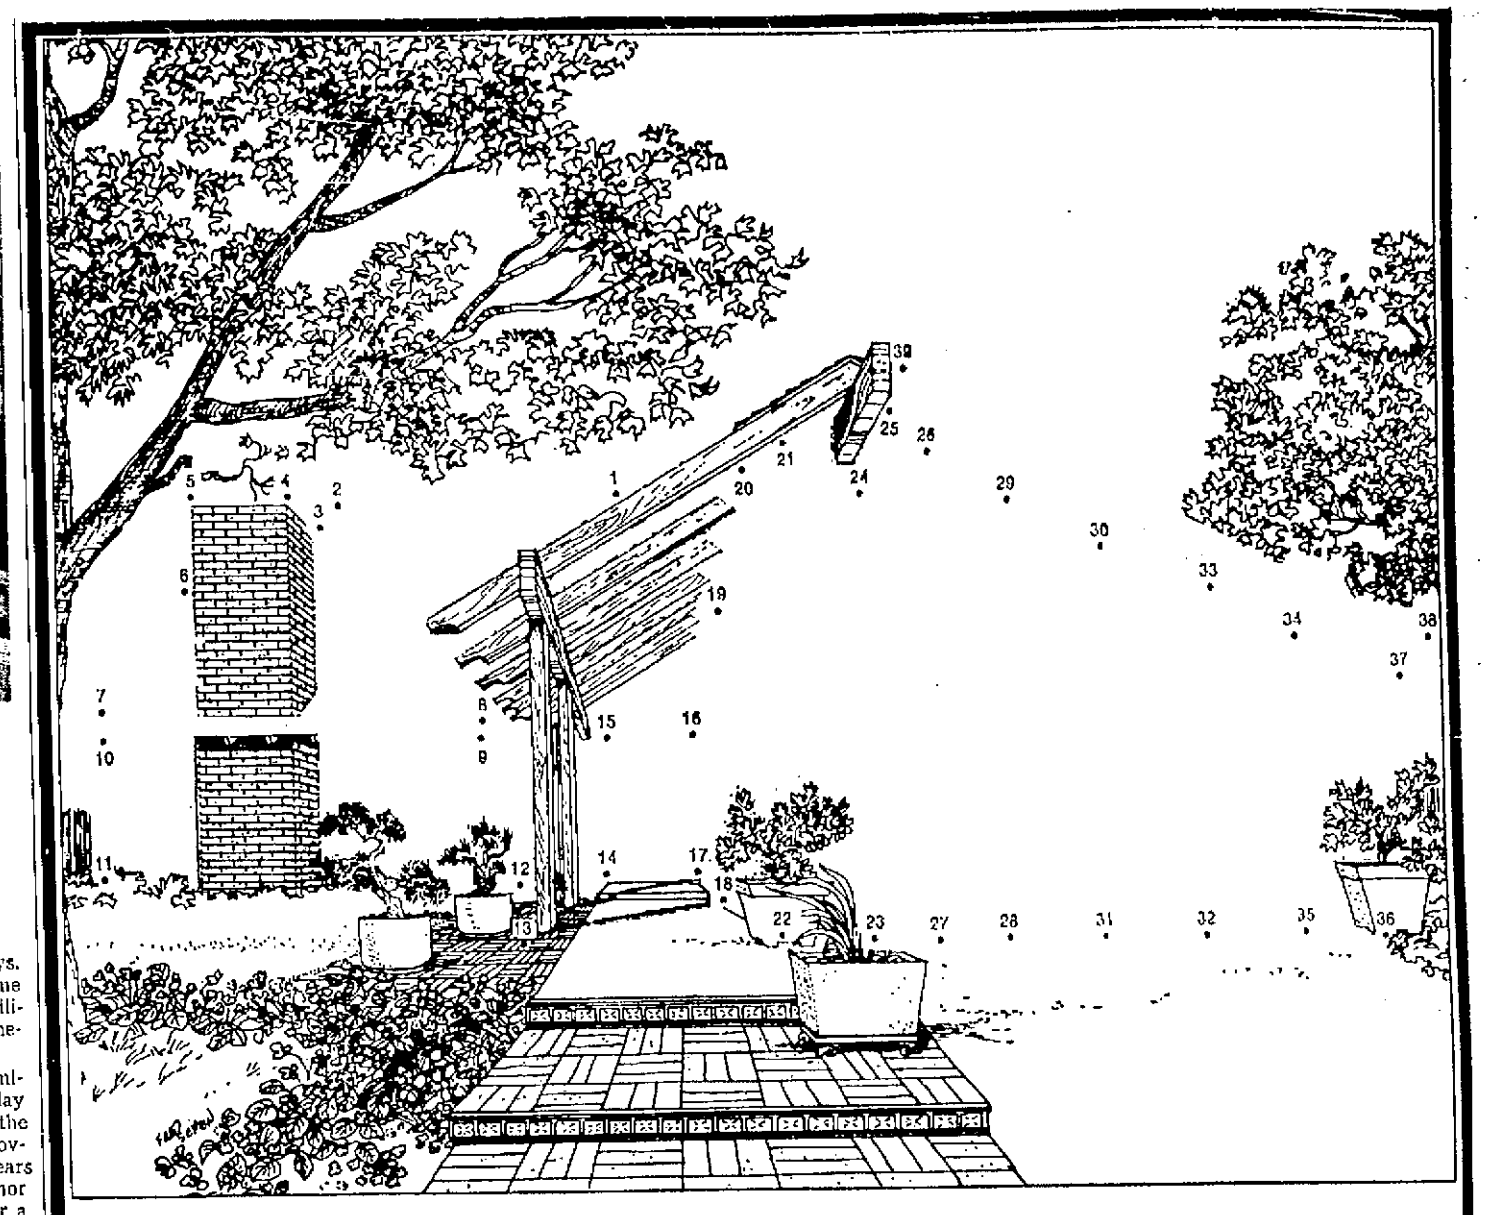

Immediate possession is available in some models.

Troy Homes are located on La Palma Avenue, one block east of Moody (Carmenita) in the City of La Palma. From the Santa Ana Freeway drive south on Valley View to La Palma and right to Inwood Lane.

College Park Homes Move at Record Pace

The recently opened new unit at College Park has been well received by the public, according to Jerry Henderson, vice president of sales and marketing for S & S Construction Co., developers of the Seal Beach community.

"Even with the current tight money situation, the homes have been selling at a record pace," Henderson reports.

Henderson feels that the S & S reputation for stability, top quality construction methods, and craftsmanship, meticulous attention to detail and outstanding customer service (an outgrowth of their motto "Pride of Quality"), has played a large role in this success.

* * * *

THE HOMES are planned for maximum versatility coupled with unusual beauty and elegance.

Every College Park home is constructed of genuine lath and plaster for the best in soundproofing, safety and ease of maintenance, although most other builders in the area have switched to drywall to cut costs.

Also an important factor in College Park's success is the large number of features which are offered as standard items rather than as optional extras.

Some of these standard features which are included in the purchase price, from $31,290, are imported marble entries, custom cut crystal chandeliers, plush wall to wall carpeting throughout, and a wide selection of natural stone brick or marble fireplaces from which to choose.

* * * *

SIZE IS another aspect of a College Park home. The homes are spacious enough to allow multiple activities to take place at once without infringing on each other.

Among the hundreds of other features which are a part of the new unit's makeup are the "Flower Fresh" kitchens and baths which are appointed with luminous ceilings, vinyl floor surfaces, master crafted cabinets, generous use of ceramic tile and walk-in pantries.

The three to six - bedrooms, two or three baths, and family room in one-story, two-story or split-level plans are available with no down VA, minimum down FHA or excellent conventional financing terms.

Furnished models are open daily. To visit College Park: take San Diego-Garden Grove Freeways to Valley View turnoff; go north to Cerulean; turn left to model area.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Each Construction Change Could Add to Total

By DON CAMPBELL

Except for a rabid wolverine, the world's most dangerous animal is undoubtedly a housewife who makes up her mind to order a "little change" in the plans of the house that is being built for her.

Both architects and builders have been known to break into tears at the sight of the owner's wife appearing on the scene when the new house is half-built.

MR. CAMPBELL:

We are having a running battle with the contractor who recently finished our new home for us over the matter of roughly $650 which he has billed us for "extras."

It's quite true that most of these changes in the original plans were dreamed up by us — or my wife, rather — in the middle of the job.

What makes us mad, though, is that when we ordered these changes the contractor indicated that these were minor matters that wouldn't change the cost much, if any.

Well, in my book, $650 is a lot of money and is no "minor" matter and I am thinking seriously of getting a lawyer, because the contractor misrepresented what these extras would cost. Don't you agree that he took advantage of us? — Mr. L. W.

ANSWER: He may have, or may not have — there's a good lawyer-like answer for you. This business of extras is probably the biggest cause of friction between home owner and contractor that the building industry experiences.

Sometimes this is because the builder will bid low on a job in order to get the contract and then try to flesh out his profit with "extras" where he isn't subject to competitive bidding. But, in even more cases, it arises simply because little additions occur to the buyer halfway through the job.

I don't see any way out for you here except to pay for the extras. Next time, however, specify in the contract that all extra charges must be in writing, signed by you, and specifying exactly what work is to be performed and what it is going to cost. It saves a lot of hard feelings on everyone's part.

PORTS O'PROGRESS

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

The port warden's office of the Los Angeles Harbor Department reported that during the past year its force of 35 men in boats, patrol cars, and on three-wheel motorcyles logged 9,000 hours patroling harbor waters and traveled more than 125,000 miles on land.

According to Capt. Lionel H. de Santy, the port warden's force rescued 25 persons, assisted 176 small craft in distress, and called for the removal of more than 300 floating hazards to navigation.

Skippers of the patrol boats cited more than 70 boaters for violation of safe boating laws and issued warnings to another 500 pleasure craft operators.

The errant boaters were encouraged to enroll in the safe small boat handling classes offered by the United States Power Squadron and the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Supporters of the "Bring-Back-the-San-Pedro-Terminal Island-Ferry" should be interested in the news the state is going to sell two famous San Diego ferries known for years as "nickle snatchers."

As in the case of the San Pedro-Terminal Island ferry, the two San Diego Bay ferries will have little value as ferries after a new bridge is completed.

The state has agreed to try to negotiate the sale of the two wooden ferries to "nostalgic local civic groups." Oldest of the wooden vessels, the North Island, was built in 1923. The other, the Silver Strand, dates back to 1927.

The two ferries previously were used in the Puget Sound area in Washington and later carried commuters across the Golden Gate between San Francisco and Marin County under the names Golden Shore and Golden West.

G.G. Firm Obtains Contract

Aer-O-Lite Draperies, Inc., Garden Grove, has been awarded the contract to manufacture and install the drapes and window coverings in the Travelodge Motor Hotel at Fisherman's Wharf, San Francisco, it was announced last week by Maury Silverman, president.

The contract will involve approximately 10,000 yards of various matrials and will include draperies for about 300 rooms including guest accommodations, public areas of the motel, the lobby, manager's operating and living quarters and several apartments to be located on the first floor.

* * * *

ONCE underway, the project will be completed in seven working days, according to Silverman. "The primary fabric to be used is the newly developed blackout material that completely excludes all light," he said.

Headquartered in Orange County, Aero-O-Lite provides draperies for hospitals, medical centers, commercial office ventures, hotels and residential developments across the nation.

Noble Furniture Opens New Paramount Office

Noble Furniture, Inc., will celebrate the opening of its new $375,000 30,000-square-foot office and factory building, 15250 Texaco St., Paramount, with a week-long open house and showing beginning Saturday, Ned Chapman, president and founder, announced.

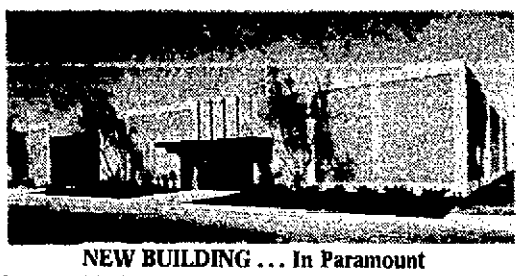

Of concrete, tilt-up construction, the new air-conditioned factory is equipped with a modern 11,000-foot conveyorized assembly and finishing system, Chapman said.

The building was designed and built by Pacific Land Company of Paramount and features a Mediterranean motif.

IN ADDITION to its milling, assembly, finishing and shipping departments, the building has a sound-proof laboratory for the testing and installation of electronic stereo equipment.

Additional floor space will be built this summer to accommodate the increasing volume of business as well as the production of Noble's new line of tables called "La Paz."

"La Paz," Chapman said, "Is our answer to the demand for table designs that fit our casual California mode of living, inspired by Mexican imports and "to it we have added certain refinements in design, construction, and materials."

NOBLE's merchandizing program for '69 will be the showing of Noble tables in correlation with lamps and upholstered pieces. "Correlated display is a new marketing concept in our industry giving visual evidence how our products work in relation to other furnishings and fixtures.

Assisting Chapman in the design of all Noble lines is Sherwood Prusso, Vice President. Both Chapman and Prusso have spent more than 20 years in the furniture manufacturing field. As partners they formed Noble Furniture Inc. in June, 1965.

Noble Furniture Opens New Paramount Office

Noble Furniture, Inc., will celebrate the opening of its new $375,000 30,000-square-foot office and factory building, 15250 Texaco St., Paramount, with a week-long open house and showing beginning Saturday, Ned Chapman, president and founder, announced.

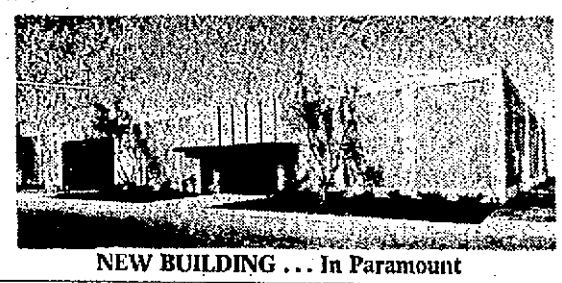

Of concrete, tilt-up construction, the new air-conditioned factory is equipped with a modern 11,000-foot conveyorized assembly and finishing system, Chapman said.

The building was designed and built by Pacific Land Company of Paramount and features a Mediterranean motif.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to its milling, assembly, finishing and shipping departments, the building has a sound-proof laboratory for the testing and installation of electronic stereo equipment.

Additional floor space will be built this summer to accommodate the increasing volume of business as well as the production of Noble's new line of tables called "La Paz."

NEW BUILDING . . . In Paramount

"La Paz," Chapman said, "is our answer to the demand for table designs that fit our casual California mode of living, inspired by Mexican imports and "to it we have added certain refinements in design, construction, and materials."

NOBLE's merchandizing program for '69 will be the showing of Noble tables in correlation with lamps and upholstered pieces. "Correlated display is a new marketing concept in our industry giving visual evidence how our products work in relation to other furnishings and fixtures.

Assisting Chapman in the design of all Noble lines is Sherwood Prusso, Vice President. Both Chapman and Prusso have spent more than 20 years in the furniture manufacturing field. As partners they formed Noble Furniture Inc. in June, 1965.

If you're renting for $135 a month, it's time you gave notice.

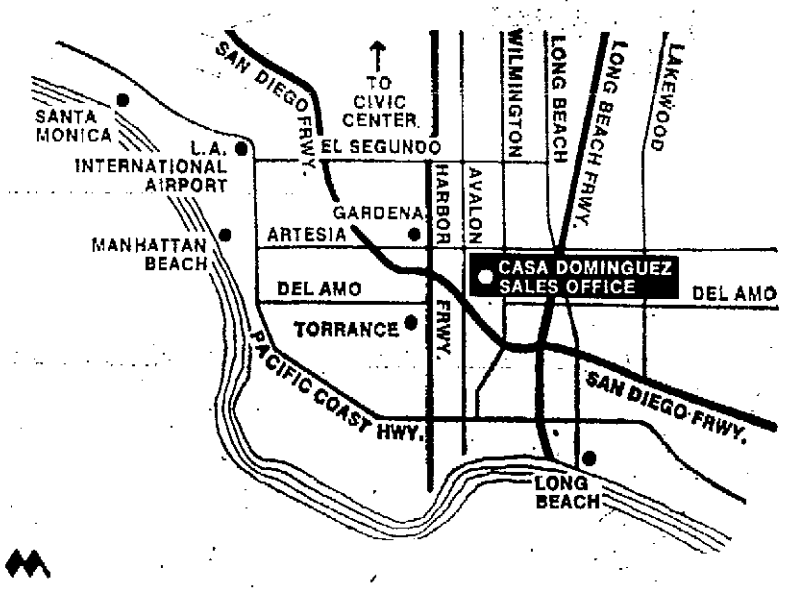

For as little as $55 more—or $190 a month—you can own a home at Casa Dominguez. That $190 includes principal, interest, taxes and insurance. So instead of paying the landlord, you pay on a sound investment and build equity. And you live more comfortably in the bargain.

Casa Dominguez offers 2, 3, 4 and 5-bedroom homes. You'll find patio kitchens with built-ins, formal dining rooms, family rooms, carpeting—and plenty of other extras. But you don't pay extra. It's all covered by the purchase price. You live in one of Los Angeles' last close-in locations, too. Leading employment centers are minutes away. Schools and shopping are near by. The community, itself, is served by the Harbor, Long Beach, and San Diego Freeways. You just couldn't ask for more convenience than that.

And Casa Dominguez homes range from a low $22,000.

At this price, who can afford to rent?

Take San Diego Freeway to Avalon Boulevard. Then straight to corner of Avalon and Del Amo Boulevards, site of Casa Dominguez Sales Pavilion. Phone (213) 327-6360.

What Your Name Means

By LA REINA RULE

Send your name to La Reina Rule, Post Office Box 64151, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: Please give data on McELRATH, McILWRAITHE. — T. M., Garden Grove; P. M., Long Beach.

McELRATH and McILWRAITHE, Irish, originated as the Gaelic clan-name MacGiolla Riabhaigh, deciphered as "descendants of the gray-haired youth." This clan was first recorded in Sligo and Clare, Ireland, where they owned Castle Craigbrien. Their armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with three gold-finned dolphins. Their motto "Ad finem fidelis" translates as "Faithful to the end."

MISS RULE: What have you on the origin of MAY? — V.M., Westminster.

MAY, English, is a 12th century condensation of "Maheu-son," the oldest French and English form of Matthew. This Biblical given-name described "Gift of God." William May was a Yorkshire land owner in 1379. The May armorial shield is red, decorated with a fur-covered chevron placed between three gold coronets. Early New England ancestors include George May of Essex, Mass., 1641

MISS RULE: Please give information on ECKERT. — W. B., Garden Grove.

ECKERT, German, has two ancient sources, Eich-Hardt, the primary origin, translates as a description of the ancestor, "powerful as an oak-tree." Eckert also stemmed from "Agi-Hardt" meaning "awe-inspiring and powerful."

MISS RULE: Kindly explain the origin of COLE. — V. C., Long Beach.

COLE, English, was derived from the middle three letters of the given-name Nicolas. The ancient Greek Nicolas meant "man of the victorious army." Cole was first used as an English family surname in the 1200s. The Cole armorial shield has a red bull on a silver background. New England records list the birth of a son to James Cole at Plymouth, Mass., in 1637.

THE WELLS REPORT

The Bartender

By Bob Wells

WHEN HE AWOKE, THE drawn roller shade gleamed a twilight yellow, but around its edges the white light of midday slopped into the darkened room, flung itself against the bureau mirror and ricocheted off the whiteness of shirts visible through the open closet door.

It was late. He glanced at his wristwatch. Past noon. He turned on the radio and went into the bathroom. Behind him a KFWB newscast rearranged the silence of the apartment.

He kept the small transistor tuned to KFWB, but turned it on only in the morning. At night when he was home, which was not often, he turned on the TV. Some people who live alone keep the stereo going day and night. But he needed voices. Music intensified loneliness. He didn't own a stereo.

The face in the mirror stared impassively back at him as he lathered and shaved it. He tried to decide if it looked older or younger than 42. He couldn't make up his mind. He wondered how his son saw it. Probably older. Yesterday was his day off and after his weekly golf date he had picked up his son and taken him to dinner.

HE FINISHED dressing and went into his living room to feed the fish.

He had purchased the fish and their elaborate aquarium from a bar owner who was redecorating. They were tropical fish, but he had never taken the trouble to find out what kind. At first they amused him. Soon they bored him and finally their goggle-eyed silence began to get on his nerves. He would have gotten rid of them, but the thought of giving away the expensive aquarium bothered him. He didn't know where he might sell it, or what he should charge for it if he did find a buyer.

He finished feeding the fish, fixed his own breakfast and began his household chores. He found himself thinking about his son. The boy was having problems with his high school studies. There seemed to be nothing he could do about it; the boy's mother would not even discuss it with him.

SHE HAD DIVORCED HIM during his alcoholic period and remarried. He tried to remember how it had been when they were still married. Although he could remember incidents clearly, he could not recall his feelings.

He was still trying to put down vague feelings of guilt about his son when at 5:30 he left his apartment and walked up Park to Second St. That was part of the routine, too. Except for golf once a week, the daily walk was the only exercise he got. And he had discovered that an unvarying daily routine was an important defense against a relapse into alcoholism.

He bought a paper and read it over a chili size at Hoff's. Afterward, he walked to work. There was a good crowd for late afternoon in the bar. The day bartender gave him a preoccupied hello and went on filling orders. He went into the office and exchanged his sport coat for his bartender's jacket.

He was checking out his change with the day bartender when the night bar waitress arrived. She was a dark-haired divorcee in her mid-thirties who worked only two nights a week as relief for the regular night waitress.

She had a small child and a full-time day job as a secretary. At first she had been inexperienced, but — lured by dreams of large tips — eager to learn. She soon discovered that the regular waitress took her nights off when the tips were smallest. As the relief waitress's perception of reality increased, her enthusiasm diminished. The night bartender consoled himself with the thought that eventually she would quit. He hoped it would be soon.

THE LATE AFTERNOON crowd lingered on: indeed, it grew. The night bartender found himself with his hands full until after 7:30 p.m. Then, the customers — all of them men — began drifting out.

He liked to keep busy. Otherwise, time dragged and two o'clock never came. When a night was quiet there was too much time to think. What was that they called a bartender — the poor man's psychiatrist? Well, he liked a busy waiting room. Otherwise, there was too much time to smell the smoky odor of the Scotch he poured. He kept his eyes on the shot glass as he poured and avoided looking into the drink itself. He had spent too many nights staring straight down into those glasses, breathing the peaty, anesthetic fumes as they rose.

There had been good times in those drinking days. There had been youth and hope and big deals that were coming his way tomorrow or the next day. There had been his marriage — the four years he had tried to break away from the bar business by selling real estate. But he had drunk more as a real estate salesman than he had as a bartender.

There were also the three 502s, the unpaid bills, the divorce and finally AA and the return to the only trade he really knew — bartending.

THE PIANO PLAYER came in and deposited a huge armful of music beneath the piano bar. Each night he brought in that armful of music, but he never used it. If he couldn't play a request from memory, he begged off.

The night bartender often wondered why the pianist brought all that music with him, but it never occurred to the bartender to ask the pianist. Only drunks asked questions like that.

A few customers drifted in and sat at the piano bar, but the night dragged. There was a television behind the bar, and the bartender's eyes went to it frequently, but he couldn't turn it on while the pianist was playing.

After midnight, the few customers wandered off. When he locked up at 2 a.m., only he and the waitress were left in the place. As they cleaned up, she complained about her tips. He got tired of hearing her, sent her home and finished up himself.

HE WALKED HOME down a deserted Second St., past a few dispirited night people in Hoff's and turned down his street. He unlocked the door of his apartment and entered.

He had left the aquarium lights on. They lit the room with a greenish glow. In their silent world, his stupid fish swam their perpetual, aimless patrol. He came up to the glass and the fish turned and stared at him. He stared back. They opened and closed their mouths at him. He felt an unreasonable anger.

"Damn you," he told the fish. "You've got mouths just like drunks. Open and close. One of these nights I'm going to fall off the wagon and come home and put you all down the garbage disposer forever."

The fish stared. He turned away frightened. One of these nights it was possible he might do that.

LESS THAN TWO years ago the membership rolls of the Long Beach Junior Chamber of Commerce stood at 30. As a voice in the community, the Jaycees were about as powerful as an opera singer with laryngitis.

There are more than 300 organizations in Long Beach, many of which have few members and little or no influence, but for the Junior Chamber to be so devoid of manpower and in such an apathetic state was unnatural to its national heritage and embarrassing in light of its background here.

Twenty years ago the Jaycees numbered 1,350 members and operated on a budget of $50,000. Their position in the community was strong enough to lure a state convention and persuasive enough to be the guiding force behind the building of Veterans Memorial Stadium.

It is with no small measure of pride, and a deep sense of obligation, that the present leaders of the Junior Chamber are doggedly rebuilding their image in Long Beach. That dying group of 30 in June of 1967 is now just shy of 200, and a spring membership drive should shove the figure higher.

More important than sheer numbers, the Jaycees have increased their operating budget to $18,000 to cover nearly 25 projects, more than half of which benefit the community rather than the Jaycee treasury. A good number of projects represent the best of yesteryear but the majority are new.

In the age of the heart transplant, the Jaycees can look back without fear to that period of 20 months ago when they were slipping badly and in need of a stronger heartbeat. The recovery started with two men and was nursed along by a buoyant board of directors numbering 12.

The return to respectability began with a dentist, Dr. Ed Cruchley, and, ironically, a mortician, Jack Dilday, whose late father was a former Jaycee president. They became co-chairmen in charge of membership, and their task was obvious: pump new blood into the Junior Chamber.

"Jack and I had enough friends we could browbeat into joining," Dr. Cruchley recalls, "but keeping them interested and active was the problem. The Jaycees hadn't achieved much in recent years, so we had to convince everyone what we could do, not what we had done. It wasn't easy."

A man who deals in specialty advertising, Bob Krueger, became the first president of the "new" Jaycees in June of 1967. His board was made up of men from a variety of professions. They were Jim Stutz, banker; Al Stearns, bookkeeper; Ken Houp, insurance; Bob Fernald, electrician; Travis Montgomery, realty; Ron Banco, architect; Paul Janich, psychologist; Jim Andrews, printing; Cruchley, Dilday and the man whose name is at the top of this story. All except Montgomery and Banco ran for re-election and won. Joining the new and enlarged board were Paul Phillips, steel; Mike Driscoll, insurance; Jerry Edgmon, attorney; and Len Schneider, air conditioning. Fernald was elected president.

The first year was one of trial and error. Not only were directorships added and withdrawn, but duties were changed and by-laws rewritten. Projects were discarded and new ones initiated. The budget started in the red and wound up solidly in the black.

The struggle for identity and purpose through this building process was undergirded by the fact that all directors had a sense of responsibility to-

Animals Are Stars in His Movies

By Lorraine Gauguin

SCANNING LARRY LANSBURGH'S CREDIT list for Walt Disney Productions, you know he's an animal lover: "Stormy, the Thoroughbred," "Horse of the West," "The Tattooed Police Horse," "Arizona Sheepdog," "Greta, the Misfit Greyhound," "Cow Dog" and the two Academy Award winners, "The Wetback Hound" and "The Horse With the Flying Tail." Lansburgh also made the first full-length motion picture for Disney, "The Littlest Outlaw."

"It's lasted a long time," he says. "And it made a lot of money for Disney."

Life on Lansburgh's acre and a quarter in La Canada Is pastoral, far from the swinging Sunset Strip. It's all fenced in, with four or five sheep and two young sheep dogs he works out in the evening. "That's my therapy," he says. The dogs jump to their feet when he approaches and run over to the sheep. "They love those silly sheep," he says. Then, in a low conversational tone he says, "Turn around," and the dogs are off herding the sheep from one side of the enclosure to the other. "This place isn't zoned for animals," he explains, "but we have a few nice neighbors who like wild life. I have the dogs and the sheep but over the years I've had some nice coyotes and a bear — a cub, not a big one — and an ostrich. Holy Smoke, the horse that starred in 'Run, Appaloosa, Run,' is stabled over in Flintridge, only five minutes away. I've also got two of the top cutting horses on the West Coast. Those are horses who cut cows out of the herd and win points. They take a lot of training as they do most of their work alone. The sheep dogs are a great hobby with me and I go up to Sacramento and work the big herds with them."

Lansburgh is tired of being called "the cowboy with a camera, dragging his heels." Actually he comes from a prominent California family, grew up in San Mateo on the San Francisco Peninsula and learned to ride when his father leased the old Leland Stanford stock farm on the Stanford University campus. His father, G. Albert Lansburgh, was a noted architect who designed the San Francisco Opera House and the Orpheum Circuit theaters across the country.

Larry Lansburgh was an expert horseman by the time he was 12. As a teen-ager he competed in rodeos and did roping, trick riding and jumping. In the thirties he struck out on his own and worked ranches all over the West in order to learn the livestock business. He arrived in Hollywood during the Depression filled with ambitious ideas about making short subjects about animals. He tried to sell some of the big studios his wild life projects but couldn't get his foot in the door.

"All the good writers and newspapermen were starving, nobody could get a job. The only thing I really knew was riding horses so I got some jobs as a stunt man and was living off the fat of the land. I guess I was making more money than a lot of writers. I thought I was invincible, though, and one day doubling Barbara Stanwyck in a movie the horse and I crashed into a wall and I shattered my leg. I couldn't walk for two years and I guess it was a blessing because it gave me a chance to really write and forget about stunt riding."

When his leg mended he moved into the Uplifters Club and there on the polo field he met Walt Disney. Disney was unaware that Lansburgh was working at the Disney Studio as a messenger boy and studying photography at Art Center. Lansburgh worked for Disney during the day and made his own movies at night and on weekends.

"I had no background — the movies were awful but they had style," he recalls. "After all, none of the big studios would let me make a picture so I thought I'd go ahead and make one myself. Nobody could stop me. I always wanted to write. I studied but after awhile I decided that perhaps I could write better with a camera."

LARRY LANSBURGH... He talks to animals.

He finally sold a couple of his short subjects to a major studio and he began accumulating credits as a writer, cameraman and director. Disney could no longer ignore the incipient genius running around his studio delivering messages. Walt took him to South America in 1940 and let him loose with a camera. Much of Lansburgh's footage was used in the classic "Saludos Amigos." From his weekend labors he sold "Canine Commandos" and "The Beauty and the Beast," the story of Betty Ford, a onetime model who became bullfighter in Mexico. It won him his first Academy Award nomination.

"You know, Walt enjoyed my pictures as much as anyone," says Lansburgh. "When I ran 'Run, Appaloosa, Run' at the studio for him just before he passed away he sat on the edge of the seat with excitement during the big suicide race. When it was over Walt said, 'Gee, it's a good thing your girl could ride.' I didn't have the heart to tell him we used a double. But if Walt couldn't tell the girl was a double nobody ever would.

"Walt and I had a wonderful relationship. I would finance the tests and the screenplay, then Walt would give me a certain amount for the production and I was on my own. I own all my equipment and never work at the studio.

"It always takes me a year to make a film. My pictures are hand-woven. Sure, it only takes three months to shoot the thing, but by the time you get your story idea, write it, sell it, survey for locations, make it and clean up the mess you've made it's a year any way you look at it. It's hard making pictures my way, but I have the last word on the whole production. It's mostly hard work. Sure, you pick up the awards, if you're lucky, in a black tie but you've earned it in bluejeans. My pictures are not documentaries, maybe they're dramamentaries. I always search for the drama, that third act, yet I want the realism of a documentary. This is the idea I've always had from the beginning and, of course, the man who liked them and felt they fit into his medium of the family audience was Walt Disney. We don't use sex. We don't use tired old studio streets, barrooms or process shots. We use real sets — the great outdoors."

Some of his greatest moments on film were Inspirational.

While making "The Wetback Hound" on the Mexican border he saw an old Mexican wearing a Pancho Villa hat, bib overalls and gold rimmed spectacles driving an antique jalopy. Lansburgh stopped the car and asked him to appear in the picture but the old man said he couldn't do the scene because he was taking a bagful of groceries to his wife. Lansburgh sent the groceries home in a taxi and the 75-year-old gentleman's touching scenes with Paco, the Wetback Hound, helped win an Academy Award.

Another time, in Gallup, N.M., Lansburgh was filming another Award winner, "The Horse With the Flying Tail." He needed an old Indian and the sheriff said he had a great type locked up in the city jail. Lansburgh went over to the local pokey and decided the Indian was perfect. He borrowed him and promised to bring him back.

"It turned out that he was just great," says Lansburgh. "He drove an old wagon on the Indian reservation and the horse with the flying tail came up and stole corn from the wagon. Th Indian had a lot of fun making the picture. He was a real fine Indian and he went back to jail when we were finished. Seems he shot up a saloon or something but he hadn't hurt anybody."

Film making hasn't been easy for Lansburgh, who discovered that he had to become an amateur veterinarian when he got out in the sticks or on the desert and one of the animals became ill. He usually works with Jay Sisler, whom he considers the finest dog trainer in the world, and stunt man Jerry Gatlin. While filming "Run, Appaloosa, Run" in eastern Washington, Holy Smoke, the star horse, almost drowned in quicksand. Jerry Gatlin jumped in and managed to get a rope around the horse's neck, then Lansburgh and the rest of the crew pulled them out.

During the suicide race at the end of the film, Lansburgh on one of his mounts galloped headlong down a 250-foot perpendicular bluff holding a hand camera, grinding film of Mary Backfeather, the Nez Perce Indian girl who wins the race. In the tangle of horses and riders they must pass a baton in this simulation of the real suicide race which is held annually in Washington. Lansburgh doesn't like to admit that he and several stunt men got into the race and passed batons because the real racers couldn't keep within the camera frame.

"I never like to get in my own pictures," he says. "The only thing I put in them is sweat." He admits his favorite film animal is the horse. "All through history the great artists used a horse someplace in their work. Photographically he fits the wide screen well, his dimensions are perfect, he flows, there's action. He's free and he moves right, that's why I like him."

Last year Lansburgh went to Washington, D.C., under assignment from the Disney Studio, to take complete charge of the filming of the International Horse Show sequences for "The Horse in the Gray Flannel Suit," starring Dean Jones. There Lansburgh worked in a tuxedo, and not his usual blue jeans.

Animals Are Stars in His Movies

By Lorraine Gauguin

SCANNING LARRY LANSBURGH'S CREDIT list for Walt Disney Productions, you know he's an animal lover: "Stormy, the Thoroughbred," "Horse of the West," "The Tattooed Police Horse," "Arizona Sheepdog," "Greta, the Misfit Greyhound," "Cow Dog" and the two Academy Award winners, "The Wetback Hound" and "The Horse With the Flying Tail." Lansburgh also made the first full-length motion picture for Disney, "The Littlest Outlaw."

"It's lasted a long time," he says. "And it made a lot of money for Disney."

Life on Lansburgh's acre and a quarter in La Canada is pastoral, far from the swinging Sunset Strip. It's all fenced in, with four or five sheep and two young sheep dogs he works out in the evening. "That's my therapy," he says. The dogs jump to their feet when he approaches and run over to the sheep. "They love those silly sheep," he says. Then, in a low conversational tone he says, "Turn around," and the dogs are off herding the sheep from one side of the enclosure to the other. "This place isn't zoned for animals," he explains, "but we have a few nice neighbors who like wild life. I have the dogs and the sheep but over the years I've had some nice coyotes and a bear — a cub, not a big one — and an ostrich. Holy Smoke, the horse that starred in 'Run, Appaloosa, Run,' is stabled over in Flintridge, only five minutes away. I've also got two of the top cutting horses on the West Coast. Those are horses who cut cows out of the herd and win points. They take a lot of training as they do most of their work alone. The sheep dogs are a great hobby with me and I go up to Sacramento and work the big herds with them."

Lansburgh is tired of being called "the cowboy with a camera, dragging his heels." Actually he comes from a prominent California family, grew up in San Mateo on the San Francisco Peninsula and learned to ride when his father leased the old Leland Stanford stock farm on the Stanford University campus. His father, G. Albert Lansburgh, was a noted architect who designed the San Francisco Opera House and the Orpheum Circuit theaters across the country.

Larry Lansburgh was an expert horseman by the time he was 12. As a teen-ager he competed in rodeos and did roping, trick riding and jumping. In the thirties he struck out on his own and worked ranches all over the West in order to learn the livestock business. He arrived in Hollywood during the Depression filled with ambitious ideas about making short subjects about animals. He tried to sell some of the big studios his wild life projects but couldn't get his foot in the door.

"All the good writers and newspapermen were starving, nobody could get a job. The only thing I really knew was riding horses so I got some jobs as a stunt man and was living off the fat of the land. I guess I was making more money than a lot of writers. I thought I was invincible, though, and one day doubling Barbara Stanwyck in a movie the horse and I crashed into a wall and I shattered my leg. I couldn't walk for two years and I guess it was a blessing because it gave me a chance to really write and forget about stunt riding."

When his leg mended he moved into the Uplifters Club and there on the polo field he met Walt Disney. Disney was unaware that Lansburgh was working at the Disney Studio as a messenger boy and studying photography at Art Center. Lansburgh worked for Disney during the day and made his own movies at night and on weekends.

"I had no background — the movies were awful but they had style," he recalls. "After all, none of the big studios would let me make a picture so I thought I'd go ahead and make one myself. Nobody could stop me. I always wanted to write. I studied but after awhile I decided that perhaps I could write better with a camera."

LARRY LANSBURGH... He talks to animals.

He finally sold a couple of his short subjects to a major studio and he began accumulating credits as a writer, cameraman and director. Disney could no longer ignore the incipient genius running around his studio delivering messages. Walt took him to South America in 1940 and let him loose with a camera. Much of Lansburgh's footage was used in the classic "Saludos Amigos." From his weekend labors he sold "Canine Commandos" and "The Beauty and the Beast," the story of Betty Ford, a onetime model who became bullfighter in Mexico. It won him his first Academy Award nomination.

"You know, Walt enjoyed my pictures as much as anyone," says Lansburgh. "When I ran 'Run, Appaloosa, Run' at the studio for him just before he passed away he sat on the edge of the seat with excitement during the big suicide race. When it was over Walt said, 'Gee, it's a good thing your girl could ride.' I didn't have the heart to tell him we used a double. But if Walt couldn't tell the girl was a double nobody ever would.

"Walt and I had a wonderful relationship. I would finance the tests and the screenplay, then Walt would give me a certain amount for the production and I was on my own. I own all my equipment and never work at the studio.

"It always takes me a year to make a film. My pictures are hand-woven. Sure, it only takes three months to shoot the thing, but by the time you get your story idea, write it, sell it, survey for locations, make it and clean up the mess you've made it's a year any way you look at it. It's hard making pictures my way, but I have the last word on the whole production. It's mostly hard work. Sure, you pick up the awards, if you're lucky, in a black tie but you've earned it in bluejeans. My pictures are not documentaries, maybe they're dramamentaries. I always search for the drama, that third act, yet I want the realism of a documentary. This is the idea I've always had from the beginning and, of course, the man who liked them and felt they fit into his medium of the family audience was Walt Disney. We don't use sex. We don't use tired old studio streets, barrooms or process shots. We use real sets — the great outdoors."

Some of his greatest moments on film were inspirational.

While making "The Wetback Hound" on the Mexican border he saw an old Mexican wearing a Pancho Villa hat, bib overalls and gold rimmed spectacles driving an antique jalopy. Lansburgh stopped the car and asked him to appear in the picture but the old man said he couldn't do the scene because he was taking a bagful of groceries to his wife. Lansburgh sent the groceries home in a taxi and the 75-year-old gentleman's touching scenes with Paco, the Wetback Hound, helped win an Academy Award.

Another time, in Gallup, N.M., Lansburgh was filming another Award winner, "The Horse With the Flying Tail." He needed an old Indian and the sheriff said he had a great type locked up in the city jail. Lansburgh went over to the local pokey and decided the Indian was perfect. He borrowed him and promised to bring him back.

"It turned out that he was just great," says Lansburgh. "He drove an old wagon on the Indian reservation and the horse with the flying tail came up and stole corn from the wagon. Th Indian had a lot of fun making the picture. He was a real fine Indian and he went back to jail when we were finished. Seems he shot up a saloun or something but he hadn't hurt anybody."

Film making hasn't been easy for Lansburgh, who discovered that he had to become an amateur veterinarian when he got out in the sticks or on the desert and one of the animals became ill. He usually works with Jay Sisler, whom he considers the finest dog trainer in the world, and stunt man Jerry Gatlin. Swinging Bachelors of Disneyland

By Scott Stephens

STREET MUSIC — the granddaddy of all jazz — plays a major part in re-creating the spirit and atmosphere of old New Orleans at Disneyland.

The heart of a bygone era lives on in the talents of the Royal Street Bachelors, three veteran jazzmen who stroll daily along the winding streets of romantic New Orleans Square.

Clarinet, banjo and bass fiddle become more than just instruments in the expressive hands of Jack McVea, Hal Grant and Herb Cordy.

It doesn't take a jazz buff to sense the special feeling poured into their close-knit harmonies.

The soft, rhythmic music appeals to everyone from toddlers to grandparents.

This is true soul music — not in the modern "hip" sense but in a deeper meaning of music flowing straight from the heart. It shows not only in the sounds they produce but in the faces of the Bachelor trio.

As listeners gather, enthralled by the slow-swinging jazz, their reaction frequently causes the Bachelors' easy style to erupt into a controlled musical free-for-all, turning back the clock to those New Orleans days when jazz was played without written music but with pure musical feeling.

Since coming together at Disneyland in 1967, the Bachelors have probably had more musical togetherness than most combos accumulate in a decade — more than 2,000 hours of continuous performances for millions of Disneyland guests.

Altogether their musical experience totals 115 years.

Before Disneyland, the three jazzmen played individually with internationally known bands and combos from one end of the country to another.

Leader Jack McVea began playing clarinet professionally at age 12. It was a sideline to his main job, playing banjo in his father's jazz band. In later years, his clarinet was heard with Count Basie, Lionel Hampton and his own "Jack McVea and his All Stars."

Bass player Herb Cordy, whose agile fingers turn a bull fiddle into a melodic solo instrument, has been an outstanding jazz arranger for most of his 35-year professional career.

His arrangements have been heard in many motion pictures. When he takes off on a bass solo, however, it's clear those fingers have lost none of their magic in "slapping" the bass.

Harold Grant, whose banjo is probably the oldest of jazz instruments, has been playing with bands most of his life.

Eleven of his 38 years in the jazz business were spent with Sonny Ligget and his Honey Drippers. All three Bachelors have played for recording sessions and in night clubs with top jazz groups across the country.

Typical of the old-time street musicians in New Orleans, the Royal Street Bachelors have a repertoire so vast it would take a week to perform and they usually can play along with any tune they hear.

While most of their music is Dixie - inspired, they easily break into a chorus of "Sukiyaki" for Japanese members of the Disneyland audience or "A Shadow of Your Smile" for the young couple strolling by holding hands beneath the balconies of New Orleans Square.

It's obvious to their listeners that the Bachelors have found a real home for their jazz and love their music as much as the thousands who listen to them each day.

As in so many other areas of Disneyland, music helps create a memorable experience for visitors from all over the world. Nowhere is this more evident than with the Royal Street Bachelors of New Orleans Square.

Listeners of all ages are fascinated by the musical sounds produced by the Royal Street Bachelors, who regularly stroll the streets of New Orleans Square at Disneyland playing jazz tunes.

A Man for All Designs

By Ellen Krec

The swinging egg basket is one of Miller Yee Fong's designs for living today.

WHEN the question of furniture designers arises, I am sure the first thought turns to good old Duncan P. or Chippendale, Mayhew or Hepplewhite with even a question about poor old Mayhew.

I doubt seriously if most persons give more than a passing instant to the concept of original designs or reproduction.

As far back as the 13th century, when fabrics were used to give character to furnishings, the use of architectural forms in ornamental furnishings began to increase.

Steady progress was made by the architect throughout the intervening centuries—through tons of gilt and miles of carving.

So it appears Frank Lloyd Wright enjoyed a minor reputation as a furniture designer, or at least influenced the designer with his contemporary ideas.

There really isn't such a wide path of understanding between furniture design and architecture. Le Corbusier, Wegner, Van Der Rohe, Saarinen all were responsible for some classic furniture.

But what about the "now" in furniture? There are master craftsman Sam Maloof, aesthetic Charles Eames and even Long Beach native Gerry McCabe, who does some very exciting things with stainless steel, glass and simplistic design.

But for a look at what makes the "lively ones of furniture design," I spent some time with Miller Yee Fong, AIA, of Los Angeles.

In his 27 years Fong has managed to combine degrees at USC, which included two majors . . . architecture and industrial design—with a lovely wife and two children, a career with Bechtel Corp. and a major interest in Tropical, a family-owned business.

Aside from that he enjoys occasional art forays into fields as unrelated as photography, graphics and toy making!

His "young home concept" is tailored to fit any age and includes a sweeping, spatial two-level home he designed for his family to the more formal atmosphere desired by a second hillside home owner.

Both houses have the "form following function" concept with rare insight into individual life problems.

But his avocation was my interest when I discovered his award-winning design . . . the lotus chair.

The wicker, rattan chair almost begs for company with wide formed sides in a womb-like appearance. Adding to the comfort are squashed back and bottom cushions and a nicely balanced pedestal-type base. The name is apt, since it appears to bloom from a single stem.

But from back in the past I recalled an even more radical design I had seen in the company with some unexpected interiors, the swinging egg chair.

The term is descriptive since the rattan is formed into a cushioned egg shape and extended from the ceiling by chain. Fong, I learned, was the creator of the chair I had admired in living room, bedroom and den of some of the more exciting homes.

When I asked Fong why his interest in furniture design, he replied: "Architects should design furniture, it is based on the same theory of design although on a more simplistic base. The furniture should establish consistency of design in the overall scheme of living.

He admits more modestly that his father . . . also a designer of note . . . Danny Ho Fong . . . is the better furniture designer. He attributes his personal designs to specific concepts he desires to meet the set rules. For instance a chair must have a seat, back and legs in order to function as a chair. From that point the design becomes an extension of the human body combined with aesthetic values.

"But my father is different," says Danny's boy. "His agile mind is a natural in the field of furniture design and he produces furniture that anyone could accept."

Architecture is still his first love and among the "lively ideas" he has used successfully is the spatial home with the broad view overlooking the rear area and the interior design planned so well that the children can be seen at any given moment from anywhere in the house.

A second-story garage creates an exciting entrance which it shares with a master bedroom balconied above the living quarters.

Not one to overlook detail, Fong included an upside-down drawer to serve his children as a step up to the toothbrushing.

He feels, personally, that a fireplace is rigid and demands a too-static furniture placement . . . and he does have a valid point.

A chip off the old drawing board is Miller Yee Fong, AIA, but the ideas are clearly his own.

First of All, Learn English

"TELL IT LIKE IT IS!" scream the ungrammatical campus rebels.

The idea is praiseworthy, but the rebels themselves are the ones most unable to do so.

They have not learned the No. 1 rule of power-seeking in an English-speaking country. It is simple: Learn English!

The rebels have discarded meaningful language. They resort to gutter talk — the profane, obscene billingsgate of men who simply don't know many words. They do this partly to shock — but even the shock is lost because it is impossible to go on shocking people with the same filth. They presently become bored.

Nor do the rebels use gutter talk with nicety. Those four-letter words once had precise meaning. Now they don't mean anything at all.

There is no need for them to revert to the florid snobbery of the literary aristocracy or the prissy circumlocutions of the puritans. Those rebels who can read might start with studying the plain English of Ernest Hemingway.

Our language has many levels. Success depends on being able to use the proper language for the level on which one wants to be. The doctor who cannot talk and think the language of medicine has no future. And many a man has lost the girl of his dreams because he consistently said "He don't."

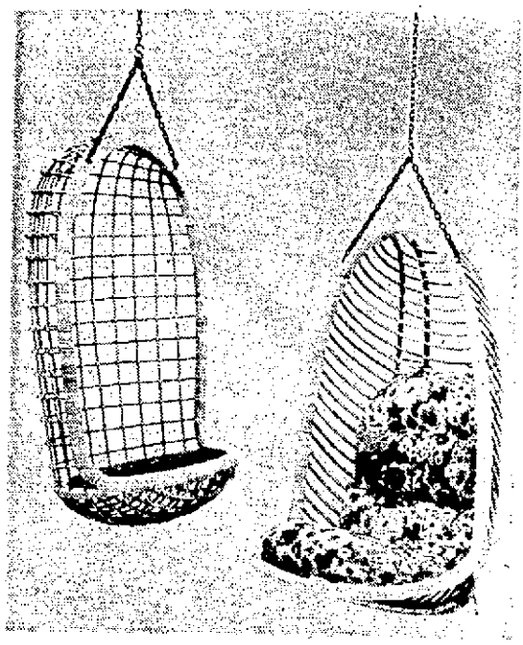

Great rebels, good or bad, have always understood the value of language skill. The Founding Fathers wrote distinguished prose. Karl Marx knew how to say what he meant. Even the gutter-snipe Hitler wrote and spoke German that swayed that literary country.

The campus rebels who really want revolution have a golden opportunity: They can enroll in Freshman English Composition and learn how to make weapons of words.

Without the words they will never be able to win the minds of men. — Patrick Hughes.

'Home' for Delinquents

By Tom Willman

THE LOBBY walls at Los Padrinos are covered with colorful children's art, like the office of an elementary school, and the grassy compound and neat bungalows beyond sharpen the impression that this is a place where young people come to learn.

But a 15-foot wall surrounds the grounds, and the doors lock automatically. The lesson taught here is how to rejoin society — Los Padrinos is a juvenile detention center.

Situated at the end of a back street in Downey, Los Padrinos Juvenile Hall was built in 1957. Since then, the 23-acre center has been constantly filled with delinquent juvenile court wards from Long Beach and San Pedro to Lakewood, Compton and Whittier.

Los Padrinos is equipped to handle approximately 300 youths at a time. But as the third largest of four such facilities under the Los Angeles County Probation Department, its population often goes beyond that.

"We also get children who live out of the area if there's an excess at Central Juvenile Hall," said Mrs. Eula May Neal, a deputy probation officer on the Los Padrinos staff. "And there's always an excess, so we get them."

The county facilities are necessary because cities have no such centers for delinquent minors.

Long Beach has only a ward at the jail, so after a youth's arrest and appearance in court, he or she is sent to Los Padrinos if a detention order is filed.

The youths — both boys and girls — who come to the center range in age from 8 to 18. They make the trip from Los Angeles in a battleship-gray bus, and often find themselves situated in makeshift living quarters when they arrive.

Most youths are housed in tiny single rooms, but, because of the excess, new arrivals at the center often sleep on mattresses on the floor together in some larger rooms.

When a bed is vacated, it is then taken by the boy or girl who has been on the floor the longest.

Recently, Los Padrinos held 250 boys and 130 girls — about 80 beyond planned capacity.

Inside the compound, the new arrivals are greeted by a wide expanse of lawn. At one end is a tree-lined duck pond, and ducks, chickens and cats all roam the courtyard.

Boys' dorms line this yard, which also contains a swimming pool and a small recreation hall. Across a wire fence are other facilities such as athletic fields, girls' dorms and the Adjustment Center, a small self-contained unit for unmanageable cases.

Girls are allowed to decorate their rooms with objects that are not harmful, such as crepe paper, handicrafts or dolls.

Each tiny cubicle has just enough room for the bed and small dresser with which it is furnished, but many of them are hung with colored paper or art works.

Others, not so neatly kept, are plain and sober.

"You can almost tell girls' personalities from their rooms," said Mrs. Neal.

Personalities and interests differ because of the large area from which the girls come. When sometimes they are allowed to dance together before lights-out at 9 p.m., the music will reflect different tastes as well as the pounding beat popular with the young.

"The children adjust extremely well, considering they come from all areas of the county," noted Mrs. Neal. Yet 50 per cent of the young people now in Los Padrinos will eventually be sent back.

A high turnover rate among staff personnel hinders the readjustment process, according to Mrs. Neal.

"Some people find that this work isn't exactly what they want to do," she said. "Others don't like the hours."

Lack of encouragement from home presents another stumbling block for the readjustment process. "Most parents are interested in their kids," said Sherman Nickerson, another deputy probation officer at Los Padrinos, "but if it costs a person $5 for a visit from Watts, and the parents are on welfare, they probably won't make the visit."

Although some extreme cases have remained at the center for a year, the youths usually spend less than a month at Los Padrinos before they are relocated at more highly specialized schools or forestry camps.

According to Mrs. Neal, the temporary nature of Los Padrinos allows only a meager attempt at therapy. But she added, "Our main goal at Los Padrinos is to start them on the road back to being adjusted."

Delinquent juvenile court wards are sent to Los Padrinos detention center.

Jazz Concert

Two of America's foremost purveyors of jazz, Dave Brubeck and Gerry Mulligan, will do a one-night show together Saturday at Santa Monica Civic Auditorium. Mulligan will be featured with Dave's famed Quartet.

Both men are outstanding musicians. But each represents a different category of "La Jazz-Hot," as the French call it.

Brubeck, a great pianist, pioneered modern, contempory jazz. In his early days his improvisations shocked the purists, but attracted the attention of millions all over the world because his music-making was "new," and "now!"

Saxophonist Mulligan, on the other hand, has risen to fame with his exciting interpretations of traditional jazz.

COIN ROUNDUP

Seigniorage Up for U.S. Mint

By Maurice M. Gould

SEIGNIORAGE IS THE TERM for any profits or charges arising from the minting of coins from bullion, usually the difference in face value and intrinsic value. We hear of it frequently these days.

The question of seigniorage in the United States goes back to 1790 when Alexander Hamilton was the first secretary of the Treasury. Hamilton's views on the subject were generally unfavorable. He preferred to have the metallic value of coins equal their monetary value, believing that counterfeiters would be induced to duplicate coins if the monetary value exceeded the metallic value.

In spite of Hamilton's recommendations, seigniorage did not disappear. Increased coin production after 1795 resulted in lower minting costs, and the weight of some of the minor coins was reduced.

In 1800, the U.S. Mint showed a net profit of about $5,000 on coinage, and in the years that followed a small margin of seigniorage was usually realized.

Between 1934 and 1964, the silver seigniorage in the United States amounted to $1,172.9 million and originated from the revaluation of silver bullion behind silver certificates; $743.3 million was from the production of silver coins. This was the result of increases in the price of silver over those 30 years and the Congressional Law of May, 1933, that permitted the Treasury to hold silver in either bullion form or coins as reserve backing for the Treasury's silver certificates in circulation.

Since 1964, seigniorage on coin production has risen sharply, due to the expanded demand for coins. Reflecting the growth of coin-operated machines, the U.S. Mint had to produce increased numbers of coins.

The total number of coins produced more than doubled between 1944 and 1966, and coinage seigniorage increased from $68.7 million to $643 million. Seigniorage in 1967 amounted to $834 million, so one can see the large amounts of money the government obtains through this channel.

Q—Do the U.S. 3-cent pieces issued many years ago have mintmarks?

A—These pieces, made of nickel and issued from 1865 to 1889, do not have mintmarks. The U.S. silver 3-cent pieces, issued from 1851 to 1873, have one date with a mintmark — the 1851, struck at the New Orleans Mint, which has the letter "O" on the reverse, with 720,000 minted.

Q—I know the grading of coins is important when one sells them. How can I tell the grading of my coins?

A—There are a number of good books available for grading, such as the Brown & Dunn. The "Guide Book of U.S. Coins" tells how to grade coins with the definitions broken down for the various grades. They are a great factor in determining the price.

"A THIRD GENERATION CONSTRUCTION FAMILY"

Why Ralphie Can't Read

"MY SON is 3 years old but he still can't read very well," wrote Ralph Waldo Emerson's father.

The ages vary -- "My son is 16 but . . . " — but every parent goes through a period of fearing that his child is retarded in reading. For this he blames the teacher.

It seldom occurs to the parent that his Ralphie may be suffering from excessive sanity. No one who is entirely sane can learn to read English.

Teachers teach phonetics. Printed words, they tell Ralphie, represent sounds. Then Ralphie discovers that "would" and "wood" sound exactly alike.

"Bow and bough" also sound alike except when they don't. But "bough" does not rhyme with "rough" or "tough" or "through."

At this point any sane kid says, "To heck with it. Reading ain't worth it."

How did our language develop this lunacy? Let's blame the Norman French for it.

The English talked and sometimes wrote Anglo-Saxon, a kind of German, until the Normans conquered them. The Normans talked and sometimes wrote French, although not very well.

All conquerors learn that a military occupation requires lots of writing in two languages. The Normans put company clerks to work writing English. They wrote it the way they thought it sounded. So lunacy entered our language and settled down to stay.

Can anything be done about it? Some scholars have seriously suggested that we purge the French from our language and go back to good old Anglo-Saxon. After all, English is still mostly Germanic. This is not feasible. Try writing just one page without a Frenchy word creeping in.

Others propose spelling reform. They want to spell words the way they sound. These gentlemen are considered part of the lunatic fringe by the academic world. The demented always believe that sane people are mad.

Alas, we must go on living with our lunacy. The lexicographers and schoolmarms and editors will see to that.

But we can at least quit criticizing the teachers for not teaching phonetics. The trouble is they do teach phonetics, — Mark Clutter.

PIZZA BURGERS

By Mildred Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

FOR A CASUAL patio party — or even in your family room, Pizza Patio Burgers are colorful, flavorful versions of tempting, tasty, yet easily prepared food. The tender, juicy ground beef is combined with rolled oats. The oats act as a binder, sealing in the natural meat juices and preserving hearty beef flavor.

Each burger is filled with tasty pizza-flavored sauce and Mozzarella cheese. Relishes, potato chips or corn chips, melon wedges and a favorite beverage complete the carefree menu.

Orange Lazy Daisy Cake in included as a bonus for dessert.

The Burgers

Makes 8 servings

One 6-oz. can tomato paste
½ tsp. tarragon
½ tsp. oregano
½ tsp. sweet basil
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 lb. ground beef
1½ tsp. salt
1 cup rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
1 egg
¼ cup milk
one 6½x3½-inch slice Mozzarella cheese

Combine tomato paste, tarragon, oregano, sweet basil and Parmesan cheese in small bowl. Combine ground beef, salt, oats, egg and milk in large bowl. Add 3 tablespoons of tomato mixture to beef mixture. Blend well. Shape to form 16 thin patties.

Spread a heaping tablespoon of tomato mixture on 8 of the patties. Cut the cheese slice into 8 equal squares. Top tomato mixture with a cheese square. Cover with remaining patties; pinch edges together to seal.

Place on broiler rack or over hot coals about 3 inches from source of heat. Cook about 7 minutes. Turn and cook 5 additional minutes for medium doneness. Serve on toasted hamburger buns.

Orange Lazy Daisy Cake

Makes one 13x9-inch cake

Cake:
1¼ cups water
½ cup orange juice
1½ cups rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
¾ cup butter or margarine, soft
1½ cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly-packed brown sugar
3 eggs
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons freshly grated orange peel

Topping:
¼ cup butter or margarine, soft
⅔ cup firmly-packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons orange juice
¾ cup chopped nutmeats

Heat oven to moderate (350 degrees F.). For cake, combine water and orange juice in small saucepan; bring to boil. Pour over oats; stir to combine. Cover and let stand 20 minutes. Beat butter until creamy; gradually beat in sugars. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in vanilla and oats mixture.

Sift together flour, soda, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. Add orange peel to flour mixture. Add to creamed mixture; blend well. Pour batter into well-greased and floured 13x9-inch baking pan.

Bake in preheated oven (350 degrees F.) 45 to 50 minutes. Let cake cool in pan about 30 minutes; spread topping (see below) evenly over cake. Broil until brown and bubbly. Serve warm or cold.

For topping, beat butter until creamy; gradually beat in sugar. Blend in orange juice (mixture may look curdled). Stir in nutmeats.

PIZZA BURGERS

By Mildred Flanary

Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

FOR A CASUAL patio party — or even in your family room, Pizza Patio Burgers are colorful, flavorful versions of tempting, tasty, yet easily prepared food. The tender, juicy ground beef is combined with rolled oats. The oats act as a binder, sealing in the natural meat juices and preserving hearty beef flavor.

Each burger is filled with tasty pizza-flavored sauce and Mozzarella cheese. Relishes, potato chips or corn chips, melon wedges and a favorite beverage complete the carefree menu.

Orange Lazy Daisy Cake in included as a bonus for dessert.

The Burgers

Makes 8 servings

One 6-oz. can tomato paste
½ tsp. tarragon
½ tsp. oregano
½ tsp. sweet basil
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 lb. ground beef
1½ tsp. salt
1 cup rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
1 egg
¼ cup milk
one 6½x3½-inch slice Mozzarella cheese

Combine tomato paste, tarragon, oregano, sweet basil and Parmesan cheese in small bowl. Combine ground beef, salt, oats, egg and milk in large bowl. Add 3 tablespoons of tomato mixture to beef mixture. Blend well. Shape to form 16 thin patties.

Spread a heaping tablespoon of tomato mixture on 8 of the patties. Cut the cheese slice into 8 equal squares. Top tomato mixture with a cheese square. Cover with remaining patties; pinch edges together to seal.

Place on broiler rack or over hot coals about 3 inches from source of heat. Cook about 7 minutes. Turn and cook 5 additional minutes for medium doneness. Serve on toasted hamburger buns.

Orange Lazy Daisy Cake

Makes one 13x9-inch cake

Cake:
1¼ cups water
½ cup orange juice
1½ cups rolled oats (quick or old fashioned, uncooked)
¾ cup butter or margarine, soft
1½ cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly-packed brown sugar
3 eggs
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons freshly grated orange peel

Topping:
¼ cup butter or margarine, soft
⅔ cup firmly-packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons orange juice
¾ cup chopped nutmeats

Heat oven to moderate (350 degrees F.). For cake, combine water and orange juice in small saucepan; bring to boil. Pour over oats; stir to combine. Cover and let stand 20 minutes. Beat butter until creamy; gradually beat in sugars. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in vanilla and oats mixture.

Sift together flour, soda, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. Add orange peel to flour mixture. Add to creamed mixture; blend well. Pour batter into well-greased and floured 13x9-inch baking pan.

Bake in preheated oven (350 degrees F.) 45 to 50 minutes. Let cake cool in pan about 30 minutes; spread topping (see below) evenly over cake. Broil until brown and bubbly. Serve warm or cold.

For topping, beat butter until creamy; gradually beat in sugar. Blend in orange juice (mixture may look curdled). Stir in nutmeats.

Townhouse Philosophy

By Ellen Krec

WORK after work became a tiresome way of life to Mr. and Mrs. Dan Ruberticchio, who "did something about it."

After living in three houses in six years, owning an apartment building and spending every possible after-hours minute working on the property, they decided to look for a townhouse.

"We still wanted a home rather than an apartment," says Mrs. Ruberticchio, "but not work." The townhouse concept appealed to them and, according to Mrs. Ruberticchio, "we looked at every townhouse in the county.

"I remembered an ad and photograph complete with cat inviting inquiry into the Huntington Beach area. The funny thing is we don't even like cats, but it took just one viewing and we knew we had found our new home."

The corner home is attached at just one wall. A view originally carried to Catalina on a clear day. However, building has grown to block all view except from the kitchen window. No complaints on that score, either, since the Ruberticchios have thoroughly enjoyed watching the growth.

Nearly four years have made many changes, but none in their attitude. They still love their home.

A background in interior decorating proved helpful to Mrs. Ruberticchio, even though her original training at Art Institute in Chicago took her to a specialty in ship interior design.

Among her list of seagoing clients was the admiral's quarters on the USS Kearsarge and USS Los Angeles and the captain's quarters on the USS St. Paul. Actually, she admits, there is little difference between a home and quarters — they both demand a personal touch.

Although Mrs. Ruberticchio confines her efforts to her own home and the Huntington Beach Women's Club, Ruberticchio is actively employed as a general foreman at McDonnell Douglas.

Always partial to a monochromatic background, the Ruberticchios have adapted it to Mediterranean furnishings in the two-bedroom home.

According to Mrs. Ruberticchio: "Every home should have a touch of Oriental because it adds a subtle change and prevents static décor."

Mrs. Dan Ruberticchio enjoys her cozy covered patio.

The selection of the home on the street bordering the Meadowlark Country Club wasn't simple since "the homes were all empty at the time except one — but we decided on the two-bedroom model because it was larger," says Mrs. Ruberticchio.

An L-shaped living-dining area provides a conventional entertainment section with olive cut velvet giving a lush cover to the sofa and chair, backed up by a wall of antique mirror with gilt and crystal introductions in lamps and accessories.

Although the purpose of the home with no exterior responsibility was easement of gardening, the irresistible urge created a personal gardenia garden underneath the living room window!

When you leave a home where 196 gardenias produced a single blooming garden, it is hard to give up the habit.

Another addition to the "no-care" yard was a twisted juniper planted "where we could see the green."

"We could use some of the furniture from our previous homes," says Mrs. Ruberticchio, "but in areas where size made the difference, we had to include smaller-scale furniture."

The accessories are always retained because they may be changed readily. For instance the lamps were increased in height by the use of gold platforms.

The home is custom tailored to the Ruberticchio way of life with unusual methods of treating activities such as television viewing.

Long work hours demand evening relaxation to Ruberticchio who enjoys nothing more than watching television from the comfortably furnished den. When bedtime nears, they retire to the spacious master bedroom where a second color television turns on, then off promptly and electronically at 11:30.

"We never have to worry about falling asleep with the set going on and on," says Mrs. Ruberticchio. "We planned the 11:30 cutoff time because that gives us the required rest."

from the bedroom, but the original patio extending from the kitchen was enclosed to serve as a family room.

The too-windy patio was encased with siding then topped with a metal patio cover. Mrs. Ruberticchio added strips of Con-Tak paper in brilliant colors to create a near-stained-glass effect.

Matching sofas in brushed nylon face each other and are ideal for "his and hers" early evening televiewing.

A niche provides space for the built-in desk with the memento-highlighted wall.

Shielding the sliding glass doors is an airy wood grille which divides the kitchen and den.

A second buffet divider is fixed between the kitchen and game room. The low buffet always is covered with "goodies" for an instant party. The Mediterranean atmosphere is heightened by the dark provincial furniture and Spanish mural. A Tiffany lamp provides the light for frequent bridge parties.

The two baths created a decorating outlet for both Ruberticchios with "her" bath covered with paisley foil in orchid and gold along with a proud possession — a hanging lamp from a sunken Greek freighter.

"His" bath caused a bit of adjustment on Mrs. Ruberticchio's part but his decorating taste proved to be a fine masculine balance to the home. Ruberticchio insisted on red and used it to increase the drama of his gold and white room.

Twin sons have increased the size of the family with five grandchildren plus three step-grandchildren, with some of them close enough to enjoy a stay-over in the guest room. But all of them are represented on hall wall in a framed family photograph collection.

"This one here," he says, picking up a gold statue, "is the nicest award a film maker can receive. It's Father Keller's Christopher Award for doing some good. On the back is inscribed 'Better to light one candle than curse the darkness.'"

One time Lansburgh was filming a picture on a beautiful, expansive mesa just below Canada and he had searched for many months to find this particular location. He had a new cameraman who was anxious for screen credit and every time he saw Lansburgh he asked, "Can I have screen credit?" Lansburgh said he would think about it. While they were setting up the camera Lansburgh breathed deeply of the fresh air, looked around and asked, "Isn't this setting great?" The cameraman said, "I guess so, but it's all lighted for you. When we work at the studio we create our own light, we do things ourselves. It's a challenge. Here, in this place all you do is point the camera. It's all done for you."

At the end of the picture the cameraman again asked, "Do you think you'll give me screen credit?" Lansburgh gave the fellow a funny look and said, "No, I've decided not to give you screen credit. I'm going to give it to the Lord."

Q. I am planning to do a science fair project at school this semester. I would like to do a project on plants' survival in the atmosphere on Mars. Where can I get oxygen, nitrogen and carbon dioxide gases? R. L. W., Long Beach.

A. Contact Student Science Service, 3315 Glendale Blvd., Los Angeles, 665-5251. Ira Katz, executive director, says many students have tried your experiment, but with no success. "It takes a very sophisticated environment chamber to hold the gases," Katz explained, "and even in small amounts those gases are very expensive." He added, however, that he can suggest a modified version of your original idea which will be within your budget and capabilities. The Student Science Service specializes in helping students of all ages with their science projects. They offer unlimited free consultation, by phone or in person, and sell students the materials they need in small quantities.

Q. Can ACTION LINE tell me where to locate former sports car racer Bill Krause? He used to be my neighbor, and I would like to write to him. A. I., Long Beach.

A. Bill Krause, winner of the Los Angeles Times Grand Prix in 1960, now operates a motorcycle dealership in Inglewood. You can write to him in care of Bill Krause Motorcycles, 1257 S. La Brea Ave. Krause told ACTION LINE that he hasn't raced since 1966 when his Lola Chevy finished fourth in the United States Road Racing championship race at Riverside. "I should have won that race, but I didn't so I decided it was time to quit," he said. The former Long Beach resident, who achieved local fame as a sports car driver, won the first race he ever entered, at the Bakersfield Sports Car Races in 1956. In 1963 he was teamed with Graham Hill for the Indianapolis 500, but crashed during a test run.

Dream Vacation

Many children joined our Dream Vacation contest — and almost all of them want to run as fast as they can. They map out world-tour agendas that would fit better into two years than two weeks.

Kathy Tussey, 6026 Pimenta Ave., Lakewood, likes to run too, but she will settle for Morro Bay and the excitement of life by the ocean. Kathy is 12 years old.

Other winning essays will be published in future weeks. Winners' checks of $10 will be mailed to them. An additional $30 will go to the writer of the essay judged best of all.

By KATHY TUSSEY

IF I HAD just two weeks to enjoy myself I would go up to Morro Bay.

When I was up there I would eat smoked fish all the while. I'd go fishing off the bay and swim in the blue waters of California, or maybe dig for clams and watch them steam in the pot.

I would climb the Morro Rock and watch the seagulls soaring through the deep blue sky diving for their prey and snatching the bait the men and women throw out on their fishing lines. Or I would go with the family in the car and ride along the sandy coast. And snap pictures as we walked along the wharves.

I would wander through the fish markets and pick out abalone and watch the people open the abalone.

The funniest sight to see would be in the morning, when the surfers come out to ride the waves. They have big bumps on their knees and on the tops of their feet.

I'd go out in the morning and watch the waves wash up on the beach and watch the sandpipers snatch the sandcrabs out of the sand.

I would go to the bay again and watch the people try to climb the rock and then try to climb it again.

I would go with the family again in the car and ride through the redwoods and watch the deer as they stood still as rock in the damp cool fern, and eat in the woods with the smell of pine needles and wet earth.

I'd walk along the sandy and windy beach picking up shells and building sand castles, and watch them fall when the water hit them.

I would let the dog run in the waves and when the dog and I were back in the trailer I'd eat more smoked fish.

TEENS IN ACTION

MIKE GREENGARD is the editor of a newspaper which is without an editorial policy, cannot be distributed easily to its readership, and yet is heatedly discussed and well-read by his contemporaries.

Mike, 17, a senior, and his staff of four publish Millikan High School's underground newspaper T.R.I.P., which stands for "The Revolution Is Progressing" — a half-serious, half-tongue-in-cheek motto. Mike's editorial offices are in his home at 3230 Studebaker Road, and T.R.I.P — published "whenever we feel like it"—was the first off-campus student paper centered at a Long Beach high school.

Mike expresses his views:

—T.R.I.P. is part of a revolution, although not the fire-and-destruction type most people think about. Our newspaper tries to reflect — not cause — the increased awareness of what education does and should mean in high school.

—If most students were asked whether or not they like T.R.I.P., they'd probably say no. But if asked whether they read it, I'll bet they'd say yes. We aren't a recognized organization on campus, so it's not legal for us to distribute T.R.I.P. on school grounds. So we pass out copies across the street. There are plenty of takers. The school paper simply ignores much of what is hard news. It is more of an activity than a newspaper, and we try to fill the gap by presenting as many viewpoints as we can along with straight news coverage.

—We'll take articles from anyone who's willing to submit them. We don't have a traditional editorial policy because we don't see our job as primarily influencing school policy. Students don't like to be pushed by our views or by the views of the board of education. Instead of being a vehicle for action, we are a kind of vehicle for a vehicle. We supply the needed information.

—I didn't realize the extent to which people will stereotype other people until I found how ready some people are to classify T.R.I.P. as subversive. There seems to be an idea that high school students "might be swayed" by someone with strongly held views. This line of argument — often put forth by the white middle-class community leaders — shows a fear of newness. And this fear makes me look twice at what is feared. What more and more students are saying is, "We want to look at this idea ourselves."

—When you study the governmental set-up at most high schools you'll find them startlingly totalitarian. What's worse, schools take it upon themselves to act in the place of parents even to the point of limiting the number of groups you can legally belong to.

—Humor in T.R.I.P.'s writing style makes it more interesting to read, but also more difficult to edit. We have to be careful about subtlety. There's not much question about using obscenities. I see no reason or necessity for it. It usually just turns people off.

—As long as we obey existing rules, we aren't harassed by the school administration or by the board of education. As long as we obey the rules, there's not much they can do.

—I don't like relying too heavily on the simplicities of power politics. But it seems obvious that students are going to have to get more power if they really want to be consulted in educational matters important to them. As it is now, the school administration can overuse its power without thinking. Many students are dissatisfied with the quality of their education, but their dissatisfaction has not yet taken the form of political activism.

—I'm not sure where the student drive for power will lead. I admit that sometimes I am more activist than other times. Maybe students will gain help from faculty members, or maybe the community will relax a little. They'll find that young minds are not necessarily immature minds.

Q. I am planning to do a science fair project at school this semester. I would like to do a project on plants' survival in the atmosphere on Mars. Where can I get oxygen, nitrogen and carbon dioxide gases? R. L. W., Long Beach.

A. Contact Student Science Service, 3315 Glendale Blvd., Los Angeles, 665-5251. Ira Katz, executive director, says many students have tried your experiment, but with no success. "It takes a very sophisticated environment chamber to hold the gases," Katz explained, "and even in small amounts those gases are very expensive." He added, however, that he can suggest a modified version of your original idea which will be within your budget and capabilities. The Student Science Service specializes in helping students of all ages with their science projects. They offer unlimited free consultation, by phone or in person, and sell students the materials they need in small quantities.

Q. Can ACTION LINE tell me where to locate former sports car racer Bill Krause? He used to be my neighbor, and I would like to write to him. A. I., Long Beach.

A. Bill Krause, winner of the Los Angeles Times Grand Prix in 1980, now operates a motorcycle dealership in Inglewood. You can write to him in care of Bill Krause Motorcycles, 1257 S. La Brea Ave. Krause told ACTION LINE that he hasn't raced since 1966 when his Lola Chevy finished fourth in the United States Road Racing championship race at Riverside. "I should have won that race, but I didn't so I decided it was time to quit," he said. The former Long Beach resident, who achieved local fame as a sports car driver, won the first race he ever entered, at the Bakersfield Sports Car Races in 1956. In 1963 he was teamed with Graham Hill for the Indianapolis 500, but crashed during a test run.

Dream Vacation

Many children joined our Dream Vacation contest — and almost all of them want to run as fast as they can. They map out world-tour agendas that would fit better into two years than two weeks.

Kathy Tussey, 6026 Pimenta Ave., Lakewood, likes to run too, but she will settle for Morro Bay and the excitement of life by the ocean. Kathy is 12 years old.

Other winning essays will be published in future weeks. Winners' checks of $10 will be mailed to them. An additional $30 will go to the writer of the essay judged best of all.

By KATHY TUSSEY

IF I HAD just two weeks to enjoy myself I would go up to Morro Bay.

When I was up there I would eat smoked fish all the while. I'd go fishing off the bay and swim in the blue waters of California, or maybe dig for clams and watch them steam in the pot.

I would climb the Morro Rock and watch the seagulls soaring through the deep blue sky diving for their prey and snatching the bait the men and women throw out on their fishing lines. Or I would go with the family in the car and ride along the sandy coast. And snap pictures as we walked along the wharves.

I would wander through the fish markets and pick out abalone and watch the people open the abalone.

The funniest sight to see would be in the morning, when the surfers come out to ride the waves. They have big bumps on their knees and on the tops of their feet.

I'd go out in the morning and watch the waves wash up on the beach and watch the sandpipers snatch the sandcrabs out of the sand.

I would go to the bay again and watch the people try to climb the rock and then try to climb it again.

I would go with the family again in the car and ride through the redwoods and watch the deer as they stood still as rock in the damp cool fern, and eat in the woods with the smell of pine needles and wet earth.

I'd walk along the sandy and windy beach picking up shells and building sand castles, and watch them fall when the water hit them.

I would let the dog run in the waves and when the dog and I were back in the trailer I'd eat more smoked fish.

A Catty Home

By Steve Ellingson

Purr-fect Luxury.

A PATENT was refused the "inventor" who put an eraser on the end of a pencil. The reason? Nothing new had been invented, only greater convenience had been created. Which, we hasten to add, is no mean achievement.

With this approach in mind, we came up with the purr . . . fect bedroom-bathroom combination shown here. It's handsome, sanitary, comfortable and convenient, but we don't intend to try for a patent. Acceptance by the feline world has been reward enough.

Cats love elevated vantage points, the bed gives them this. They also like a private bathroom. This is provided in the lower enclosure which keeps that unsightly sand box hidden, but still convenient. It also keeps sand off the floor. The entire back of the enclosure swings open for easy access and cleaning.

Any amateur can build this combination bed and bath. A few scraps of wood are all you need, consequently the cost is slight. You need only trace the pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and finally put the parts together. All details are clearly printed on each pattern. The mattress may be made of foam rubber or any other suitable material you may have on hand.

To obtain the full-size combination cat bed and bath pattern number 465, send $1 (add 25c per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

Homage to Fromage

EARLY IN HIS "Cheese Handbook" (Hastings House, $5.95), Bruce H. Axler poses the great cheese mystery:

Why does Swiss cheese have holes, when it is Gorgonzola that needs the ventilation?

It is a matter of milk complexity, which we won't go into, but into which author Axler delves thoroughly.

"There are at least twelve hundred named cheeses in the world, at least five hundred really distinct varieties, and at least two hundred first-rate cheeses," we are informed. There can't be very many that have been left out of this compendium of cheese.

Cheese, like war and peace, has its treaties, and cheese treaties, like those of war and peace, are often observed in the breach. An international cheese treaty formulated at Stresa, Italy, limits the uses of certain names to their countries of origin. "Unfortunately," the author tells us, "not all the cheese producing or consuming nations are signers." The United States is a non-signer; as with the League of Nations, it has refused to join the league of cheese.

Some interesting cheeses:

Colwick: Don't ask for it at your cheesemonger's; it is extinct. It was a soft English cheese made on farms and country estates.

Fromage raffine de l'Isle d'Orleans: A soft piquant cheese made since 1679 by farmers of an island in the St. Lawrence River below Quebec.

Schlesiger weichquarg: A soft, fresh cheese from Poland, made of sour milk, and sometimes flavored with onion.

Scamorze: Was originally a buffalo's milk cheese from Abruzzi in Italy; alas, the buffalo are scarce, and it is now also made of cow's and goat's milk. Each cheese is pulled like taffy, molded by hand.

On and on this book lists the cheeses, including California's own Monterey Jack, and cheeses from all over the world, not excluding Yugoslavia, Turkey, Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Bulgaria, Romania, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Portugal and the Basque country.

And Try Not to Miss...

BETWEEN BATTLES. By James D. Houston. Dial Press, $4.95.

A serio-comic novel of life at an American air base near a tiny English village in the late 1950s, and the alerts, accidents and confrontations with the frightened and irate local citizens. The public relations man, Lt. Sam Young, and his pilot pal Don Stillwell wants out, and how they go about it furnishes the humor.

A COMEBACK FOR STARK. By Hamish Reade. Putnam, $4.95.

Stark is a British agent gone to seed after one of his cases has ended in a fiasco. His superiors are using him, he discovers, as a pawn in a complicated game of power moves. An immensely fat foreign agent, a masochist and a homosexual are among the story's characters, and four gory deaths, blackmail, perversion and triple-crossing are among the occurrences.

EXPERIMENT. By Patrick Skene Catling. Trident, $5.95.

A spoof, and a wonderfully witty one, about the scientific invasion of people's privacy. When a hitherto staid Midwestern coeducational college establishes an institute for an in-depth study of the sexual drive, the most up-to-date machinery is used not only to record the sexual impulses but to set them going.

THE PASSIONATE PLAYERS. By Edmund P. Murray. Crown, $5.95.

A troupe of second-rate, seedy actors and actresses tours the backwaters of Texas, putting on a Passion play, and get involved in a strange off-stage drama as well.

Sour Gripes?

Reviewed by Prof. Leslie Mittleman,
California State College at Long Beach

PORTNOY'S COMPLAINT. By Philip Roth. Random House, $6.95.

Philip Roth's latest novel begins with a whine and ends with a howl. Whether "Portnoy's Complaint" will strike the reader as a Book of Lamentations or one of "kvetches" (sour gripes) may depend upon his understanding of Roth's Jewish background.

In "Portnoy" the author returns to the matter of "Goodbye, Columbus," his first collection of short stories, in which the characters are variously crude, blustering, money-crazed Jews; or obscene, degenerate, vicious Jews; or finally, ignorant, superstitious, ineffectual Jews. Taken as a lot, they are altogether odious caricatures of human beings. Yet they are described with such exaggeration that they seem grotesques, not human beings at all, not realistic but surrealistic creatures issuing from a zany imagination.

Roth's second book, "Letting Go," treats assimilated Jewish intellectuals at an unnamed Midwestern university (actually, the University of Chicago). Although more sophisticated, the characters in this novel are perhaps even more nasty than in "Goodbye, Columbus." They play games of betrayal.

"When She Was Good," Roth's third book, abandons for the moment his surgical analysis of the quality of Jewish life in America. In "Portnoy's Complaint," however, the subject is resumed with zeal. In fact, Roth is so zealous, he is bound to offend most readers, Gentiles as well as Jews. A perfect example of "black comedy," the novel blends laughter with rage, sex farce with satire, sense with nonsense. It is outrageous, revolting, funny, incisive, terribly sad. It is tasteless, sometimes maddening. Yet it cannot easily be dismissed. It delivers a wallop.

What's the matter with Alexander Portnoy? A swinging bachelor of 33, he has had several attractive Gentile mistresses, the latest one a promiscuous and prodigiously vulgar divorcee whom he calls "the Monkey." He is a law graduate ("first in the class"), an assistant commissioner for the City of New York Commission on Human Opportunity, a member of Mayor Lindsay's staff. He is sensitive, intelligent, clever (he tells us), a liberal with the correct social attitudes, a young man marked for success. Then why should he complain to his Jewish psychiatrist, the nodding Dr. Spielvogel, about a life weighted by the load of intolerable guilt?

The trouble is his parents. His mother nags him; his father bullies him. He has to eat all the food on his plate. He has to be rated first in the class. Poor Portnoy. The burden of a Jewish mother and father is too great for him. (And besides, his mother plays mah jong and his father has constipation.) And the Rabbi provides no consolation — "he talks in syllables" — and his Jewish boy friends are either brash or dull, and his Jewish girl friends won't sleep with him. Help! He's going to the dogs.

As Portnoy sees it, the cause of his malaise is his Jewishness. "Jew Jew Jew Jew Jew Jew! It is coming out of my ears already, the saga of the suffering Jews!" he screams. Yet he does not like Gentiles either; they are also imperfect. And when he visits the State of Israel ("In this country, everybody is Jewish") he is thoroughly confused. He admires the Israelis because they do not act like Jews. He fails ignominiously in his attempt to seduce an attractive Israeli maiden; sudden impotence. He is not used to Sabras and is shattered by the young lady's commonsense diagnosis of his case. "You are nothing but a self-hating Jew." To which Portnoy responds, weakly, "Ah, but Naomi, maybe that's the best kind."

So much for an insight into Philip Roth's complaint . . . Or were we talking about Portnoy?

Homage to Fromage

EARLY IN HIS "Cheese Handbook" (Hastings House, $5.95), Bruce H. Axler poses the great cheese mystery:

Why does Swiss cheese have holes, when it is Gorgonzola that needs the ventilation?

It is a matter of milk complexity, which we won't go into, but into which author Axler delves thoroughly.

"There are at least twelve hundred named cheeses in the world, at least five hundred really distinct varieties, and at least two hundred first-rate cheeses," we are informed. There can't be very many that have been left out of this compendium of cheese.

Cheese, like war and peace, has its treaties, and cheese treaties, like those of war and peace, are often observed in the breach. An international cheese treaty formulated at Stresa, Italy, limits the uses of certain names to their countries of origin. "Unfortunately," the author tells us, "not all the cheese producing or consuming nations are signers." The United States is a non-signer; as with the League of Nations, it has refused to join the league of cheese.

Some interesting cheeses:

Colwick: Don't ask for it at your cheesemonger's; it is extinct. It was a soft English cheese made on farms and country estates.

Fromage raffine de l'isle d'Orleans: A soft piquant cheese made since 1679 by farmers of an island in the St. Lawrence River below Quebec.

Schlesiger weichquarg: A soft, fresh cheese from Poland, made of sour milk, and sometimes flavored with onion.

Scamorze: Was originally a buffalo's milk cheese from Abruzzi in Italy; alas, the buffalo are scarce, and it is now also made of cow's and goat's milk. Each cheese is pulled like taffy, molded by hand.

On and on this book lists the cheeses, including California's own Monterey Jack, and cheeses from all over the world, not excluding Yugoslavia, Turkey, Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, Bulgaria, Romania, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Portugal and the Basque country.

And Try Not to Miss...

BETWEEN BATTLES. By James D. Houston. Dial Press, $4.95.

A serio-comic novel of life at an American air base near a tiny English village in the late 1950s, and the alerts, accidents and confrontations with the frightened and irate local citizens. The public relations man, Lt. Sam Young, and his pilot pal Don Stillwell wants out, and how they go about it furnishes the humor.

A COMEBACK FOR STARK. By Hamish Reade. Putnam, $4.95.

Stark is a British agent gone to seed after one of his cases has ended in a fiasco. His superiors are using him, he discovers, as a pawn in a complicated game of power moves. An immensely fat foreign agent, a masochist and a homosexual are among the story's characters, and four gory deaths, blackmail, perversion and triple-crossing are among the occurrences.

EXPERIMENT. By Patrick Skene Catling. Trident, $5.95.

A spoof, and a wonderfully witty one, about the scientific invasion of people's privacy. When a hitherto staid Midwestern coeducational college establishes an institute for an in-depth study of the sexual drive, the most up-to-date machinery is used not only to record the sexual impulses but to set them going.

THE PASSIONATE PLAYERS. By Edmund P. Murray. Crown, $5.95.

A troupe of second-rate, seedy actors and actresses tours the backwaters of Texas, putting on a Passion play, and get involved in a strange off-stage drama as well.

Sour Gripes?

Reviewed by Prof. Leslie Mittleman,
California State College at Long Beach

PORTNOY'S COMPLAINT. By Philip Roth. Random House, $6.95.

Philip Roth's latest novel begins with a whine and ends with a howl. Whether "Portnoy's Complaint" will strike the reader as a Book of Lamentations or one of "kveiches" (sour gripes) may depend upon his understanding of Roth's Jewish background.

In "Portnoy" the author returns to the matter of "Goodbye, Columbus," his first collection of short stories, in which the characters are variously crude, blustering, money-crazed Jews; or obscene, degenerate, vicious Jews; or finally, ignorant, superstitious, ineffectual Jews. Taken as a lot, they are altogether odious caricatures of human beings. Yet they are described with such exaggeration that they seem grotesques, not human beings at all, not realistic but surrealistic creatures issuing from a zany imagination.

Roth's second book, "Letting Go," treats assimilated Jewish intellectuals at an unnamed Midwestern university (actually, the University of Chicago). Although more sophisticated, the characters in this novel are perhaps even more nasty than in "Goodbye, Columbus." They play games of betrayal.

"When She Was Good," Roth's third book, abandons for the moment his surgical analysis of the quality of Jewish life in America. In "Portnoy's Complaint," however, the subject is resumed with zeal. In fact, Roth is so zealous, he is bound to offend most readers, Gentiles as well as Jews. A perfect example of "black comedy," the novel blends laughter with rage, sex farce with satire, sense with nonsense. It is outrageous, revolting, funny, incisive, terribly sad. It is tasteless, sometimes maddening. Yet it cannot easily be dismissed. It delivers a wallop.

What's the matter with Alexander Portnoy? A swinging bachelor of 33, he has had several attractive Gentile mistresses, the latest one a promiscuous and prodigiously vulgar divorcee whom he calls "the Monkey." He is a law graduate ("first in the class"), an assistant commissioner for the City of New York Commission on Human Opportunity, a member of Mayor Lindsay's staff. He is sensitive, intelligent, clever (he tells us), a liberal with the correct social attitudes, a young man marked for success. Then why should he complain to his Jewish psychiatrist, the nodding Dr. Spielvogel, about a life weighted by the load of intolerable guilt?

The trouble is his parents. His mother nags him; his father bullies him. He has to eat all the food on his plate. He has to be rated first in the class. Poor Portnoy. The burden of a Jewish mother and father is too great for him. (And besides, his mother plays mah jong and his father has constipation.) And the Rabbi provides no consolation — "he talks in syllables" — and his Jewish boy friends are either brash or dull, and his Jewish girl friends won't sleep with him. Help! He's going to the dogs.

As Portnoy sees it, the cause of his malaise is his Jewishness. "Jew Jew Jew Jew Jew Jew! It is coming out of my ears already, the saga of the suffering Jews!" he screams. Yet he does not like Gentiles either; they are also imperfect. And when he visits the State of Israel ("In this country, everybody is Jewish") he is thoroughly confused. He admires the Israelis because they do not act like Jews. He fails ignominiously in his attempt to seduce an attractive Israeli maiden: sudden impotence. He is not used to Sabras and is shattered by the young lady's commonsense diagnosis of his case. "You are nothing but a self-hating Jew." To which Portnoy responds, weakly, "Ah, but Naomi, maybe that's the best kind."

So much for an insight into Philip Roth's complaint . . . Or were we talking about Portnoy?

Cats Can Be Fun

By Eleanor Avery Price

MOST CATS live out their life spans with few ailments and few problems for their owners, which accounts in part for their popularity as home pets.

There are some things you can do to keep the wheels of cat-ownership running smoothly.

You can feed him a balanced cat food menu. If the pet is picky, try to make food more palatable. Serve it warm with a little gravy or bacon dripping. Fish odor may tempt the cat, but don't feed a wholly fish diet, and especially be careful that you don't overfeed red tuna. Avoid rich foods. And don't let the cat fill up on just milk. If you add a tablespoon of stewed tomatoes to the cat's food daily you may prevent the pet from getting inflamed gums from lack of vitamin C or niacin. A little cottage cheese is of high protein value and usually relished.

Take good care of your cat's feet. Since he needs to stretch himself, also hone his claws, provide a good scratching post. Some cats will be content with an ordinary log, but most prefer a horizontal or upright pole covered with heavy material or carpeting. If the covering is impregnated with catnip, the pet may prefer it to your prized furniture. If nothing else, hang some thicknesses of burlap near his eating place. I say eating place, for just about every cat gets the urge to sharpen his claws right after a meal. If the cat ignores his post, put his paws on it up high and move them down. Repeat a few times until the pet gets the idea.

The cat needs his nails clipped now and then. This must be done with care, or the pet will from then on rebel against the procedure. If he gets too upset, make a small squeeze box with sides of mesh wire, pop him in it when he's not expecting this. Close the lid and upend the box. The cat has to cling with nails exposed, and you can then trim them. If this is too much bother, take him for a pedicure at a veterinarian's.

If you keep the cat indoors, provide at least a ladder for him to play on. Coax him up and down if necessary. Take time to play with the kitty, for boredom will cause him to chew cloth, race wildly about, or, if he sits too much, to become constipated. Constipation is also caused by hairballs, swallowed string, and anything else the cat picks up. Give him a good lubricant like Maltona from a pet shop. Also, be sure he has fresh drinking water.

An outdoor cat can also become constipated from eating too many bugs, especially grasshoppers. The pet doesn't chew food as well as you might think, and grasshopper legs become entwined inside his digestive tract and block the passages.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Death Risk Different in Various Regions

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Editor

THE RISK OF DYING for middle-aged white males varies according to geographic patterns, it has been reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Researchers define middle age as 45-64.

Some of their findings:

Lowest-rate areas for middle-age mortality are largely in the Great Plains, plus some Rocky Mountain areas.

Highest-rate areas are mostly near the East Coast, and death rates there are about double those of the low-rate areas.

Several foreign countries have rates lower than any of those in the United States. The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Israel have lower death rates from all causes than do any of the 509 economic areas studied in the United States.

DEATH does not always occur as a single dramatic event such as a heart attack, a doctor reminds. Often it is a long-term process which begins with a simple matter of decline.

"People often die sociologically or psychologically before they die biologically," notes Dr. Alvin Goldfarb, New York psychiatrist, in a report in the medical newspaper Geriatric Times.

A NEW windshield appears able to reduce disfiguring cuts resulting from auto accidents.

The laminated shield, developed by Corning Glass Works, is designed so that the outer pane breaks first, to reduce immediate resistance to the forces of head impact.

The inner pane continues to flex, absorbing head-impact energy before breaking into small granules, which don't cut.

A plastic interlayer then "balloons," to cushion head forces. First commercial application is expected in 1970.

SURVIVORS of the first atomic bombing of Hiroshima look older than their years, researchers report. Their skin is prematurely wrinkled and their hair has been turning gray earlier.

Meanwhile, another study shows that lung-cancer deaths among heavily irradiated survivors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki have occurred at a rate twice that expected.

DRUNKS, whether driving or walking, appear to have an affinity for moving trains, a researcher has found.

In a study of 94 persons struck by trains, 30 per cent of drivers, 55 per cent of passengers and 64 per cent of pedestrians 15 or older who survived six hours or less had been drinking, reports Northwest Medicine.

Meanwhile, another study shows that lung-cancer deaths among heavily irradiated survivors of Hiroshima and Nagasaki have occurred at a rate twice that expected.

DRUNKS, whether driving or walking, appear to have an affinity for moving trains, a researcher has found.

In a study of 94 persons struck by trains, 30 per cent of drivers, 55 per cent of passengers and 64 per cent of pedestrians 15 or older who survived six hours or less had been drinking, reports Northwest Medicine.

Coin Seminar Saturday in Long Beach

MAURICE M. GOULD, of Sepulveda, whose syndicated column on coins appears in Southland Magazine, will be moderator at the numismatic educational seminar Saturday in Long Beach.

The program will be held in the Walter H. Boyd High School Auditorium, 235 E. Eighth St., under sponsorship of the California State Numismatic Association and the Long Beach Coin Club.

GOULD

Forums will be held both in the morning and afternoon and they will be open to the public without charge.

Gould, chairman of the event, announces that the following numismatic experts will participate in the two-session program:

Ralph (Curly) Mitchell of Fullerton, president of the Token and Medal Society; Miguel L. Munoz of Mexico City, a past president of the Sociedad Numismatica de Mexico; Major Sheldon Carroll of Ottawa, Canada, curator of the Canadian Numismatic Association; and Adna G. Wilde Jr. of Colorado Springs, executive director of the American Numismatic Association.

In addition to the two forums, there will be a number of coin exhibits. Exhibitors will include Claire Abelson, Armando Ojeda, Don Bailey, Esther Taller, Lawrence Morton, Gordon Greene, Roy Gray and Mort Goudman.

Assisting Chairman Gould will be Charles M. Johnson, director of the American Numismatic Association; William Wisslead, officer of the California State Numismatic Association; Charles G. Colver, secretary and past president of the state group, and officers and members of the Long Beach Coin Club.

JAYCEES: MEN OF ACTION

ward the community. All cared what happened in politics, youth activities and sports, welfare and other facets of life in Long Beach.

The second year, which ends in June, has been more rewarding for the Jaycees. Their projects have filled voids in city life and their advice has been sought from as high up as the City Council. Most important, city fathers are saying that if they want a job well done, ask the Jaycees to do it.

The single most important achievement, perhaps, is just coming into focus. In conjunction with the Police Department, the Jaycees made a film on narcotics that will serve as a teaching guide on the evils of drugs and act as a deterrent. Jaycee members rode with vice squad members during raids and more than 1,700 feet of film was taken. The result was a 17-minute narrative of such quality that it is scheduled to be aired in part on national television (NBC) in the near future. The Jaycees may later use the film for commercial purposes or distribute copies to schools, boys' clubs, civic groups and interested parties.

Another major project, although in its infancy, is the building and operating of a child care center in the central district of Long Beach. More than 300 manhours were put in by Jaycees to provide the Office of Economic Opportunities with a detailed plan of why there is a need for a center and how it can be implemented. The complete "work-up" is in the hands of the OEO and the Jaycees are hoping the federal agency will finance it.

The men who put together the package are part of the Junior Chamber's Task Force, a group of about 20 who spend their spare hours working toward self-help programs in the impoverished areas of Long Beach.

A boys' basketball clinic has been in operation for two years and more than 300 youngsters have participated. The Jaycees used coaches and players from the colleges here and conducted the clinics over two weekends in the fall. Fundamentals and advanced techniques are taught, based on the age of the participant.

Another noteworthy project is the Distinguished Service Award, or Young Man of the Year Award. It honors a person of Junior Chamber age (21 to 35), who contributes most to Long Beach in a given year.

The Jaycees also played vital roles in the summer Olympic Trials and the Sea Festival, both highly successful ventures. The Sea Festival is an annual event, the Trials a one-shot attraction which brought much publicity and prestige to Long Beach.

Still another important Jaycee project is Gridiron, which is patterned after the Washington Gridiron Club. It spoofs city officials (all in good fun, of course) so its lasting value is negligible, but the event attracts a large following and represents more than 1,000 hours of work by the Jaycees.

The Miss Welcome to Long Beach contest is a Jaycee exclusive, and it perhaps has brought more publicity to the city of Long Beach than any other Jaycee project. The present Miss Welcome, Karen MacQuarrie, has spread the city's name nationally and worldwide; she was second runner-up in the Miss World contest held in the Orient.

Socially, the Jaycees enjoy many parties, including those of the "gimmick" variety like Wine-Tasters, Las Vegas Night, Day at the Races and so on. Even their general membership meetings have been altered to feature planned entertainment (speakers, films).

The ladies have joined the act, too, and formed the Jaycee-ettes. They are small in number but growing. Their emphasis is on social activities, but the girls aid the guys with phone committees and provide a woman's touch when necessary — like at the tea for Miss Welcome candidates held annually before the semifinals of that event.

With dues in the Junior Chamber only $25 annually, it is perhaps surprising that more young men have not joined. There may be a reason for this, however. The group has advertised itself as men of action, men who are willing to devote their time to the betterment of their community.

In other words, your money is not enough. A Jaycee is measured by the work he does.

ARE YOU perhaps someone who enjoys going to a fine restaurant and ordering your luncheon or dinner in a language other than English?

Then you will find particular pleasure in a visit to Anderson's Tally Ho, 5829 Lakewood Blvd. near South Street, Lakewood. This exceptional restaurant, open every day, has a distinguished staff of old world waiters conversant in French, Spanish, Arabic, Russian and German. Handsomely uniformed, they are gracious envoys of hospitality who delight the guests with their mental agility as well as their correct but friendly service.

Opened 18 years ago by the late Blayne Hutchison, Anderson's is owned by his wife Vinnie, a businesswoman talented in operating supermarkets as well as deluxe restaurants. Her staff at the Tally Ho is directed by manager Andre Moskalenko, a charming former European who speaks Russian and German as well as English.

The restaurant is renowned for its gourmet approach to life, offering the choicest, fine-grained steaks and chops, beautiful creations from the sea, roast prime rib au jus and such continental favorites as veal parmesan, veal Oskar, grenadine of beef and beef Stroganoff, from $2.85 to $6.60. Among the newest entrees are crown rack of lamb served for two persons with a bouquet of vegetables, and the chef's bacconcini, choice ground round steak topped with ortego chili, mozarella cheese and fancy tomato sauce. They are accompanied by relish tray, tossed green salad, baked Idaho potato or rice, hot cheese bread and beverage.

The Tally Ho, which serves Sunday dinners from 3 p.m. on, has upstairs banquet rooms accommodating 12 to 55 persons. Its lounge, designed in an old-English motif, is one of the most popular in town, thanks to the musical abilities of sparkling organist Ina La Grange, performing nightly except Sunday.

Recently, Vinnie and Andre opened another top-notch restaurant — Rocco's, 8060 E. Florence Ave., Downey. Designed in a Mediterranean style, it has warm hues, stained glass windows, wrought-iron effects and an elegant sunken bar. The cuisine is Italian in personality, emphasizing delectable steaks, sea foods and international delicacies from about $3.45.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

AS A SENIOR at Cal-State Long Beach majoring in history, I must protest the latest of Jacques Cousteau's "Undersea World" series (March 4).

Cousteau leaves one with the feeling that because a fabulous fortune in gold and silver was not recovered the operation was a complete failure.

No exploration or excavation in which the cultural heritage of mankind is discovered is a complete failure. It is one thing to read about the utensils of the 18th Century; but to actually see the cannon, porcelain, earthenware, etc. carried by a ship in 1756 adds a great deal to the enjoyment of studying about one's cultural history.

I have only one question: What happened to those objects that the crew took from the wreck of that 18th Century ship?

Timothy Ginn, Long Beach

(ABC-TV says the items taken from the ship were sent to Monaco, home base of the Calypso, for study and will eventually be placed in a museum in one of the islands in the Caribbean—which one was not known).

IS IT TRUE That "Gentle Ben" and "High Chaparral" are to get the axe?

"Gentle Ben" is a family picture; everyone enjoys it, and it's a clean film, too. . . . I happen to like cowboy films, or westerns and ("High Chaparral") is one of the best . . . Whom does one write to . . .?

G. N. Newell, Bellflower

Half-true—"High Chaparral" has not been canceled. To protest "Gentle Ben" treatment write CBS, 6121 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, 90028.)

WE WILL be most disappointed if "The Avengers" is taken off next season. We consider it to be one of the best programs — story, action, personnel, photography and production.

A Canadian visiting here for the winter left the "Vancouver Province" for us to read. We find that "The Avengers" held a high TV rating. It is different from the usual run of productions and successful. Why axe it?

Ursula, John Blackman, Long Beach

(Not successful enough, according to the ratings.)

I HAVE been watching with much interest for several weeks the discussion you have presented regarding what has been laughingly called the "KFI Coup." It seems fitting that the public should know the facts in the case . . .

The whole "change," you might say, began with the death of Earle C. Anthony, the station's founder, in 1961 . . . Anthony left KFI to Cal Tech and Cal Berkeley . . . The only stipulation was that the station was always to be run by radio men; that is, professionals. He left the program directorship in the hands of a long associate, Pat Kelly.

For some seven years, under the continuing hand of Kelly, the status quo was maintained at KFI . . .

The station gave the people of Los Angeles the type of music and programming they had become accustomed to over the last 40 years. Chuck

Backus Speaking:

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Television veteran Jim Backus speaking:

"Making a television series is like childbirth, you forget the pain until the next time."

Backus holds the video record for the number of series starred in, a total fo six: "I Married Joan," "The Jim Backus Show," "Mr. Magoo," "Gilligan's Island," "Blondie" and "The Good Guys," which he joined after "Blondie" folded.

"'I Married Joan' was only the second series on the air, following 'I Love Lucy,'" Backus said.

"In those early days TV was a jungle. We worked at General Service Studios where you had to part the grass to get to work. The roofs of the old sound stages were glass so they could still use sunlight.

"Joan's (the late Joan Davis) dressing room was a bungalow and we were having lunch on the porch one day when a guy who thought we were just a couple living there came up, sat down and started selling us brushes. So help me, it happened.

"When they first came to me I didn't know the language. They said they were going to make a pilot -- I thought they were talking about an aviator.

"Then somebody sold the show and it ran three years.

"IN THOSE days General Services Studios was a matriarchy. There was Joan, Lucy, Ann Sothern, Eve Arden and Gracie Allen. The studio didn't have a wall — it had a girdle around it.

"Agents love to put an actor in a series, cause you don't bother them for nine months. You're like the living dead. They throw you in in September and let you out in June. You live in a vacuum and come out asking who's president.

"I HAVE the distinction of being the only guy to cancel himself off the air. I made the 'Mr. Magoo' series and they put it on opposite 'Gilligan's Island.'

'Gilligan' murdered 'Magoo,' so I lost one job and kept another. I had mixed feelings — like watching my mother-in-law drive over a cliff in my new Cadillac.

"I don't know anyone else whose done six series. I must be crazy.

"But I've made a hundred movies, too. You read about actors doing two pictures a year on location in Cannes or off the coast of Sardinia. Not me. I get sent to south Philadelphia or Alaska.

"BEING REALISTIC, I make television series for money. If I were in a position to do two pictures a year with choice of script, cast and director, I'd do it.

"But after some of those quonset hut locations I've been on, General Service Studios looks like the St. Regis.

"It doesn't matter. I've formed 'Series Anonymous.' It's for actors considering a television series. They call me up, bring over a bottle of booze, and I talk them out of it."

The New Communicators

Movie, Still Photography, Audio Tape

A program exploring new uses of the media of movie film, still photography and audio tape will be presented under the title of "The New Communicators" on "NBC Experiment in Television" at 4:30 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 4. It will be prepared by Father John Culkin, S.J., director of the Center for Communications of Fordham University, in cooperation with NBC.

Films by individuals and groups that heretofore had no access to this medium, including youngsters ages six to 16, mental patients, prisoners and inner city youths will be seen in the program.

Some of the groups whose films will be shown include:

1. Yellow Ball Workshop. For more than five years this group at the Lexington School of the Dance in Lexington, Mass. has pioneered in creative animation done by children six to 16.

2. Community Film Workshop Council. A sampling of the work being done by young people in inner city groups.

3. Youth Drug Study Unit. Viewers will see films made by young drug users and video tapes which are the result of group therapy tapings and of individual monologue tapings at Langley Poster Institute, San Francisco.

4. Individual Filmmakers. Two of the winners in a teen-age movie contest will screen and discuss their work.

5. San Quentin Inmate Film Workshop. San Quentin has conducted a film workshop to train filmmakers. They have produced a film, "The Cage," which is in distribution.

6. Newburgh (N.Y.) Public Schools. The entire system from kindergarten through high school is developing a program of media studies and media making.

CRITICS' CORNER

THE KING FAMILY, series debut Wednesday, Ch. 7.

Well, the King family is back on network television on a regular basis — for awhile anyway — and is as bouncy, smiling and healthy as ever.

ABC's emergency replacement for the extremely short-lived "Turn-on" is a tuneful colorful musical hour designed to soothe the weary, ruffle no feathers and demonstrate the joys of familialy togetherness.

It is, actually, a very pleasant substitution, far from the current variety vogue that combines jokes, gags, blackouts and sketches and uses an occasional musical interlude like a punctuation mark.

The Kings, from the four matriarchs with their close harmony through the ranks of children, grandchildren, in-laws and cousins, smile a lot, sing a lot and don't really try many jokes. The sets and costumes are handsome, and the whole thing ought to provide some rest for ABC's censors and charm a large segment of the audience.

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

WAYNE ... WOMEN ... AND SONG, aired Wednesday, Ch. 4.

"Music Hall" started Wayne Newton, a vivacious, poised young singer with an excellent tenor voice and an assured style honed smooth on night-club stages.

The show, gave Tim Conway a chance to shine in a number sketches with guest star Judy Carne. Conway, a facile, funny man, extracted good humor from one sketch in which he played an absent minded Clark Kent who had forgotten his Superman clothes were at the cleaners. He was even funnier playing a girl jockey undergoing her first interview. Lucie Arnaz, Desi and Lucy's long-legged daughter, was around for a little singing and dancing and did well.

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

BONANZA, aired last Sunday, Ch. 4.

Bigotry in the old west is the theme of actor-writer-director Michael Landon's story, "The Wish," and he delivers a poignant, well-told tale which benefits considerably from fine acting and Landon's slick direction.

Landon's scripting efforts aren't wholly successful however. It becomes a bit too saccharine at times, a soaper out west. And his black family is so utterly, so completely virtuous, that they lack dimension.

But because of a particularly powerful performance by Ossie Davis, as head of the clan, "Wish" still emerges a thoughtful and interesting drama. Davis brings alive the fate of the Negro who is the target of prejudice. He limns his role with dignity and understanding ...

Dan Blocker's portrayal is a good one, and so is that of George Spell, the boy who has the wish that his father was white. Somebody missed, however, by showing the juve badly beaten and a short time later miraculously recovered from his bruises. They took the makeup off too quickly ...

TV NOTEBOOK

"What's My Line" is winding up its first season as a syndicated panel show in which Arlene Francis is the only panel member who was on the show in its CBS days.

It's success in its new form has resulted in pulling another venerable game show, "To Tell the Truth" out of mothballs for similar treatment.

Kitty Carlisle and Peggy Cass from the original show will return. Garry Moore, late of "I've Got a Secret" will replace Bud Collyer as host, and Bill Cullen will also be on the panel.

JUDY CARNE of "Laugh-In" who might have spent the summer drying out from her water-drench suck-it-to-me season with the show will spend her vacation this year turning out a dozen "Summer Music Hall" shows for NBC. She will work with the singing team of Saudler and Young in programs taped in England. The other six shows in the series will star Don Ho and be made in his home base, Hawaii. The summer series starts in mid-May.

NBC-TV's April 20 broadcast of Broadway's Tony Awards will feature scenes from dramatic plays for the first time. One scene will be from "The Great White Hope," starring James Earl Jones as the legendary black boxer Jack Johnson. There will also be sequences from the musicals "Hair" and "Zorba."

A TWO-HOUR adaptation of "Arsenic and Old Lace" taped a year ago with rare appearances by Helen Hayes and Lillian Gish will be broadcast by ABC on April 2. The two famous actresses will play the sweetly homicidal spinsters and David Wayne has the Teddy Roosevelt role.

NBC-TV has renewed "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color" through the 1970-71 season. The show has been airing since 1954, having been on ABC-TV for six years . . . John Hopkins, president of Chris-Craft Television Broadcast Division (KCOP, Los Angeles, KPTV, Portland, WTCN, Minneapolis-St. Paul) has been elected to the board of directors of Chris-Craft Industries.

KTLA (Ch. 5) has made available for use by the Radio-TV department at California State College, Long Beach, three live television cameras and other electronic equipment.

Violence Issue Takes a New Twist

Inquiry Promised Into Mental Consequences of TV Shows

By JACK GOULD
New York Times Service

The recurring issue of violence on television has taken a new twist with the injection of the argument that excessive mayhem or brutality may have consequences for the health of young viewers much as tobacco may pose physical hazards to cigarette addicts.

Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, has promised to launch an inquiry into the possible mental and clinical consequences of a diet of violence on the young and his office has indicated that the office of the surgeon general of the Public Health Service will play a major role.

FINCH'S MOVE coincided with the demand of Sen. John O. Pastore, chairman of the Communications Subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee, that the surgeon general become directly involved with a view to submitting some kind of definitive finding within a year.

Quite conceivably the new official concern over violence could cause a measure of embarrassment within President Nixon's cabinet. One current show with a strong content of violence, including the theme of kidnapping which most programs voluntarily try to avoid, is "The F. B. I.," the Sunday night ABC series personally endorsed by J. Edgar Hoover, director of The Federal Bureau of Investigation. The F. B. I. is, of course, a seeming law unto itself, yet it nominally falls under the purview of Att. Gen. John M. Mitchell.

THE DILEMMA of the networks, whose representatives were summoned to the Commerce Committee again last week, is that they still have a backlog of profitable shows which do contain acts of violence. They have been slowly paring the volume of such material, but a bona fide question of where to draw the line does not exist.

Violence is such a staple of drama that its complete elimination is bound to tie the hands of able writers. That some shows have capitalized in the past on bestiality as an end in itself is not open to serious question, but to determine when recourse to violence is dramatically justified and when violence is being abused is an assignment for a genius yet to be born.

ONE PSYCHIATRIST has suggested that TV violence might even be a contributory factor to bed soiling by children. Yet Lord Hill, chairman of the British Broadcasting Corp., has reported on a study showing that a group kept totally isolated from television violence was more violent in real life than a matched group exposed to TV violence.

It is not chance, of course, that concern over violence on television comes at a time of both national and international violence that is not concocted by Hollywood producers but is part of a troubled society.

With wars and threats of wars prevailing around the world, with student unrest and racial strife, the home screen cannot close its eyes to the harsh facts of life. To undertake surveys of violence in entertainment may be skirting the deeper issues: How much more violence arises from the ferment of the underprivileged no longer willing to be ignored, from student reaction to a war which even respected adults deplore,

YOU CAN MEET MORE SINGLE PEOPLE IN ONE YEAR,

. . . HIGHLY COMPATIBLE WITH YOU, THAN YOU HAVE PROBABLY MET IN YOUR ENTIRE LIFETIME . . .

Tens of thousands of Single Adults are already enjoying the benefits of dating people who are as close to being ideal for one another as modern technology can determine. Utilizing the most advanced and sophisticated computer techniques with the GE 635, COMPATIBILITY TESTING offers the largest membership pool of all the qualified companies.

Simply return the form below and you will learn, confidentially of course, how the world's oldest, largest and most respected computerized introduction service can GUARANTEE you 2 to 10 compatible referrals every 30 days for five full years, all for one reasonable fixed fee.

COMPATIBILITY TESTING'S CHARACTER ANALYSIS

Answer the following questions spontaneously and indicate your answers in the box after each question ranging on a scale from "no" to "yes." If your answer to a particular question is positively NO, put a mark in the extreme left box. If a qualified no, mark the box second from the left. If it is neither a yes or no, box "?." If a qualified yes . . . the box second from right and if positively YES, mark the box on the extreme right and so on through the 50 questions.

Tens of thousands of Single Adults are already enjoying the benefits of dating people who are as close to being ideal for one another as modern technology can determine. Utilizing the most advanced and sophisticated computer techniques with the GE 635, COMPATIBILITY TESTING offers the largest membership pool of all the qualified companies.

COMPATIBILITY TESTING'S CHARACTER ANALYSIS

Answer the following questions spontaneously and indicate your reaction in the box after each question ranging on a scale from "no" to "yes." If your answer to a particular question is positively NO!, put a mark in the extreme left box. If a qualified no, mark the box second from the left, if it is neither a yes or no, box "?." If a qualified yes . . . the box second from right and if positively YES!, mark the box on the extreme right and so on though the 50 questions.

Cecil and his Party Time program on Saturday night was a favorite among people all over the western United States. It went off the air in 1968 . . . Cecil did continue his Swinging Years program on Saturday mornings, however.

Late in 1968, the station acquired a new vice-president, and he brought in a new program director from Milwaukee . . .

The station felt it was not pleasing everybody, and that a change was necessary. It has always been said in radio that when you try to please everybody, you please nobody . . .

When Chuck Cecil was removed from the air and stuck in the newsroom, it was the final straw for the old standbys. Was it too much to ask for KFI to give two hours a week to the people who have been faithful listeners for so many years? Evidently so. Had the station done so, it probably would have avoided all this furor and these listeners would have probably left their sets dialed to 640 . . .

Some of your readers have felt this was a great move; "to hell with the past." . . . But the Swinging Years listeners have a legitimate gripe. They, the listeners own the 640 wavelength—not KFI radio. The public granted Earle C. Anthony Inc. the right to operate on that frequency and they have the choice to deny them that right.

The thing that burned me up—and something that is not generally known—is this. Late in 1968 KFI announced that its license was up for renewal by the FCC, and that listeners could write the bureau in Washington and advise them of items pertinent to the issue . . . Two weeks after the FCC announced renewal of the license for another three years, all of the old regulars—Dick Sinclair, Chuck Cecil, Dave Starrling, Bob Kerr, the Night Owls, and finally The Swinging Years were gone.

What it boils down to is this. KFI, in effect, got endorsement for programming they knew they were going to throw out the minute they got that license in their hands for another three years.

I urge everyone to do as I have done and write the FCC in Washington, D.C., and express his distaste . . .

New Twist On TV Violence

or from the spreading use of expensive narcotics?

TELEVISION may exert a strong contributory influence on the environment of today and efforts to analyze it can be useful. But any expectation of shielding the young from all hints of violence seems illusory when, through TV, radio and the press, the modern youngster can obtain a variety of information at an extremely early age and is daily reminded that his seniors have not acquitted themselves with great distinction in the cause of peace.

The thing that burned me up—and something that is not generally known—is this. Late in 1968 KFI announced that its license was up for renewal by the FCC, and that listeners could write the bureau in Washington and advise them of items pertinent to the issue . . . Two weeks after the FCC announced renewal of the license for another three years, all of the old regulars—Dick Sinclair, Chuck Cecil, Dave Starrling, Bob Kerr, the Night Owls, and finally The Swinging Years were gone.

What it boils down to is this. KFI, in effect, got endorsement for programming they knew they were going to throw out the minute they got that license in their hands for another three years.

I urge everyone to do as I have done and write the FCC in Washington, D.C., and express his distaste . . .

New Twist On TV Violence

or from the spreading use of expensive narcotics?

TELEVISION may exert a strong contributory influence on the environment of today and efforts to analyze it can be useful. But any expectation of shielding the young from all hints of violence seems illusory when, through TV, radio and the press, the modern youngster can obtain a variety of information at an extremely early age and is daily reminded that his seniors have not acquitted themselves with great distinction in the cause of peace.

Want the facts? Want to spike rumors? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Can you tell me if President Nixon plans to appoint his former campaign manager, John Mitchell, to the U.S. Supreme Court berth now occupied by Justice Earl Warren?—Harvey Aldrich, Oakland, Calif.
A. Nixon will probably appoint Attorney General John Mitchell to the U.S. Supreme Court and move Deputy Attorney General Richard Kleindienst into Mitchell's spot.

Q. I understand that croupiers of various gambling casinos are under orders from the Secret Service never to permit Sam Houston Johnson, Lyndon's brother, to lose at their tables. Is this so? — T. L., Arlington, Va.
A. The Secret Service has nothing to do with Sam Houston Johnson. Several weeks ago, Maxine Cheshire of the Washington Post wrote of an incident in which Sam Houston Johnson was losing $15,000 in a Bahamas gambling casino. A friend of his thereupon took the croupier aside, explained who Sam Houston Johnson was. Thirty minutes later Sam was even.

Q. Who said or wrote: "Men have as exaggerated an idea of their rights as women have of their wrongs?" —Bella Cornfeld, Tenafly, N.J.
A. Edgar Watson Howe, 1853-1937, American journalist and author.

Q. Why is there so little publicity about Tricia Nixon? How old is she? Has she graduated from college? Is she going steady? Does she have a health problem? — Shari Arnold, Tucson, Ariz.
A. Tricia Nixon, 22, was graduated from Finch last June. She is not going "steady." She has no health problems. She is in her "marking-time" period.

Q. I heard that Mick Jagger made Marianne Faithfull pregnant. Is this true?—D. V., Newark, N.J.
A. Jagger, lead singer of the Rolling Stones, and his girlfriend Marianne did announce that they were expecting a child. They felt that marriage was unnecessary. Marianne, like Yoko Ono, Beatle John Lennon's girlfriend, suffered a miscarriage several months ago.

Q. Ed Sullivan looks pretty dark on the TV screen. Is he part Negro? Is that why he has so many colored performers on his show?—Tom Porter, Minot, S.D.
A. Sullivan is white. When it comes to talent, however, he is color-blind.

CAPTAIN ROBB AND LYNDA.

Q. Capt. Chuck Robb, married to Lynda Johnson — does he plan to go to work for his father-in-law's TV station in Austin, or make it on his own?—Ed Hanley, Dallas, Tex.
A. Captain Robb plans to remain in the Marine Corps, settle somewhere around Washington, D.C., with his wife and daughter after he returns from Vietnam in May.

Q. Is The Exhibitionist by Henry Sutton based at all on the lives of Henry Fonda and his daughter Jane?—Ruth Anne Hicks, Garland, Tex.
A. Author and publisher maintain it is a work of complete fiction.

BROOKE

FARMER

Q. Did President Nixon ever consider any blacks or minority men for his Cabinet?—Elizabeth Hannah, Louisville, Ga.
A. Yes, he did. He offered Sen. Ed Brooke of Massachusetts a Cabinet job. He tried hard to employ black representatives, many of whom turned him down. He is still trying, recently appointed James Farmer as Assistant Secretary for Administration of Health, Education and Welfare.

Q. Can you tell me if it is true that Australia is desperate for girls?—Genevieve Rochelle, Bangor, Me.
A. Yes, single girls are wanted desperately in Australia. There is a shortage of young, unattached females there.

Q. I understand the 1972 presidential race is already set, with Richard Nixon representing the Republicans and Ted Kennedy the Democrats. Is this so?—Edith Gallagher, Salem, Mass.
A. Too early to tell but that's the probable lineup.

Q. I know it cost actor James Mason more than $1 million to get rid of his wife Pamela. Was it worth it? Has Mason remarried? If so, to whom?—Louise Klein, Los Angeles, Calif.
A. Mason feels it was worth $1 million to divorce his wife. Currently he plays the overseas field although he does have his Hollywood attachments.

THANKS A MILLION: PAMELA AND JAMES MASON.

Q. What is the relationship between Lee Radziwill, Jackie Kennedy's sister, and author Truman Capote? Are they just friends, or what cooks between these two?—J. H., Gouverneur, N.Y.
A. They are dear, dear friends.

Q. Who paid for the three prominent lawyers who defended Sirhan Sirhan? Why was it necessary to have such a long and costly trial?—Francis Swellow, De Bary, Fla.
A. The attorneys took the case without payment. The mills of true justice in this country grind slowly to afford the defendant his every legal right.

'Inky' Clark most popular man in America

BY DEREK NORCROSS
PARADE'S YOUTH EDITOR

"Inky" Clark, Yale's dean of admissions, with the morning's mail, mostly applications from coeds now permitted to enter the university for the first time.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Last October, before President Kingman Brewster presented to his trustees a plan to admit 500 women to Yale University, for 276 years a secure bastion of male supremacy, he checked with "Inky" Clark.

R. Inslee Clark Jr., tall, handsome, 35 and unmarried, is Yale's dean of admissions.

"Do you think," Brewster asked, "you can handle this thing on short notice?"

"You just say the word," Clark urged, "and we'll roll."

Brewster uttered the welcome word, and "Inky" has been rolling with the punches ever since. "The punches" consist of some 10,000 letters, inquiries, telegrams, cables, and telephone calls from young women the world over. They consist of alumni pressure, and special pleas from "friends of the university," a euphemism for people who have donated money. They consist of all ways, subtle, brazen, and insidious, to influence admissions selectivity. But Inky Clark is holding his ground.

Last week, as he and his admissions committee were in the midst of selecting Yale's first 500 undergraduate female Yalies—250 will enter the freshman class this September and another 250 will be accepted as sophomore and junior transferees—Inky Clark was sure "we're going to wind up with 500 of the best young women in this country, young women incidentally who disprove the old adage that beauty and brains do not come in the same package."

What sort of girl is seeking Yale? And what sort of girl—she's sure eventually to be called "Yale-Quail" — is Yale seeking?

Clark says that Yale wants the girl who is more interested in "obtaining a Yale education than a Yale husband, a girl who is interested in our courses, our faculties, our specialties and not primarily in the opportunity to live a fuller social life by virtue of having more men around, although certainly that is an added attraction."

Since females are frequently proficient in masking their true motives, since many girls attend college to secure Mrs. degrees, how is an admissions staff to discriminate between truth and sham?

Like most Ivy League colleges, Yale tries to reflect society at large by recruiting and admitting bright students of all races and classes who offer evidence of scholarship, excellence, specialization, potential, or a combination of these.

A girl's high school or finishing school record, her grades, her scholastic aptitude test scores, her character, her accomplishments if any, her goals, her background, her letters of recommendation, her extra-curricular activities and interests—all these are considered in the final judgment to accept or reject.

Since there are always more applications than acceptances—2700 girls applied for 250 freshmen berths at Yale—the selection process is a trying one. Clark and his staff, however, choose on the basis of merit, not influence. For example, there are at least 250 Yale alumni who have each contributed $25,000 or more to the university. Many of these alumni have no sons, only daughters. How easy it would be to accord these Yale daughters "a special break" and fill the vacancies with them. But, according to Clark, "The daughters of many Yale graduates have said to me in interviews, 'Dean Clark, if I can't get into Yale on my own, then I don't want to make it any other way.'

"Those are the girls who've been applying to Yale," he says admiringly. "They are absolutely tops. It's been an overwhelming and rewarding experience for me to talk with these girls. They are going to bring much to this campus."

Educated at Garden City High School, Long Island, N.Y., at Yale, Syracuse, and Columbia, Inky Clark taught at Lawrenceville, a prep school in New Jersey, before he returned to Yale as dean of Trumbull College, one of the residential units. He was President Brewster's first major appointment when Brewster took over the Yale reins in 1964.

Broadening the base

Since that time Clark has revitalized Yale's admission policy by broadening the base of incoming students. He has abolished the special rating system which favored students from Eastern private schools and has set out to recruit the best students in the country. "We try to find students of talent," he explains, "who may never have considered or even heard of Yale. We are also striving to locate black students in the inner city who might profit from Yale, and we have sent out our own black students to recruit others wherever they can find them."

To manage the increased scope of Yale admissions, Clark has built a staff of 15 which includes a former assistant chaplain, a public school teacher, a businessman and a government official and others, most of whom never attended Yale.

Alumni reaction to Clark has been generally favorable despite the fact that his selection policy places less importance on a student's family background than upon the student's scholastic ability. Girl applicants who have met Clark describe him as "dreamy . . . a gorgeous hunk of man . . . a gentleman of intelligence and obvious character."

"Inky Clark," says one Stanford University coed who has applied for transfer, "is the best reason for going to Yale that I know of. If Yale turns out his kind of man, then Yale is the school for me."

A new decorative note on the campus: Coed Nancy Lee is being shown around by Robert DeLorenzo. The girls applying are "absolutely tops," says "Inky."

'Inky' Clark most popular man in America

"Inky" Clark, Yale's dean of admissions, with the morning's mail, mostly applications from coeds now permitted to enter the university for the first time.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Last October, before President Kingman Brewster presented to his trustees a plan to admit 500 women to Yale University, for 276 years a secure bastion of male supremacy, he checked with "Inky" Clark.

R. Inslee Clark Jr., tall, handsome, 35 and unmarried, is Yale's dean of admissions.

"Do you think," Brewster asked, "you can handle this thing on short notice?"

"You just say the word," Clark urged, "and we'll roll."

Brewster uttered the welcome word, and "Inky" has been rolling with the punches ever since. "The punches" consist of some 10,000 letters, inquiries, telegrams, cables, and telephone calls from young women the world over. They consist of alumni pressure, and special pleas from "friends of the university," a euphemism for people who have donated money. They consist of all ways, subtle, brazen, and insidious, to influence admissions selectivity. But Inky Clark is holding his ground.

SALUTE!

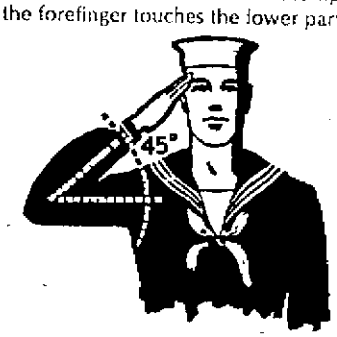

Where did the Joint Chiefs go wrong?

Maybe the Joint Chiefs of Staff need a refresher course in basic training. They may know how to run the services, but they're not so hot when it comes to saluting—which is the first lesson taught to new recruits.

If you don't believe it, take a close look at these pictures of the four Chiefs of Staff saluting during a recent ceremony honoring President Nixon outside the Pentagon. According to the military manual, the correct method is for the saluter to "raise his right hand smartly in the most direct manner until the tip of the forefinger touches the lower part of the headdress or forehead, above and slightly to the right of the right eye.... Thumb and forefinger are extended and joined. Hand and wrist are held straight with palm down."

For the men in the ranks, a salutary lesson.

This is the correct method of saluting, as prescribed for American servicemen in current military manual. Compare the official diagram with salutes of the Joint Chiefs as demonstrated in the photographs.

Meet the sergeant—this is policewoman Colleen Nielsen of Los Angeles, resplendent in uniform.

Wearing ordinary street clothing while working as a decoy, Sgt. Nielsen shows how to deal with a male attacker by going for his face as she calls for help.

COLLEEN NIELSEN

The two worlds of a policewoman

by Lloyd Shearer

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Colleen Nielsen is a policewoman, one of 151 on duty here in the nation's third largest city.

Although Chicago hired the widow of a police officer in 1893 and carried her on the rolls as a "patrolman," the Los Angeles Police Department was the first to appoint women to its force. That was in 1910, five years before England assigned a female member to the London Metropolitan Police, and eight years before the first policewoman was employed on the European continent in Stuttgart, Germany.

Colleen Nielsen is 30, attractive, married and by nature well-endowed. Blonde, blue-eyed, extroverted and cheerful, she measures 5 feet 6, weighs 130 pounds, boasts the type of figure men look at twice because they don't believe it the first time. Her vital statistics are 36—24—36. In her time she has been mistaken for a model, a secretary, a schoolteacher, a salesgirl—anything but a policewoman.

Sgt. Nielsen has worked on the Los Angeles police force nine years. She draws a salary of $940 per month and cannot understand "why thousands of other young women don't join me in this type of work."

"Really!" she exclaims enthusiastically. "It's an absolute dream job. Far better, at least in my opinion, than being an airline hostess. Certainly, it's less dangerous. I've never heard of a single policewoman losing her life in the line of duty, or even of getting badly hurt.

"I'm telling you," she repeats. "It's a dream job in a relatively new field for women. I think in the whole country there are probably less than 5000 or 6000 policewomen. We easily need double that number. And the requirements aren't stiff at all."

In Los Angeles, for example, where policewomen receive the same salary as policemen $715 to $842 per month (with uniforms, revolvers and other equipment furnished by the police department), candidates for the job must be at least 21 years of age but not yet 31. They must be in good health, at least 5 feet 4 inches tall, and have at least 20/40 vision in each eye without glasses. They should also have a high school diploma or the equivalent.

Most other cities employing policewomen—New York, Los Angeles, Detroit, Cleveland, Washington, D.C., Chicago, Philadelphia, and St. Louis hire the most—demand just about the same requirements. According to Sgt. Nielsen, however, "Police work for a woman in Los Angeles is a whole lot more exciting and fulfilling than it is in several other cities, because here we not only serve in juvenile divisions, but also in vice, intelligence, scientific investigation, and community relations.

Male-female team

"We go out on patrol with male partners working as a team, and we receive the same courses as men recruits except for traffic courses. In some cities, the police departments park policewomen behind desks where they're mostly stuck with administrative work. Not in Los Angeles. Here, we really lead an active life. We take part in almost everything except shoot-outs."

The basic difference between the work of a policeman and policewoman is that the man, physically stronger, is capable of enforcing the law involving all types of crime, while the woman traditionally is limited to crime involving female and juvenile offenders and their victims.

Crime in the U.S., however, is a young man's game. About 46 percent is committed by boys and girls under the age of 18, and about half of these are 15 years of age or less. So that female police really have plenty to do if only their male superiors will let them expand the range of their duties. More and more police chiefs seem to be doing so.

Five years ago St. Louis added two women to its Decoy Squad, assigned them, dressed as civilians, to walk in high crime rate areas. Equipped with miniature radios, in constant contact with officers in nearby cars, their function is to attract purse-snatchers, rapists, assailants of all types who victimize citizens.

Crime in the U.S., however, is a young man's game. About 46 percent is committed by boys and girls under the age of 18, and about half of these are 15 years of age or less. Five years ago St. Louis added two women to its Decoy Squad, assigned them, dressed as civilians, to walk in high crime rate areas. Equipped with miniature radios, in constant contact with officers in nearby cars, their function is to attract purse-snatchers, rapists, assailants of all types who victimize citizens.

This type of police decoy unit has been copied and adapted by many cities whose departments add their own innovations.

In New York City, by way of illustration, "Operation Decoy" frequently involves policemen dressed as women. One of the best of these is Patrolman Richard Anders, 6 feet 1, 220 pounds, a burly, broad-shouldered bruiser of a cop who wears a wig, a brassiere and has become a specialist in walking and wiggling like a woman.

Anders is no longer assigned to this particular type of decoy duty, "but when I was," he recalls nostalgically, "I sure was successful, and I sure learned what women go through in many areas of our society. I was planted naturally in districts where many crimes had been committed against women: mugging, rapes, attacks, that sort of stuff. The first day out I was petrified. I was sure that everyone was taking me for some queer kind of male as I pranced along the street. But passing a bar, I heard someone remark, 'Who is she? She must be new in the neighborhood.' Then I knew I had pulled it off."

Quick proposal

Gradually, Anders became more expert and comfortable in his disguise.

"Often," he says, "I would sit on park benches or benches in housing developments, with my two back-up men in a parked car nearby.

"Once a guy sat down beside me and started talking about his miserable marriage. 'If I get a divorce,' he asked, 'will you marry me?' Another time I was wearing my blonde wig when two men passed by. 'Beautiful hair,' one said, sizing me up, 'but boy! Is she ever ugly.' "

Members of New York's Tactical Patrol Force who masquerade as women, wear lipstick, mascara, eye shadow, all the necessary female cosmetics. They make each other up and take great pains to appear completely feminine. New York police officers feel strongly, however, that in their city, "Decoy" is one of the most vulnerable and dangerous details—"After all, you're staked out, standing or sitting there, waiting for a crime to be committed against your own person"—and therefore they prefer not to use women for that operation.

In Los Angeles and other cities, however, no policewoman has ever been seriously injured in decoy work. Thus the departments do not hesitate to use them.

Last year, for example, a series of attacks on women occurred in the industrial area of North Hollywood. Half a dozen women of all ages, terrorized by their tall, masked assailant, had been compelled by him to perform a variety of sexual acts under threat of death.

Two female members of the Los Angeles Police Department were assigned to help in the case: Sgt. Colleen Nielsen and Policewoman Angela Cimino. Each took turns walking at night in the general vicinity of the attacks.

The first night, as Policewoman Cimino ambled along Chandler Boulevard, nothing happened. The police, strategically staked out at key points, to cover her tracks and protect her at the first signs of danger, were sharply on the alert. Policemen feel most deeply about protecting policewomen and will go to any lengths to prevent their getting hurt.

The second night, as Colleen Nielsen, "dressed in my old high school coat, wearing capris and a scarf over my head, and walking with a limp," started down Chandler Boulevard, the policemen noticed a tall, dark-haired young man as he got out of his car and began running through a maintenance yard.

Eagerly and carefully they followed behind as he stalked Colleen Nielsen. From his previous victims, she had learned his pattern of attack. He would hide in the bushes, leap out from behind when she had passed him, carry her back to the bushes or some deserted railroad underpass.

"I knew," she says, "that he was running across the railroad tracks, lying in wait for me. I was in communication with my back-up men, and my bug (electronic device) was working fine. Suddenly I heard a figure rustling in the bushes, the very same bushes where he had attacked a woman before. I turned and I saw him. I kept on walking, trying to act perfectly normal. He was ten feet behind me to the left. He cut out and ran ahead so that when I crossed the street he would be waiting for me.

"But instead of me, he ran right smack into a police officer. He was wearing a turtleneck sweater pulled up over his mouth. On previous attacks, he had worn a mask. He identified himself as Edward Martinez Huerta, gave his age as 28 and said that he worked as a diaper washer. He was charged on six counts and pled guilty to attempted rape."

Colleen Nielsen takes such cases in stride. "They add zip to my life," she explains, "and they make me feel that I'm doing meaningful work. That's why, for example, I don't mind undercover roles like playing a prostitute which I'm frequently called upon to do, because that's how we sometimes break up vice rings.

High heels are useful in delivering counter-attack to an assailant's foot.

"In most large cities, and Los Angeles is no different, there are men—let's call them procurers—who have four or five or even more girls working for them as prostitutes. Sometimes they turn these girls into dope addicts. They do anything to keep their girls working and earning money for them.

"How do you apprehend these creatures?" Sgt. Nielsen asks. "The girls who work for them are afraid to testify against them. How does the police department get evidence that these men are offering, forcing, or enticing young women into a life of prostitution? It's the policewoman who gets the evidence in many cases.

After thug is subdued, Colleen applies wrist grip to lead him into custody.

"For weeks I sat in one Hollywood bar, winning the confidence of the bartenders and other prostitutes who patronized the place. I'd let men buy me drinks, and I'd string them along, telling them I cost much more than they could afford. But generally I gave the impression that I was willing and able. I wore bleached, blonde hair and piled it on top of my head and wore suggestive clothes.

"One time," she continues, "I was sitting in a bar. I had it staked out for a week, wondering when one particular procurer would approach me with an offer. Then two policemen walked in. I didn't know them. They were working vice for another division. Suddenly a man came up and said, 'Watch it, baby. The heat's right behind you.' The man was warning me. After the police left I thanked him profusely for saving me from the cops. That's when he explained that he was a procurer and wanted me to work for him.

"He promised me love, protection, medical care, an abortion if I ever needed one. And I, of course, turned him in. I think the district attorney's office is now preparing the case against him."

What sort of young women join Police Departments? And what is their motivation?

Some, like Colleen Nielsen, are part of veteran police families whose members regard police work as honorable, desirable, civic careers. Sgt. Nielsen's father, Roy Tracey, is chief of police at Gardena, a community south of Los Angeles best known for its legalized poker parlors. Her husband, Arnold, a former police sergeant, is Gov. Ronald Reagan's regional representative.

Colleen Nielsen claims she was "born into police work." Other policewomen admit that the pay scale and security features of the job are what first attracted them. Many cities retire policewomen after 20 years of service at half pay for life. Still others point out honestly that they were looking for excitement, hunting for a husband, wanted to help people, were seriously interested in crime prevention, preferred the companionship of male colleagues to females.

Despite disparate motivation, most policewomen, according to police authorities, are dedicated, devoted peace officers of sympathy and intelligence. In many cases they are indispensable, not only in dealing with female and juvenile criminals but certainly in abortion and frequently in narcotics investigations.

In the latter they are being used increasingly as undercover buyers and addicts to help break up rings of suppliers or pushers. In some cities almost 90 percent of all female criminals are dope addicts, and policewomen are needed to search these addicts for evidence before it is disposed of.

Policewomen are also being assigned to various college campuses to help male officers control student riots. Captain Minna Ralph of the Alameda County sheriff's department, remembers, "During the free-speech-movement demonstrations at the University of California in Berkeley, eight of our women deputy sheriffs worked side by side with the male officers getting the 6 to 700 students out of Sproul Hall. The men handled the boys, the women handled the girls."

A new day

The day when women were accepted into police departments largely as a sop to female community indignation, and then pigeonholed as clerks or restricted to the radio message detail is rapidly passing.

In the past 20 years policewomen have functioned as plainclothes detectives on every type of crime: homicide, rape, theft, fraud, bunco, narcotics, shoplifting, prostitution, the whole sordid arsenal. They have joined men in raids on brothels, homosexual clubs, after-hours joints, bars selling liquor to minors, go-go clubs, and pornographic exhibitions.

Without fuss or fanfare they have acquitted themselves nobly. Which is why, like dimple-cheeked Sgt. Colleen Nielsen, they are very much in demand.

P.S. They make good wives, too—if you don't mind one who can throw you over her shoulder with a slight flip of her wrist.

volves policemen dressed as women. One of the best of these is Patrolman Richard Anders, 6 feet 1, 220 pounds, a burly, broad-shouldered bruiser of a cop who wears a wig, a brassiere and has become a specialist in walking and wiggling like a woman.

Anders is no longer assigned to this particular type of decoy duty, "but when I was," he recalls nostalgically, "I sure was successful, and I sure learned what women go through in many areas of our society. I was planted naturally in districts where many crimes had been committed against women: mugging, rapes, attacks, that sort of stuff. The first day out I was petrified. I was sure that everyone was taking me for some queer kind of male as I pranced along the street. But passing a bar, I heard someone remark, 'Who is she? She must be new in the neighborhood.' Then I knew I had pulled it off."

Quick proposal

Gradually, Anders became more expert and comfortable in his disguise.

"Often," he says, "I would sit on park benches or benches in housing developments, with my two back-up men in a parked car nearby.

"Once a guy sat down beside me and started talking about his miserable marriage. 'If I get a divorce,' he asked, 'will you marry me?' Another time I was wearing my blonde wig when two men passed by. 'Beautiful hair,' one said, sizing me up, 'but boy! Is she ever ugly.'"

Members of New York's Tactical Patrol Force who masquerade as women, wear lipstick, mascara, eye shadow, all the necessary female cosmetics. They make each other up and take great pains to appear completely feminine. New York police officers feel strongly, however, that in their city, "Decoy" is one of the most vulnerable and dangerous details—"After all, you're staked out, standing or sitting there, waiting for a crime to be committed against your own person"—and therefore they prefer not to use women for that operation.

In Los Angeles and other cities, however, no policewoman has ever been seriously injured in decoy work. Thus the departments do not hesitate to use them.

Last year, for example, a series of attacks on women occurred in the industrial area of North Hollywood. Half a dozen women of all ages, terrorized by their tall, masked assailant, had been compelled by him to perform a variety of sexual acts under threat of death.

Two female members of the Los Angeles Police Department were assigned to help in the case: Sgt. Colleen Nielsen and Policewoman Angela Cimino. Each took turns walking at night in the general vicinity of the attacks.

The first night, as Policewoman Cimino ambled along Chandler Boulevard, nothing happened. The police, strategically staked out at key points, to cover her tracks and protect her at the first signs of danger, were sharply on the alert. Policemen feel most deeply about protecting policewomen and will go to any lengths to prevent their getting hurt.

The second night, as Colleen Nielsen, "dressed in my old high school coat, wearing capris and a scarf over my head, and walking with a limp," started down Chandler Boulevard, the policemen noticed a tall, dark-haired young man as he got out of his car and began running through a maintenance yard.

Eagerly and carefully they followed behind as he stalked Colleen Nielsen. From his previous victims, she had learned his pattern of attack. He would hide in the bushes, leap out from behind when she had passed him, carry her back to the bushes or some deserted railroad underpass.

"I knew," she says, "that he was running across the railroad tracks, lying in wait for me. I was in communication with my back-up men, and my bug (electronic device) was working fine. Suddenly I heard a figure rustling in the bushes, the very same bushes where he had attacked a woman before. I turned and I saw him. I kept on walking, trying to act perfectly normal. He was ten feet behind me to the left. He cut out and ran ahead so that when I crossed the street he would be waiting for me.

"But instead of me, he ran right smack into a police officer. He was wearing a turtleneck sweater pulled up over his mouth. On previous attacks, he had worn a mask. He identified himself as Edward Martinez Huerta, gave his age as 28 and said that he worked as a diaper washer. He was charged on six counts and pled guilty to attempted rape."

Colleen Nielsen takes such cases in stride. "They add zip to my life," she explains, "and they make me feel that I'm doing meaningful work. That's why, for example, I don't mind undercover roles like playing a prostitute which I'm frequently called upon to do, because that's how we sometimes break up vice rings.

High heels are useful in delivering counter-attack to an assailant's foot.

"In most large cities, and Los Angeles is no different, there are men—let's call them procurers—who have four or five or even more girls working for them as prostitutes. Sometimes they turn these girls into dope addicts. They do anything to keep their girls working and earning money for them.

"How do you apprehend these creatures?" Sgt. Nielsen asks. "The girls who work for them are afraid to testify against them. How does the police department get evidence that these men are offering, forcing, or enticing young women into a life of prostitution? It's the policewoman who gets the evidence in many cases.

After thug is subdued, Colleen applies wrist grip to lead him into custody.

"For weeks I sat in one Hollywood bar, winning the confidence of the bartenders and other prostitutes who patronized the place. I'd let men buy me drinks, and I'd string them along, telling them I cost much more than they could afford. But generally I gave the impression that I was willing and able. I wore bleached, blonde hair and piled it on top of my head and wore suggestive clothes.

"One time," she continues, "I was sitting in a bar. I had it staked out for a week, wondering when one particular procurer would approach me with an offer. Then two policemen walked in. I didn't know them. They were working vice for another division. Suddenly a man came up and said, 'Watch it, baby. The heat's right behind you.' The man was warning me. After the police left I thanked him profusely for saving me from the cops. That's when he explained that he was a procurer and wanted me to work for him.

"He promised me love, protection, medical care, an abortion if I ever needed one. And I, of course, turned him in. I think the district attorney's office is now preparing the case against him."

What sort of young women join Police Departments? And what is their motivation?

Some, like Colleen Nielsen, are part of veteran police families whose members regard police work as honorable, desirable, civic careers. Sgt. Nielsen's father, Roy Tracey, is chief of police at Gardena, a community south of Los Angeles best known for its legalized poker parlors. Her husband, Arnold, a former police sergeant, is Gov. Ronald Reagan's regional representative.

Colleen Nielsen claims she was "born into police work." Other policewomen admit that the pay scale and security features of the job are what first attracted them. Many cities retire policewomen after 20 years of service at half pay for life. Still others point out honestly that they were looking for excitement, hunting for a husband, wanted to help people, were seriously interested in crime prevention, preferred the companionship of male colleagues to females.

Despite disparate motivation, most policewomen, according to police authorities, are dedicated, devoted peace officers of sympathy and intelligence. In many cases they are indispensable, not only in dealing with female and juvenile criminals but certainly in abortion and frequently in narcotics investigations.

In the latter they are being used increasingly as undercover buyers and addicts to help break up rings of suppliers or pushers. In some cities almost 90 percent of all female criminals are dope addicts, and policewomen are needed to search these addicts for evidence before it is disposed of.

Policewomen are also being assigned to various college campuses to help male officers control student riots. Captain Minna Ralph of the Alameda County sheriff's department, remembers, "During the free-speech-movement demonstrations at the University of California in Berkeley, eight of our women deputy sheriffs worked side by side with the male officers getting the 6 to 700 students out of Sproul Hall. The men handled the boys, the women handled the girls."

Inflation Vs. Dreams

CAN YOU AFFORD TO RETIRE?

by John Quirt

Chances are, if you're like a majority of Americans still in their productive years, you're not very concerned about retirement. Maybe you dream a little about taking a world cruise or wintering in the Caribbean. But when it comes to the cost of doing these things you probably figure that, somehow, it will all take care of itself.

But will it? A growing number of families entering their golden years today are finding themselves inadequately prepared. They are discovering there is a wide and disappointing gap between what they have to spend, and what they need to live the contented retirement life they envisioned.

Where do they go wrong? "Mainly," says one noted family finance counselor, "by underestimating inflation. By failing to realize that the dollars they earned and saved yesterday would buy a lot less today, less house, less groceries, less of nearly everything."

Inflation apace

Inflation has been working a hardship on retired people for longer than anyone cares to remember. It has not always been as bad as last year, when the purchasing power of the dollar went down by nearly 5 percent. In fact, if that rate were to continue this year and next, it would mean that a $300 pension income started in January '68 would have a buying power of barely $270 by December of next year; in only ten years, its buying power would be cut in half.

Because retired couples seldom can keep pace with a cheaper dollar by demanding higher wages or raising prices, they inevitably lose out. An inflation rate of roughly 3 percent is forecast for this year. And looking ahead, the chances of less inflation than that are indeed remote. Agitation for higher pay, higher prices, more government spending and a faster rate of increase in the money supply—all point to continued inflationary pressure.

Thus the conclusion seems inescapable: some inflation will continue to plague people living on fixed incomes. And the pertinent question is—how does a family heading into retirement try to cope with it?

The answer, it would seem, is to begin by accepting the unpleasant truth that your pension plan, reinforced by social security and government-paid medical care, may not be enough to meet your financial needs.

"The fact that you have a company or retirement plan," says one Florida counselor specializing in older couples' problems, "doesn't mean you will be able to live a life of ease. You start off by accepting that."

Two examples from this counselor's files help to illustrate the point:

A New Jersey couple moved to Florida last year, bought a small home, invited their grandchildren down for a winter vacation, then quickly discovered that their $275 a month union pension benefits plus $90 a month in social security failed to match up to the monthly bills. The $365 proved barely enough to cover their home payment ($135), taxes and insurance ($50), and food ($115 including occasional meals out), plus gas and routine maintenance ($60) for their car.

Similarly, an Illinois couple retiring to Florida 18 months ago found the gap between their monthly income and what they needed so wide—in excess of $200—that they were forced to give up and return home. "The insurance advertisement we answered 20 years ago promising a happy retirement on $250 a month," they confessed, "didn't explain how little $250 would buy today."

While examples such as these can be found most frequently in Florida, Arizona, Southern California and other retirement havens, they are by no means confined to these areas. Financial counselors throughout the country report a marked increase in the number of couples discovering their retirement schemes do not provide enough money to live on.

Financial counselors throughout the country report a marked increase in the number of couples discovering their retirement schemes do not provide enough money to live on.

Yet no matter what the amount, it is a safe assumption that the money will buy less, probably much less than you had hoped. Beyond recognizing this simple truth, however, what can you do?

Obviously, you can—and should—take the trouble to sit down with pencil and paper and figure as carefully as you can what your total retirement income will amount to. Don't forget to include any paid-up insurance, stocks or bond dividends as well as the monthly income from your pension plan.

Most likely your own holdings of stocks and bonds are modest. Even so, is the money you do have in them working as hard as it possibly could? If the yield or return you are receiving is less than the current rate of inflation, and if there is negligible capital appreciation involved, you may be well advised to consider reinvesting in a more aggressive vehicle, perhaps a growth-oriented mutual fund.

Real estate is another area where you may be able to make changes with an eye toward retirement. If you own even a small amount of property for investment, make sure it is in a good growth area.

You may, in fact, find that it makes sense to reinvest in a small home or condominium in whatever location you have picked for retirement. The property can be rented out until then, and occupied, probably at less cost than you would be up against if you were to buy later.

Get a job

While you're at it, take a serious reading on the possibilities for part-time income after retirement. Many experts will advise you to keep active. But if you're counting heavily on the income as a means of getting along, bear in mind that the percentage of unskilled and semi-skilled elderly jobless in retirement areas runs surprisingly high.

Don't forget to take a close look, too, at your insurance. Many companies are offering attractive variable annuity policies that help offset the ravages of inflation. Or, you may find it more advisable to switch to low-cost term insurance—basic protection—and channel the money saved on premiums into investments.

What you ought to be aiming for is a balanced retirement income—comprised partly of fixed-dollar items such as a pension plan and social security, plus equity or growth vehicles such as real estate, stocks, mutual fund shares or variable annuity insurance.

Next, start making some long-range estimates on expenses. You will need to decide first of all how simply, or elaborately, you intend to live, and where. Small-town living is generally cheaper than city life. And a warm climate can mean savings on heating and clothing bills.

As we said, it is probably safest to assume that the buying power of the dollar will keep declining, and by not much less than around 3 percent a year. That means, of course, that food, services and other basics will cost more when you quit working than they do today.

Rents and home prices (which have been skyrocketing of late) also seem likely to continue their upward push (though at a slower rate), a fact which again argues in favor of investing in and eventually occupying a retirement home or apartment of your own.

The experts also advise against counting very heavily on a drop in your income tax rate. You stand to benefit from a lower rate, of course, since your income will fall off; but in the long run this may be partly, even largely, offset by a continuing rise in sales and other indirect taxes as the cost of financing state and local education and welfare programs goes up.

When you get it all down on paper, chances are you will discover that inflation still forces you to make a few adjustments in your plan for idyllic retirement. But, as one expert puts it, "It's better to plan realistically now, instead of drifting into the sort of inflationary distress many retired couples find themselves in."

Now...no need to soak

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

OFFICERS LEAVE The U.S. Navy is encountering difficulty in retaining many of its best junior officers, especially pilots and the young officers schooled to man our 41 nuclear submarines.

Before Vietnam, the Navy had a pilot retention rate of 62 percent. Since Vietnam, the retention rate has slumped to 36 percent.

In the submarine service, the pre-Vietnamese war retention rate ranged between 75 and 80 percent. It is now down to 68 percent.

In an attempt to encourage officers to make the Navy their career, the service is trying to determine why so many young officers want out and what inducements can prevail upon them to want in.

Faster promotions, better educational opportunities, fewer family separations, higher pay, and fat bonuses for signing up again have all been suggested.

The basic reasons officers do not continue in the Navy are the higher salaries offered by industry, especially to engineers who have been trained in nuclear physics; the growing boredom with two three-month submerged Polaris submarine patrols each year during which the officers and men receive no mail and can do nothing in the event their families grow ill or some relative dies, and, finally, the relative lack of opportunity to earn advanced college degrees because so much time is spent at sea.

PUTTING HER BEST FOOT FORWARD.

PADABOUT In line with the new lingerie trend of one-step dressing, a pantyhose is being introduced for home use that will eliminate the need for slippers or shoes. Made in black, gold or silver with sturdy white soles, these padabouts are hand-washable and can be worn with a tunic for a good-looking lounging costume.

ISRAELI NUCLEAR BOMB Several European intelligence services are convinced that Israel now has or soon will have the ability to produce a nuclear bomb.

In Dimona, near Beersheba in the Negev Desert, the Israelis have built a nuclear reactor with secret French help.

The International Atomic Energy Commission has asked permission many times to inspect the installation, but Israel always says no on the grounds that the reactor is located in "a top-secret military area."

The Russians have apparently obtained some valid information about Israel's nuclear potential and are therefore most anxious for all countries to ratify the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

If Israel produces a nuclear bomb and announces that fact, the Arabs, of course, will immediately demand nuclear weaponry from Russia. The Soviets realize that several Arab governments are unstable and cannot be trusted with atomic bombs. To permit either Israel or Egypt to stockpile nuclear armaments is to invite world holocaust.

Foreign intelligence sources believe that the U.S. agreed to supply Israel with 50 Phantom fighter-bombers only upon the kept promise that Israel would halt its development of a nuclear bomb.

The world is closer to self-destruction than many people realize, and U.S. interests in the Near East are 100 times more vital than they are in Vietnam.

CREDIT CARDS Which is the world's most widely used credit card? The Bank of America claims it's the Bankamericard, with more than 16½ million in circulation.

Bankamericards--accepted at 400,000 merchant outlets--are free to persons of good credit standing.

Outside the U.S. the card is interchangeable with Chargex cards in Canada, Sumitomo cards in Japan, Barclaycards in Great Britain, Ireland, Malta, Gibraltar and South Africa.

During 1969 Bankamericard expects the number of card holders to reach at least 22 million, with sales surpassing the billion-dollar mark.

AUTOMATED SCHOOL

The newest outpost in modern teaching is the Automated Business College, just opened in Los Angeles, where the student can take classes, do homework, take tests and finally graduate without ever seeing a teacher.

Each course consists of a series of tapes. The ABC library contains 420 such tapes, starting with the most basic explanations of the skills involved (typing, stenography, spelling, etc.), and trying to anticipate and answer questions. The student proceeds at his own pace, and somewhere between 20 and 40 weeks later, completes the course.

The director of ABC is Jim Scott, a 25-year-old former high school teacher, who isn't necessarily invisible to his students. He arranges the tapes, corrects the students' taped homework, then grades and counsels. There are presently 15 students attending ABC (it hopes to have 40), and when the school is old enough to have a graduate, Scott will materialize from behind his machines and work with him to get a job.

ABC is the packaged product of Franchise Marketing Service. It is the first of its kind in California and, if it works, the company expects to see 100 franchised ABC's open in the next two years. It has many attractive qualities, including the fact that there are no teachers to pay.

BLACK STUDIES

Glancing at most school texts and curricula of a few years back, a newly arrived visitor would think there weren't any Negroes in the U.S., and never had been. In response to demands from both blacks and whites a change is being made. In schools all around the country teachers are trying to give students a less imbalanced, more accurate picture of U.S. history.

Some school systems have already made widespread reforms. In Seattle, for instance, there are elective black history courses in most high schools, and a section on minority history in junior high social studies courses. Garfield High School, which is 55% Negro, offers black art history, black dance, Swahili, an anthropology course on the origins of the Negro race, as well as Afro-American history.

Colleges have expanded their offerings relating to Afro-American studies. At Illinois State University study of the Negro in U.S. history is required.

Even the South is taking a new look at the past. The school system in Austin, Tex., hopes to give a course in Afro-American history as soon as it can train its teachers, who are unschooled in this area.

The new emphasis is certainly a welcome change, but, caution educators, it's a good idea carefully to think out aims, goals and purposes.

John T. Gibson heads the Lincoln Filene Center for citizenship and public affairs at Tufts University which has just finished a study on how best to teach race in America. The study shows, he says, that having books that include pictures of black students and stories about blacks in the suburbs, is not really zeroing in on the problem. Texts must describe the realities, and give a "balanced presentation of man and society in the United States yesterday and today."

At another extreme are the black students who demand independent African departments with student authority to hire and fire teachers. Their protests, supported by white radical groups, have disturbed several college campuses, as well as the general public.

Dr. Joseph Applegate, director of Howard University's 40-year-old center for African studies, recalls the flurry of Russian studies programs which were frantically set up after Sputnik I hit the skies. Eventually things settled down to a useful and realistic pace, as they will with black studies.

YOUNG WEST GERMAN RECRUITS—A NEW BREED?

CRISIS OF CONSCIENCE

The younger generation in West Germany doesn't regard the army with the same esteem their fathers did. And the military is understandably concerned.

Young West Germans do not care to ally themselves with a tradition linked so closely in many minds to the Nazis and the brutality they represent. German youngsters hardly relish the possibility of one day being ordered to shoot at their fellow countrymen in East Germany. More and more these young people question the validity of any sort of military commitment.

Germans in the East under Communist domination have no choice about joining their army. They have to. But in the West, with its emphasis on individual liberty, they have some choice, and each day more choose not to serve on grounds of conscientious objection.

Since the Bundeswehr (armed forces of West Germany) was founded in 1956, there have been 50,000 conscientious objectors, 40,000 of whom have been released from the army. Last year 12,000 young men claimed exemption from their 18 months of national service.

Not everyone gets a deferment on C.O. grounds, but for those who don't there are other means. There is no court-martial in the West German army, and a commanding officer is obliged by law to respect each soldier's right to conscientious objection.

It is common nowadays for a recruit after three weeks in the army to refuse to cooperate in basic training. He need only express his horror on a slip of paper to obtain some alternate service.

C.O.'s are supposed to perform substitute work in hospitals and other institutions, but to date only 8500 have.

The older generation, most of them World War II veterans, still cherishes the Germanic military traditions. For example, they still buy enough recordings of army songs to place these selections at the top of the hit parade. But today's young Germans see the military in a far different light. They view it with disfavor instead of glamor or patriotism. One major result is that the Bundeswehr now suffers from a shortage of 30,000 noncommissioned officers.

They can imitate our package.

We wrap all of our American Cheese Food Slices individually so they won't stick together. So they'll stay moist and fresh from first slice to last.

But they can't imitate our flavor.

Borden's uses aged Wisconsin cheddar in every slice. So there's got to be more flavor. And there's almost twice as much protein in one slice of Borden's Cheese Food than in a slice of bacon.

The best cheese comes from the nation's #1 milkman—Borden's.

A new kind of Burger

by Beth Merriman
Parade food Editor

The whole family will cheer you for these Sausageburgers. Made of ground beef with the piquant addition of pork sausage, topped with sauteed onions and served with a creamy tomato sauce, they make a delightful change from ordinary burgers.

For added interest, combine egg noodles and green (spinach) noodles, lace with butter, sprinkle with coarsely ground black pepper and serve with the Sausageburgers. Add a salad of raw vegetables and a refreshing applesauce sherbet (below).

SAUSAGEBURGERS

3 medium onions, sliced thin
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 lb. lean beef, ground
¼ lb. pork sausage (bulk)
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
1 cup dairy sour cream

Cook onions in oil until soft and golden brown; remove from pan. Combine ground beef, sausage, bread crumbs and egg; mix well; shape into 8 patties. Brown on both sides in oil remaining in pan. Pour off any excess oil. Place onions on top of meat cakes; pour tomato sauce into pan; cover; simmer 40 minutes. Remove meat cakes and onions to serving dish; keep warm. Add tomato sauce slowly to sour cream, mixing well after each addition. Return to pan; heat to serving temperature. Serve with meat cakes. Makes 4 servings.

APPLESAUCE SHERBET

1 can (1 lb.) applesauce
¾ cup light corn syrup, divided
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
¼ cup orange juice
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Combine applesauce, ½ cup corn syrup, salt, lemon juice, orange peel and juice. Beat remaining corn syrup gradually into stiffly beaten egg whites; fold into applesauce mixture. Pour into freezing tray; freeze until firm. Makes 6 servings.

Oh buoy! Fish Boats.

Fish Boats are in...and men go overboard for them. Tender fillets drenched in flavor. So easy to make. With A.1., the sauce that's 13 seasonings. With ReaLemon, the lemon juice you just pour from the bottle. Then wrapped and baked in strong, tear-resistant Reynolds Wrap. What a way to fish for compliments!

FISH BOATS

¼ lb. butter or margarine
¼ cup A.1. Sauce®
¼ cup ReaLemon Reconstituted Lemon Juice®
2 lbs. frozen or fresh fish fillets (recommended: sole or flounder)
Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap®
paprika

Thaw fish fillets if frozen. Melt butter or margarine. Mix with A.1. Sauce and ReaLemon Lemon Juice. Cut fish into serving-size pieces, place each serving in center of a piece of Reynolds Wrap, cup foil and pour sauce over fish. Loosely seal edges of each "fish boat". Bake in pre-heated oven at 350° for about 20 minutes.

Unwrap "fish boats" (don't lose any of the sauce!), sprinkle with paprika and serve in foil. Makes 4 to 6 individual "fish boats".

The fly in the saucer

by PHILIP J. KASS
Authority on UFO's

This Unidentified Flying Object (UFO) was photographed over California.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

The idea that the earth has played host to hundreds or thousands of spaceships from other worlds for 21 years or longer is an adult fantasy that has gotten out of hand. It is a fantasy that has also been nurtured by charlatans who have exploited the public's curiosity for their own enrichment or for personal publicity.

Some UFO sightings, of course, have been the result of unusual but nevertheless explainable circumstances. A few sightings, reported by responsible observers, have never been explained. But the "least likely explanation" for unusual lights and whirring objects in the sky, according to the National Academy of Sciences, "is the hypothesis of extraterrestrial visitations by intelligent beings."

Yet a space mythology has grown up about mysterious visitors from outer space. When I first became interested in UFO's, it seemed an innocent enough fantasy—as harmless as reading science fiction. But as I have watched the mushrooming of a flying saucer cult, my ideas have changed.

Charlatans have discovered a gold mine in exploiting the hopes and fears of the believers. Writers have rung up fat royalties by pandering to the widespread public interest in the subject. Until I personally investigated a number of well known cases, I didn't believe any author would dare to write an article or book filled with inaccuracies and falsehoods which add to the illusion that UFO's must be alien spaceships.

Credulous readers

The credulous feed on paperback books with such title as The Flying Saucer Menace: The Untold Story of the UFO Threat, Flying Saucers Are Hostile, and The Startling Evidence of the Invasion From Outer Space. And pulp magazines carry articles with bold headlines reading, "Are we sitting ducks waiting for the saucer people to take over?" or "Will the earth become the slave colony of another planet?"

My research has also brought me into contact with the "UFO prophets" who, more appropriately, should be called the "UFO profits."

Woodrow Derenberger, onetime preacher and vacuum-cleaner salesman from near Parkersburg, W. Va., claims that extraterrestrial visitors drop by his home for dinner, or a cup of coffee. Sometimes they bring their wives. Derenberger asserts he has twice flown to "their" native planet which he says is three-and-a-half light years away. (This would be approximately 20,000 billion miles.) When I asked him how long his fantastic trip had taken, he replied: "About an hour and a half."

My first encounter with a "UFO prophet" occurred in the fall of 1966. I appeared on a local radio program opposite Dan Fry, whose privately published book contended he had flown in a flying saucer from New Mexico to New York and back. The book also said that flying saucers subsequently had landed three times at his ranch in Oregon.

Fry lectures under the title of "Dr." because of an honorary Ph.D. which he says was bestowed upon him by "St. Andrews College of London." When I checked with the Library of Congress, they could find no college by that name listed in any of their directories. And when I tried to place a telephone call to the institution, the chief information operator in London said she could not find a telephone listed under that name.

Fry, according to his book, is "recognized by many as the best informed scientist in the world on the subject of space and space travel." But when I checked with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, I couldn't find anyone there who had heard of him. His former employer told me that he was neither a graduate scientist nor an engineer. He had been a toolmaker, "and a darned good one."

Most of the "UFO prophets" hit the lecture circuit, and Fry is no exception. While he was lecturing in Florida, a well-to-do retired couple became so enthralled with his story that they decided to sell all of their property to provide Fry with funds to build an interplanetary radio station in Oregon. This was supposed to bring the wisdom of the "space people" to millions on earth.

The cult of space travel was started by George Adamski, a hamburger chef who wrote a book on space travel in 1949, and listed it as fiction. It did not sell. A year later, his adventures were professionally rewritten and republished, this time with the claim that they were true, and Adamski was on his way to a measure of fame and fortune. Like many others in his trade, he liked to call himself "Professor."

On occasion, the UFO hoaxes have led to real tragedy. In 1947, a Chicago publisher concocted a yarn with two men in Tacoma, Wash., who agreed to pose as "harbor patrolmen." They reported that six spacecraft had hovered over their patrol boat, and that one of the craft had disintegrated over an island. They claimed to have pieces of the wreckage. The Air Force sent a team of investigators to interview the "witnesses." On the way back to their base in California, two of the investigators were killed when their plane crashed.

As with most hoaxes, the news of the unmasking seldom gets as much publicity as the initial claim. There are, however, some stories of contact with space people that are so patently absurd that those who wish to believe them perhaps should be allowed the privilege. One favorite is the adventure of Antonio Villas-Boas, a Brazilian farmer. He claimed to have been captured by little men from an egg-shaped spaceship, taken aboard, and stripped for medical examination. During an ordeal that lasted four hours, he said, he was seduced twice by a spacegirl.

Those photos

A number of other UFO hoaxes have been perpetrated by photographers of varying degrees of skill. Researchers for the University of Colorado, working under an Air Force contract to investigate UFO reports spent a considerable amount of time and money exposing how these photos were faked. They range from hand-thrown models to double exposures to pictures of camera lens caps, carefully suspended from wires. The expert analysis of these photos did not come, however, until after the pictures had been sold to gullible editors.

After 21 years of UFO reports, without a single piece of substantial evidence to support the extraterrestrial theory, public interest periodically sags. This has prompted some of the UFO cultists to devise still wilder and more paranoid stories. For example, there are the alleged "Men in Black" who supposedly try to intimidate UFO witnesses into silence.

The first reports suggested that the Men in Black were Air Force officers. The USAF has long been the victim of the false charge that it is trying to "suppress the truth about UFO's." Others suggested that the Men in Black were agents of the Central Intelligence Agency.

More recent accounts contend that the Men in Black have warned persons: "Say nothing about what you saw for the good of your family, your country and your planet!" The idea that the Men in Black are really extraterrestrial visitors, themselves, disguised to look like "earthlings "became popular soon after a major television show was launched two years ago, based on a similar science-fiction theme.

I have interviewed many persons who have made UFO sighting reports, a few of whom have taken seemingly credible UFO pictures. Not a single one of these persons had ever encountered any attempt to silence them—by Men in Black, or any government agency.

How certain am I that "legitimate UFO's," which cannot be explained away as a hoax or misidentification, aren't really spaceships from another world? We used to say in my home state of Iowa: "Talk is cheap; put your money where your mouth is." I am prepared to risk my lifetime's savings to express my conviction on UFO's.

I have a standing offer to pay $10,000 to anyone who can produce the first incontrovertible evidence that even one UFO is an extraterrestrial spaceship. For example, I would pay off if a single crashed spacecraft, or major piece of one, were found whose construction showed it to be of extraterrestrial design in the opinion of the National Academy of Sciences. Any other evidence sufficient to convince the academy would make the believer $10,000 richer. All he has to do is agree to express his conviction by paying me $250 per year for each year until such evidence becomes available—but for no more than 20 years. This limits his maximum risk to $5000.

I have made this offer to authors who have earned large sums writing UFO books, and to officials of UFO organizations who say the evidence for alien visitors is overwhelming. I have made the offer on national radio and TV, but have yet to find a single "believer" who is willing to put his money where his mouth is.

AUTOMATED SCHOOL

The newest outpost in modern teaching is the Automated Business College, just opened in Los Angeles, where the student can take classes, do homework, take tests and finally graduate without ever seeing a teacher.

Each course consists of a series of tapes. The ABC library contains 420 such tapes, starting with the most basic explanations of the skills involved (typing, stenography, spelling, etc.), and trying to anticipate and answer questions. The student proceeds at his own pace, and somewhere between 20 and 40 weeks later, completes the course.

The director of ABC is Jim Scott, a 25-year-old former high school teacher, who isn't necessarily invisible to his students. He arranges the tapes, corrects the students' taped homework, then grades and counsels. There are presently 15 students attending ABC (it hopes to have 40), and when the school is old enough to have a graduate, Scott will materialize from behind his machines and work with him to get a job.

ABC is the packaged product of Franchise Marketing Service. It is the first of its kind in California and, if it works, the company expects to see 100 franchised ABC's open in the next two years. It has many attractive qualities, including the fact that there are no teachers to pay.

BLACK STUDIES

Glancing at most school texts and curricula of a few years back, a newly arrived visitor would think there weren't any Negroes in the U.S., and never had been. In response to demands from both blacks and whites a change is being made. In schools all around the country teachers are trying to give students a less imbalanced, more accurate picture of U.S. history.

Some school systems have already made widespread reforms. In Seattle, for instance, there are elective black history courses in most high schools, and a section on minority history in junior high social studies courses. Garfield High School, which is 55% Negro, offers black art history, black dance, Swahili, an anthropology course on the origins of the Negro race, as well as Afro-American history.

Colleges have expanded their offerings relating to Afro-American studies. At Illinois State University study of the Negro in U.S. history is required.

Even the South is taking a new look at the past. The school system in Austin, Tex., hopes to give a course in Afro-American history as soon as it can train its teachers, who are unschooled in this area.

The new emphasis is certainly a welcome change, but, caution educators, it's a good idea carefully to think out aims, goals and purposes.

John T. Gibson heads the Lincoln Filene Center for citizenship and public affairs at Tufts University which has just finished a study on how best to teach race in America. The study shows, he says, that having books that include pictures of black students and stories about blacks in the suburbs, is not really zeroing in on the problem. Texts must describe the realities, and give a "balanced presentation of man and society in the United States yesterday and today."

At another extreme are the black students who demand independent African departments with student authority to hire and fire teachers. Their protests, supported by white radical groups, have disturbed several college campuses, as well as the general public.

Dr. Joseph Applegate, director of Howard University's 40-year-old center for African studies, recalls the flurry of Russian studies programs which were frantically set up after Sputnik I hit the skies. Eventually things settled down to a useful and realistic pace, as they will with black studies.

YOUNG WEST GERMAN RECRUITS—A NEW BREED?

CRISIS OF CONSCIENCE

The younger generation in West Germany doesn't regard the army with the same esteem their fathers did. And the military is understandably concerned.

Young West Germans do not care to ally themselves with a tradition linked so closely in many minds to the Nazis and the brutality they represent. German youngsters hardly relish the possibility of one day being ordered to shoot at their fellow countrymen in East Germany. More and more these young people question the validity of any sort of military commitment.

Germans in the East under Communist domination have no choice about joining their army. They have to. But in the West, with its emphasis on individual liberty, they have some choice, and each day more choose not to serve on grounds of conscientious objection.

Since the Bundeswehr (armed forces of West Germany) was founded in 1956, there have been 50,000 conscientious objectors, 40,000 of whom have been released from the army. Last year 12,000 young men claimed exemption from their 18 months of national service.

Not everyone gets a deferment on C.O. grounds, but for those who don't there are other means. There is no court-martial in the West German army, and a commanding officer is obliged by law to respect each soldier's right to conscientious objection.

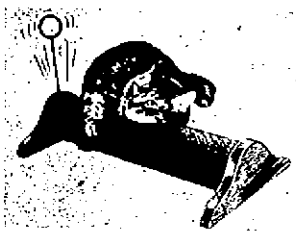

It is common nowadays for a recruit after three weeks in the army to refuse to cooperate in basic training. He need only express his horror on a slip of paper to obtain some alternate service.

C.O.'s are supposed to perform substitute work in hospitals and other institutions, but to date only 8500 have.

The older generation, most of them World War II veterans, still cherishes the Germanic military traditions. For example, they still buy enough recordings of army songs to place these selections at the top of the hit parade. But today's young Germans see the military in a far different light. They view it with disfavor instead of glamor or patriotism. One major result is that the Bundeswehr now suffers from a shortage of 30,000 noncommissioned officers.

A new kind of Burger

by Beth Merriman
Parade food Editor

The whole family will cheer you for these Sausageburgers. Made of ground beef with the piquant addition of pork sausage, topped with sauteed onions and served with a creamy tomato sauce, they make a delightful change from ordinary burgers.

For added interest, combine egg noodles and green (spinach) noodles, lace with butter, sprinkle with coarsely ground black pepper and serve with the Sausageburgers. Add a salad of raw vegetables and a refreshing applesauce sherbet (below).

SAUSAGEBURGERS

3 medium onions, sliced thin
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 lb. lean beef, ground
¼ lb. pork sausage (bulk)
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 egg
1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
1 cup dairy sour cream

Cook onions in oil until soft and golden brown; remove from pan. Combine ground beef, sausage, bread crumbs and egg; mix well; shape into 8 patties. Brown on both sides in oil remaining in pan. Pour off any excess oil. Place onions on top of meat cakes; pour tomato sauce into pan; cover; simmer 40 minutes. Remove meat cakes and onions to serving dish; keep warm. Add tomato sauce slowly to sour cream, mixing well after each addition. Return to pan; heat to serving temperature. Serve with meat cakes. Makes 4 servings.

APPLESAUCE SHERBET

1 can (1 lb.) applesauce
¾ cup light corn syrup, divided
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
¼ cup orange juice
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Combine applesauce, ½ cup corn syrup, salt, lemon juice, orange peel and juice. Beat remaining corn syrup gradually into stiffly beaten egg whites; fold into applesauce mixture. Pour into freezing tray; freeze until firm. Makes 6 servings.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by Rodney Dangerfield

EDITOR'S NOTE: Comic Rodney Dangerfield should be the darling of nightclub owners. Until a few years ago he was a businessman himself. Born on Long Island, N.Y., Dangerfield determinedly committed himself to a career in comedy at the age of 19. At 28 he still hadn't advanced beyond second-rate bookings, so gave it up and went into business. He was reasonably successful, but not fulfilled. Jokes and visions of laughing audiences kept running through his head.

Dangerfield plunged back into show business at 40. He had to go back to small clubs at first, but two years ago made his network TV debut on the Ed Sullivan Show. He's done the talk shows, too, for Joey Bishop, Joan Rivers, Dick Cavett, Steve Allen and Merv Griffin. Two of Dangerfield's most recent projects have been a comedy album for Decca and a solid role in the new movie, The Projectionist. Dangerfield and his wife are the parents of two children. The jokes that follow are his rueful comments on one man's life and hard times.

I don't get no respect at all. The other day a doorman asked me to get him a cab. I called up for the right time and the record hung up on me. When I was a kid and I played hide and seek they wouldn't even look for me.

Even my friends give me no respect. One of them told me when I call on the phone I should use a certain signal. He tells me, "Let it ring twice, hang up, and don't call back."

And my kids. This afternoon my kid tells me to go to my room. The other night he was having dinner. I said, "Finish all your meat and you'll grow up and be just like Daddy." Since then he only eats vegetables.

And what a tough neighborhood I live in. Yesterday on my block they just put up a new sign: "Drive fast. The life you save may be your own." In my neighborhood, no one ever asks you what time it is. They just take your watch. When you make up your budget, you've got to put a certain amount aside for holdup money.

Boy, did I hear a bad singer the other night. She was so bad, the boss told her to stop singing while the waiters were serving. The audience kept yelling "up in front."

And my wife. As soon as I got married I knew I was in trouble. My in-laws sent me a thank-you note.

The other night I had a fight with my dog. My wife said the dog was right.

This afternoon my wife told me she gave me the best years of her life. What worries me now is, what's coming up?

My split personality is getting worse. Yesterday I ate in a restaurant alone and called for separate checks.

I just changed my doctor. I have no confidence in a surgeon who whistles while he works.

CLEANSING MILK

Oh buoy! Fish Boats.

Fish Boats are in... and men go overboard for them. Tender fillets drenched in flavor. So easy to make. With A.1., the sauce that's 13 seasonings. With ReaLemon, the lemon juice you just pour from the bottle. Then wrapped and baked in strong, tear-resistant Reynolds Wrap. What a way to fish for compliments!

FISH BOATS

¼ lb. butter or margarine
¼ cup A.1. Sauce®
¼ cup ReaLemon Reconstituted Lemon Juic
2 lbs. frozen or fresh fish fillets (recommended: sole or flounder)
Heavy Duty Reynolds Wrap®
paprika

Thaw fish fillets if frozen. Melt butter or margarine. Mix with A.1. Sauce and ReaLemon Lemon Juice. Cut fish into serving-size pieces, place each serving in center of a piece of Reynolds Wrap, cup foil and pour sauce over fish. Loosely seal edges of each "fish boat". Bake in pre-heated oven at 350° for about 20 minutes.

Unwrap "fish boats" (don't lose any of the sauce!), sprinkle with paprika and serve in foil. Makes 4 to 6 individual "fish boats".

The KROKODIL that bites Russians

by Nino Lo Bello

MOSCOW.

When Moscow became overrun with mice, Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin, using the "Hot Line" to Washington, asked President Nixon to send the best mouse-killer he had. Mr. Nixon obliged and sent a large white mouse.

Once in Moscow, the large white mouse scurried straight into the river But close behind were the millions of Moscow's rodents which followed it into the river to drown. Kosygin picked up the phone again and said:

"Mr. Nixon, that was a wonderful large white mouse. Now send us a large white Chinese."

That anecdote, reflecting the present political climate in the Soviet Union, was on the lips of almost every Russian citizen a few days after it appeared in Moscow's satirical journal, Krokodil.

A 16-page, three-times-a-month magazine, Krokodil is really a serious publication which uses humor to bring on reforms and correct abuses within the Soviet Union.

An integral part of Soviet life since 1922, Krokodil takes up the cudgels against such inbred Red phenomena as bureaucratic inertia, lack of initiative, shortages, special privileges, mismanagement and graft. The Soviet chiefs apparently welcome Krokodil because it points up faults they themselves often want remedied. There are certain subjects, however, that are taboo: criticism of top Soviet personalities, high consumer prices, Marxist-Leninist theory and foreign policy.

Chinese villains

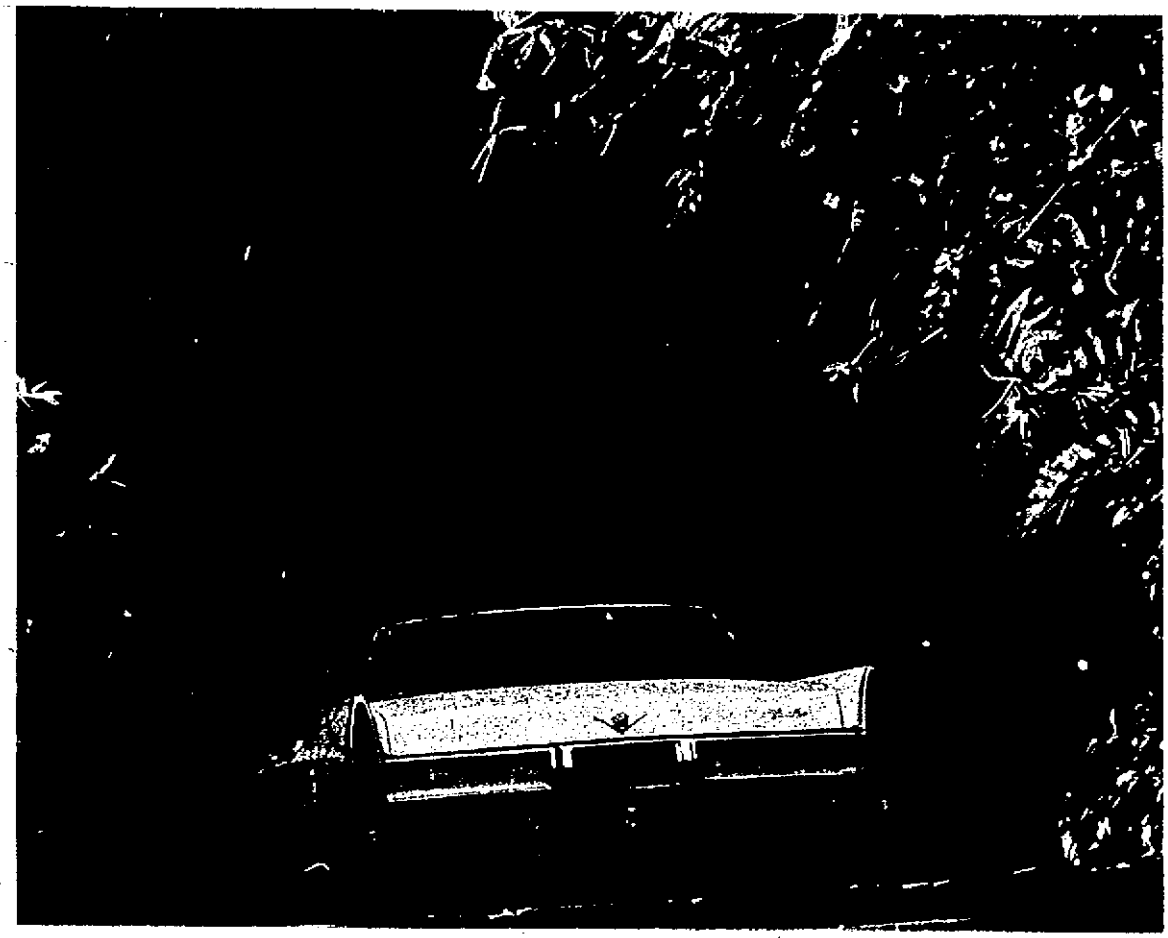

International events are indeed treated by Krokodil, but only insofar as they mirror the Moscow line. Red China, ergo, is a current villain. Kremlin officials are deathly afraid of the regime of Mao Tse-tung with whom their country shares 6500 miles of common border.

More than anything, Krokodil's editors are terrified, as are Russia's 230 million citizens, of China's 760 million population. Some of the recent humor has touched on this subject. As, for instance:

"Have you heard the news? The Chinese have put a sputnik into orbit," says the first man. The second man shakes his head in perplexity. So the first man explains: "You know how they did it? A hundred million Chinese held the catapult, and 50 million pulled back the elastic."

Another Krokodil anecdote tells of the first month of war between the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China. During the first week the Soviet army captures a million Chinese soldiers. The second week Russian troops take 5 million prisoners, the third week more than 20 million. At the end of the fourth week, when the Soviet military has rounded up another 30 million, Mao sends Kosygin a wire: "Had enough? Now surrender!"

Krokodil's 2 million newsstand circulation belies the actual number of its readers. For each copy, which costs 13 cents, has its own private circulation—

Protect its built-in quality...

The fly in the saucer

by PHILIP J. KASS
Authority on UFO's

This Unidentified Flying Object (UFO) was photographed over California.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

The idea that the earth has played host to hundreds or thousands of spaceships from other worlds for 21 years or longer is an adult fantasy that has gotten out of hand. It is a fantasy that has also been nurtured by charlatans who have exploited the public's curiosity for their own enrichment or for personal publicity.

Some UFO sightings, of course, have been the result of unusual but nevertheless explainable circumstances. A few sightings, reported by responsible observers, have never been explained. But the "least likely explanation" for unusual lights and whirring objects in the sky, according to the National Academy of Sciences, "is the hypothesis of extraterrestrial visitations by intelligent beings."

Yet a space mythology has grown up about mysterious visitors from outer space. When I first became interested in UFO's, it seemed an innocent enough fantasy—as harmless as reading science fiction. But as I have watched the mushrooming of a flying saucer cult, my ideas have changed.

Charlatans have discovered a gold mine in exploiting the hopes and fears of the believers. Writers have rung up fat royalties by pandering to the widespread public interest in the subject. Until I personally investigated a number of well known cases, I didn't believe any author would dare to write an article or book filled with inaccuracies and falsehoods which add to the illusion that UFO's must be alien spaceships.

Credulous readers

The credulous feed on paperback books with such title as The Flying Saucer Menace: The Untold Story of the UFO Threat, Flying Saucers Are Hostile, and The Startling Evidence of the Invasion From Outer Space. And pulp magazines carry articles with bold headlines reading, "Are we sitting ducks waiting for the saucer people to take over?" or "Will the earth become the slave colony of another planet?"

My research has also brought me into contact with the "UFO prophets" who, more appropriately, should be called the "UFO profits."

Woodrow Derenberger, onetime preacher and vacuum-cleaner salesman from near Parkersburg, W. Va., claims that extraterrestrial visitors drop by his home for dinner, or a cup of coffee. Sometimes they bring their wives. Derenberger asserts he has twice flown to "their" native planet which he says is three-and-a-half light years away. (This would be approximately 20,000 billion miles.) When I asked him how long his fantastic trip had taken, he replied: "About an hour and a half."

My first encounter with a "UFO prophet" occurred in the fall of 1966. I appeared on a local radio program opposite Dan Fry, whose privately published book contended he had flown in a flying saucer from New Mexico to New York and back. The book also said that flying saucers subsequently had landed three times at his ranch in Oregon.

Fry lectures under the title of "Dr." because of an honorary Ph.D. which he says was bestowed upon him by "St. Andrews College of London." When I checked with the Library of Congress, they could find no college by that name listed in any of their directories. And when I tried to place a telephone call to the institution, the chief information operator in London said she could not find a telephone listed under that name.

Fry, according to his book, is "recognized by many as the best informed scientist in the world on the subject of space and space travel." But when I checked with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, I couldn't find anyone there who had heard of him. His former employer told me that he was neither a graduate scientist nor an engineer. He had been a toolmaker, "and a darned good one."

Most of the "UFO prophets" hit the lecture circuit, and Fry is no exception. While he was lecturing in Florida, a well-to-do retired couple became so enthralled with his story that they decided to sell all of their property to provide Fry with funds to build an interplanetary radio station in Oregon. This was supposed to bring the wisdom of the "space people" to millions on earth.

The cult of space travel was started by George Adamski, a hamburger chef who wrote a book on space travel in 1949, and listed it as fiction. It did not sell. A year later, his adventures were professionally rewritten and republished, this time with the claim that they were true, and Adamski was on his way to a measure of fame and fortune. Like many others in his trade, he liked to call himself "Professor."

On occasion, the UFO hoaxes have led to real tragedy. In 1947, a Chicago publisher concocted a yarn with two men in Tacoma, Wash., who agreed to pose as "harbor patrolmen." They reported that six spacecraft had hovered over their patrol boat, and that one of the craft had disintegrated over an island. They claimed to have pieces of the wreckage. The Air Force sent a team of investigators to interview the "witnesses." On the way back to their base in California, two of the investigators were killed when their plane crashed.

As with most hoaxes, the news of the unmasking seldom gets as much publicity as the initial claim. There are, however, some stories of contact with space people that are so patently absurd that those who wish to believe them perhaps should be allowed the privilege. One favorite is the adventure of Antonio Villas-Boas, a Brazilian farmer. He claimed to have been captured by little men from an egg-shaped spaceship, taken aboard, and stripped for medical examination. During an ordeal that lasted four hours, he said, he was seduced twice by a spacegirl.

Those photos

A number of other UFO hoaxes have been perpetrated by photographers of varying degrees of skill. Researchers for the University of Colorado, working under an Air Force contract to investigate UFO reports spent a considerable amount of time and money exposing how these photos were faked. They range from hand-thrown models to double exposures to pictures of camera lens caps, carefully suspended from wires. The expert analysis of these photos did not come, however, until after the pictures had been sold to gullible editors.

After 21 years of UFO reports, without a single piece of substantial evidence to support the extraterrestrial theory, public interest periodically sags. This has prompted some of the UFO cultists to devise still wilder and more paranoid stories. For example, there are the alleged "Men in Black" who supposedly try to intimidate UFO witnesses into silence.

The first reports suggested that the Men in Black were Air Force officers. The USAF has long been the victim of the false charge that it is trying to "suppress the truth about UFO's." Others suggested that the Men in Black were agents of the Central Intelligence Agency.

More recent accounts contend that the Men in Black have warned persons: "Say nothing about what you saw for the good of your family, your country and your planet!" The idea that the Men in Black are really extraterrestrial visitors, themselves, disguised to look like "earthlings "became popular soon after a major television show was launched two years ago, based on a similar science-fiction theme.

I have interviewed many persons who have made UFO sighting reports, a few of whom have taken seemingly credible UFO pictures. Not a single one of these persons had ever encountered any attempt to silence them—by Men in Black, or any government agency.

How certain am I that "legitimate UFO's," which cannot be explained away as a hoax or misidentification, aren't really spaceships from another world? We used to say in my home state of Iowa: "Talk is cheap; put your money where your mouth is." I am prepared to risk my lifetime's savings to express my conviction on UFO's.

I have a standing offer to pay $10,000 to anyone who can produce the first incontrovertible evidence that even one UFO is an extraterrestrial spaceship. For example, I would pay off if a single crashed spacecraft, or major piece of one, were found whose construction showed it to be of extraterrestrial design in the opinion of the National Academy of Sciences. Any other evidence sufficient to convince the academy would make the believer $10,000 richer. All he has to do is agree to express his conviction by paying me $250 per year for each year until such evidence becomes available—but for no more than 20 years. This limits his maximum risk to $5000.

I have made this offer to authors who have earned large sums writing UFO books, and to officials of UFO organizations who say the evidence for alien visitors is overwhelming. I have made the offer on national radio and TV, but have yet to find a single "believer" who is willing to put his money where his mouth is.

Krokodil cartoon imagines Marx and Lenin reaction to views of Mao Tse-tung.

and old numbers, going back even several years, are seen all the time in people's hands on trains, at bus stops, inside cafes and in libraries.

About 400 letters, most of them complaints on some aspect of Soviet society, reach Krokodil every day. These provide not only grist and ideas for the editor, Manuil G. Semyovnov, but are also carefully read by the Kremlin bigwigs inasmuch as it gives them their only chance to take the daily pulse of the national mood. Because no letter writer has ever been intimidated, so far as is known, Soviet citizens have a certain trust in Krokodil.

Stupidity has been one of Krokodil's favorite targets. Witness this sample:

"Comrades, stupidity is everywhere. It builds, it shouts, it thunders. A dam is built, and when it is finished, it has to be built all over again because some fool has set the foundations in clay. Be on your guard, Comrades. Stupidity is always on the side of the enemy. . . ."

Never letting up on some of the general long-standing abuses, Krokodil hacks away every week at graft. One of the best cartoons on this subject, which has been reprinted several times, shows a government agency door marked "Receiving." The doorknob is in the form of an outstretched palm.

Poorly constructed housing is another target. "All buildings in Moscow," commented Krokodil wryly, "are built to the music of Paul Dukas with the sorcerer's apprentice in charge."

"After it rains, you can sail a boat in these apartments," one Muscovite complained. Krokodil followed up with a cartoon that showed an apartment dweller who had set his mousetrap and caught a fish.

More often than not, a Krokodil barb brings sudden magic action and quick results. It's the major gratification of the poorly paid and small editorial staff — about 25 in all. Each man specializes in one of four categories: economics, culture, foreign affairs and letters-to-the-editor. The cartoonists, some 60, are nearly all freelancers. They work closely with the editor, as do the reporters and far-flung correspondents who meticulously check and re-check everything. No errors are allowed. No matter how long it takes the facts must be verified.

Phantom phones

Such was the necessity in the case of the "phantom telephones." It took Krokodil better than three months of research, but in the end they had the solid facts. A reader had written in griping that too many people wait on line to use a public phone while the bigshots have more phones than they need. Krokodil published a two-panel cartoon.

Panel A showed a jumble of people waiting for a woman to finish a phone call. It was captioned, "One for all . . ." Panel B pictured a bureaucrat reading a paper and on his desk were eight phones (several with cobwebs). It was captioned, ". . . and all for one!" Now there are more public phones in use.

Uncle Sam, of course, has not been forgotten; over the years he has been another favorite whipping boy. Shedding copious Krokodil tears for the plight of the American Negro is one way. Here's a recent cartoon:

"My son wants to be a judge," says a Southerner to his neighbor, "so he's keeping up with his law studies. He's already taken part in four Ku Klux Klan meetings."

Two extra-special targets are gum-chewing and unruly American teenagers. Sometimes the two are combined into one pure-venom potshot, such as the anecdote of the gum-chewing mother informing her gum-chewing son that she plans to give him a watch for Christmas. "Better give me a gun, mom, chaw-chaw," says Junior, his jaw working overtime. "Then I can, chaw-chaw-chaw, get the watch for myself."

As editor Semyovnov likes to put it: "If one picture is worth a thousand words, then one Krokodil cartoon should be worth a thousand pictures."

Little Copycats

BY VIRGINIA POPE

Parade's Fashion Editor

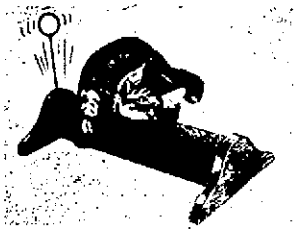

Just a short time ago fashionable ladies were desperately trying to dress like little girls. Well, now the tables have turned. Today, it's the sub- and early teens who are the copycats—their model is sophisticated mother. If mom can wear city pants so can her darling 7- to 14-year-old daughters. Joseph Love, the Yves Saint Laurent of the younger set, has one dashing two-piece pants suit that is irresistible to schoolgirls. It comes in faded French blue with the popular sailor collar overblouse. Remember the pretty baby doll dress with its pink satin sash that little girls used to wear at parties? Well, today's little ladies have dumped that image for swingy party pants. The very newest come in prints, but there are a variety of others in brightly colored jumpsuits and even very dressy ones in silky bell bottoms with white-lace tunic tops. The one-piece shorts dress, too, has been swiped by the younger generation. Most of these have sailor collars. In case you're beginning to wonder whether girls are ever going to wear dresses anymore, they are, and attractive ones at that. Dress costumes featuring short jackets and very full skirts held tight at the waist by a belt are new for children, so are the peasant-embroidered waistcoats with a very full dirndl skirt. Other copycat fashions are the blouson, cuffed long sleeves, shirtwaist dresses and long coat and dress combinations.

Costume dress (l) in French blue, red belt, printed voile skirt, $14, alongside a peasant bolero outfit in pale blue rayon with frilled neckline. Sells for about $12. Both from Cinderella.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by Rodney Dangerfield

EDITOR'S NOTE: Comic Rodney Dangerfield should be the darling of nightclub owners. Until a few years ago he was a businessman himself. Born on Long Island, N.Y., Dangerfield determinedly committed himself to a career in comedy at the age of 19. At 28 he still hadn't advanced beyond second-rate bookings, so gave it up and went into business. He was reasonably successful, but not fulfilled. Jokes and visions of laughing audiences kept running through his head.

Dangerfield plunged back into show business at 40. He had to go back to small clubs at first, but two years ago made his network TV debut on the Ed Sullivan Show. He's done the talk shows, too, for Joey Bishop, Joan Rivers, Dick Cavett, Steve Allen and Merv Griffin. Two of Dangerfield's most recent projects have been a comedy album for Decca and a solid role in the new movie, The Projectionist. Dangerfield and his wife are the parents of two children. The jokes that follow are his rueful comments on one man's life and hard times.

I don't get no respect at all. The other day a doorman asked me to get him a cab. I called up for the right time and the record hung up on me. When I was a kid and I played hide and seek they wouldn't even look for me.

Even my friends give me no respect. One of them told me when I call on the phone I should use a certain signal. He tells me, "Let it ring twice, hang up, and don't call back."

And my kids. This afternoon my kid tells me to go to my room. The other night he was having dinner. I said, "Finish all your meat and you'll grow up and be just like Daddy." Since then he only eats vegetables.

And what a tough neighborhood I live in. Yesterday on my block they just put up a new sign: "Drive fast. The life you save may be your own." In my neighborhood, no one ever asks you what time it is. They just take your watch. When you make up your budget, you've got to put a certain amount aside for holdup money.

Boy, did I hear a bad singer the other night. She was so bad, the boss told her to stop singing while the waiters were serving. The audience kept yelling "up in front."

And my wife. As soon as I got married I knew I was in trouble. My in-laws sent me a thank-you note.

The other night I had a fight with my dog. My wife said the dog was right.

This afternoon my wife told me she gave me the best years of her life. What worries me now is, what's coming up?

My split personality is getting worse. Yesterday I ate in a restaurant alone and called for separate checks.

I just changed my doctor. I have no confidence in a surgeon who whistles while he works.

Americans 'come back to Erin'—and stay

by Jack McCarthy

Tomorrow is St. Patrick's Day. Not all Irish-Americans, however, will do their celebrating in the United States. A good many will greet the great occasion on the Old Sod itself—and not as tourists, but as full-time, year-round residents.

For in recent years Ireland, which once sent waves of immigrants across the sea, has been getting some of them back, as more and more Americans of Irish descent find Ireland an ideal land to settle in—beautiful, hospitable, and a place where you can live on as little as $7 a day. Small wonder that that old Irish song, "Come Back to Erin, Mavourneen," is taking on new meaning.

Last year, Ireland had about 175,000 American visitors. About 6000 U.S. citizens have settled there permanently. The U.S. Embassy in Dublin says it mails out 4700 social security and federal pension checks each month to Americans now resident in Ireland. Among those who have either permanently settled or maintain homes there are film director John Huston, model Valerie Harte, and folk singer Burl Ives

Plenty of less prominent Irish Americans are permanently enjoying the good life in the Emerald Isle. Usually they are returned natives, born in the area where they now reside.

The manager of the Moira Hotel in Dublin, John McGeady, used to be captain of waiters at the Stork Club in New York. "When the Stork closed," he explains, "I came back to see my folks for a week or so. After a couple of leisurely strolls in Dublin, I cashed in my return ticket. No regrets."

The KROKODIL that bites Russians

by Nino Lo Bello

MOSCOW.

When Moscow became overrun with mice, Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin, using the "Hot Line" to Washington, asked President Nixon to send the best mouse-killer he had. Mr. Nixon obliged and sent a large white mouse.

Once in Moscow, the large white mouse scurried straight into the river But close behind were the millions of Moscow's rodents which followed it into the river to drown. Kosygin picked up the phone again and said:

"Mr. Nixon, that was a wonderful large white mouse. Now send us a large white Chinese."

That anecdote, reflecting the present political climate in the Soviet Union, was on the lips of almost every Russian citizen a few days after it appeared in Moscow's satirical journal, Krokodil.

A 16-page, three-times-a-month magazine, Krokodil is really a serious publication which uses humor to bring on reforms and correct abuses within the Soviet Union.

An integral part of Soviet life since 1922, Krokodil takes up the cudgels against such inbred Red phenomena as bureaucratic inertia, lack of initiative, shortages, special privileges, mismanagement and graft. The Soviet chiefs apparently welcome Krokodil because it points up faults they themselves often want remedied. There are certain subjects, however, that are taboo: criticism of top Soviet personalities, high consumer prices, Marxist-Leninist theory and foreign policy.

Chinese villains

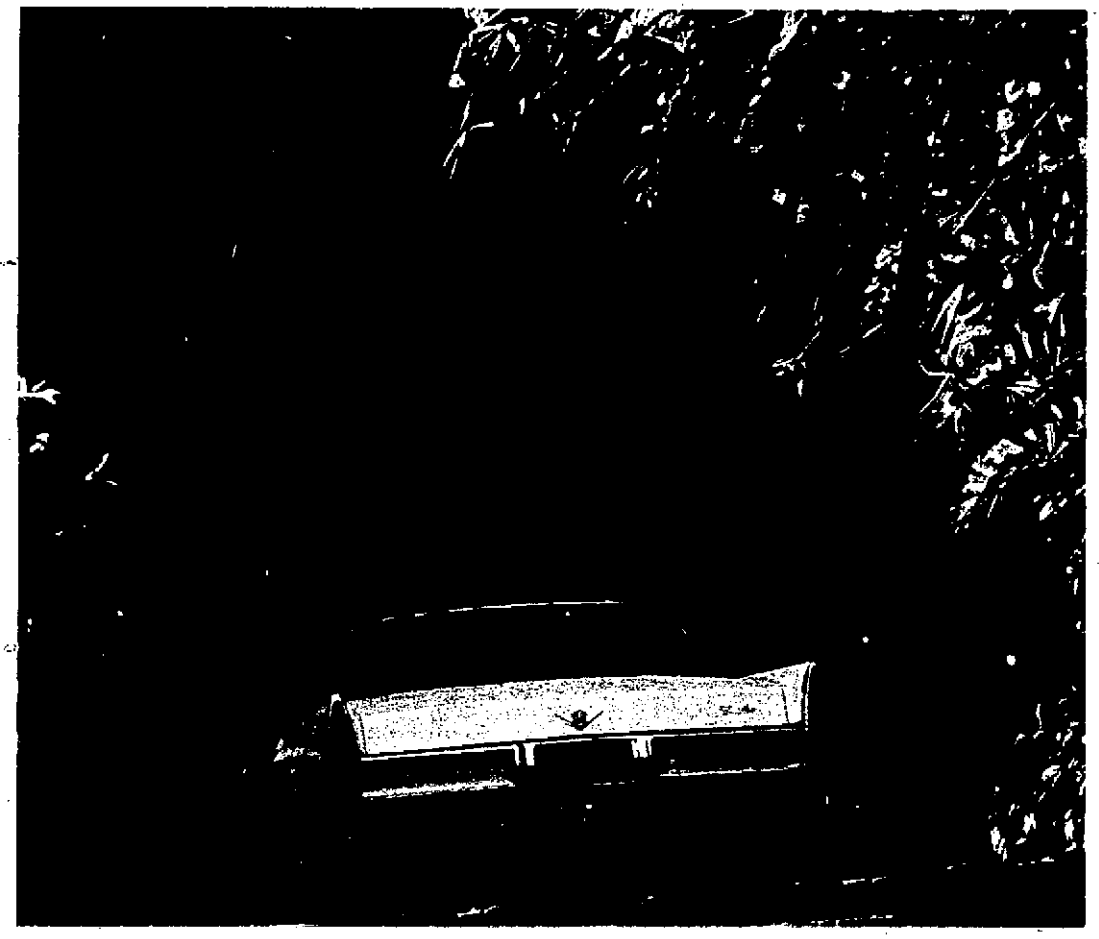

International events are indeed treated by Krokodil, but only insofar as they mirror the Moscow line. Red China, ergo, is a current villain. Kremlin officials are deathly afraid of the regime of Mao Tse-tung with whom their country shares 6500 miles of common border.

More than anything, Krokodil's editors are terrified, as are Russia's 230 million citizens, of China's 760 million population. Some of the recent humor has touched on this subject. As, for instance:

"Have you heard the news? The Chinese have put a sputnik into orbit," says the first man. The second man shakes his head in perplexity. So the first man explains: "You know how they did it? A hundred million Chinese held the catapult, and 50 million pulled back the elastic."

Another Krokodil anecdote tells of the first month of war between the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China. During the first week the Soviet army captures a million Chinese soldiers. The second week Russian troops take 5 million prisoners, the third week more than 20 million. At the end of the fourth week, when the Soviet military has rounded up another 30 million, Mao sends Kosygin a wire: "Had enough? Now surrender!"

Krokodil's 2 million newsstand circulation belies the actual number of its readers. For each copy, which costs 13 cents, has its own private circulation—merchant, now in his 70's, lives in a Dublin hotel and follows his hobby of theatergoing—either in Dublin itself, or by hopping an occasional plane to London or Paris, about an hour away.

Singer Burl Ives is an American who now makes his home in Ireland. Here he's attired for his role in 'Rocket to the Moon,' filmed in the Dublin Mountains.

Joe Gallagher from New Jersey, is an oil company pensioner who says the fishing in Donegal is the best in the world.

Raven-haired Mary Maher found Ireland a great place for starting careers as well as ending them. She fell in love with Dublin while on vacation from her newspaper job with the Chicago Tribune. Today she's a star feature writer with the Irish Times and a permanent Dubliner. "It wasn't hard to do, especially when you come from a long line of Irish," she says. "The appeal of Ireland is in your blood. You soon get used to the slower tempo. Ireland is right on the edge of Europe, and is full of delightful people. Each man is his own man, and makes the day go as he wishes. There is no grander place."

What would it cost an average person to settle in Ireland? You can buy a fairly good home with plenty of acreage at prices ranging from $5000 to $10,000, and homeowners get government grants for property improvements. Or you can rent a cozy place for $40 to $80 a month on a long lease—short leases run higher. Food is reasonable, though there's not a great deal of variety on the bill of fare—bacon and eggs with potatoes has been the favorite dish for centuries.

For a final inducement, Ireland has an amiable climate, with temperatures seldom below freezing or above 70. Grand weather for St. Patrick's Day.

Short story writer Mary Lavin returned from Massachusetts to land of her ancestors, where she now owns a castle.

Film director John Huston, born in California, has become an Irish citizen and is proprietor of a large estate in Galway.

If you want to Stop Smoking, Here's How!

Trick water skiing may look simple, but no sport is more demanding in terms of stamina, coordination and sheer physical strength. Believe me, trick water skiing and smoking just don't go together—not if you want to stay on top.

Some time ago, I decided I should stop smoking. Although I had been smoking for 14 years, I noticed that now I was smoking more and more and I wasn't doing my best at skiing. Having been the champion trick skier for many years, I just couldn't afford to get hooked on the habit. I had to stay physically fit. However, I found it was getting harder and harder not to reach for a cigarette. Then I remembered reading about Bantron. I went to my drug store, bought a package of Bantron, and started taking it.

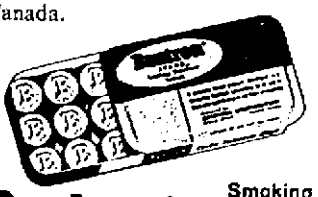

I'm very happy to say that with Bantron's help, I stopped smoking completely in 5 days. I had no difficulty in stopping, and didn't feel restless or irritable. It didn't affect my taste for food or anything else and it was so pleasant and easy to take. Just one Bantron pill after each meal for 5 days did the job for me. And now it's been more than 18 months since I've touched a cigarette! I feel very proud to endorse Bantron and strongly recommend it to anyone who wants to stop smoking. It is a marvelous aid to quitting or to cutting down easily and quickly. Just try Bantron. You'll be amazed how it will help you.

I've learned that clinical evidence has established that Bantron is more than 80% effective in helping chronic chain smokers give up smoking completely. Extensive research work at a great American University has shown that 4 out of 5 people who had a desire to stop smoking were able to do so within one week with the help of Bantron. Even those who didn't stop completely cut down drastically.

Bantron simply acts as a substitute for the nicotine in your system and helps curb the desire for tobacco with a harmless, non-habit forming substance called lobeline. The result is that you feel no pangs of withdrawal and no desire to smoke.

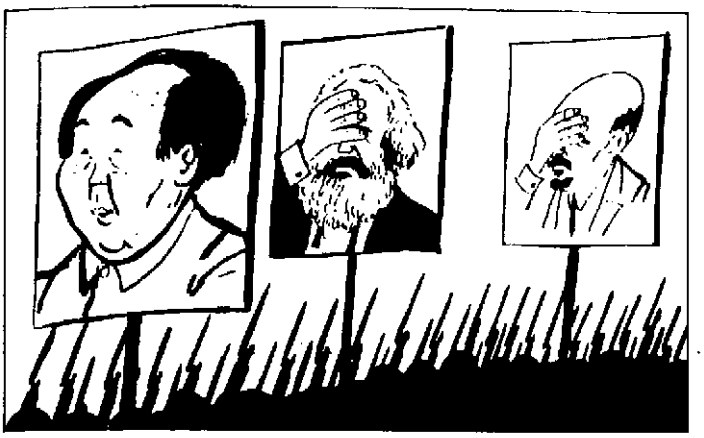

Bantron is easy and pleasant to take. It really worked wonders for me. Even now, when I think of smoking, I just take Bantron instead. I recommend Bantron to everyone who wants to stop smoking quickly and easily. Try it. You'll be amazed with the results, just as I was. It really works!

Bantron is so safe when taken as directed that you can get it at all drug stores without a prescription. It has even been granted a patent by the U.S. Government. Also available in Canada.

A CAMPANA PRODUCT

Krokodil cartoon imagines Marx and Lenin reaction to views of Mao Tse-tung.

and old numbers, going back even several years, are seen all the time in people's hands on trains, at bus stops, inside cafes and in libraries.

About 400 letters, most of them complaints on some aspect of Soviet society, reach Krokodil every day. These provide not only grist and ideas for the editor, Manuil G. Semyovnov, but are also carefully read by the Kremlin bigwigs inasmuch as it gives them their only chance to take the daily pulse of the national mood. Because no letter writer has ever been intimidated, so far as is known, Soviet citizens have a certain trust in Krokodil.

Stupidity has been one of Krokodil's favorite targets. Witness this sample:

"Comrades, stupidity is everywhere. It builds, it shouts, it thunders. A dam is built, and when it is finished, it has to be built all over again because some fool has set the foundations in clay. Be on your guard, Comrades. Stupidity is always on the side of the enemy. . . ."

Never letting up on some of the general long-standing abuses, Krokodil hacks away every week at graft. One of the best cartoons on this subject, which has been reprinted several times, shows a government agency door marked "Receiving." The doorknob is in the form of an outstretched palm.

Poorly constructed housing is another target. "All buildings in Moscow," commented Krokodil wryly, "are built to the music of Paul Dukas with the sorcerer's apprentice in charge."

"After it rains, you can sail a boat in these apartments," one Muscovite complained. Krokodil followed up with a cartoon that showed an apartment dweller who had set his mousetrap and caught a fish.

More often than not, a Krokodil barb brings sudden magic action and quick results. It's the major gratification of the poorly paid and small editorial staff — about 25 in all. Each man specializes in one of four categories: economics, culture, foreign affairs and letters-to-the-editor. The cartoonists, some 60, are nearly all freelancers. They work closely with the editor, as do the reporters and far-flung correspondents who meticulously check and re-check everything. No errors are allowed. No matter how long it takes the facts must be verified.

Phantom phones

Such was the necessity in the case of the "phantom telephones." It took Krokodil better than three months of research, but in the end they had the solid facts. A reader had written in griping that too many people wait on line to use a public phone while the bigshots have more phones than they need. Krokodil published a two-panel cartoon.

Panel A showed a jumble of people waiting for a woman to finish a phone call. It was captioned, "One for all . . ." Panel B pictured a bureaucrat reading a paper and on his desk were eight phones (several with cobwebs). It was captioned, ". . . and all for one!" Now there are more public phones in use.

Uncle Sam, of course, has not been forgotten; over the years he has been another favorite whipping boy. Shedding copious Krokodil tears for the plight of the American Negro is one way. Here's a recent cartoon:

"My son wants to be a judge," says a Southerner to his neighbor, "so he's keeping up with his law studies. He's already taken part in four Ku Klux Klan meetings."

Two extra-special targets are gum-chewing and unruly American teenagers. Sometimes the two are combined into one pure-venom potshot, such as the anecdote of the gum-chewing mother informing her gum-chewing son that she plans to give him a watch for Christmas. "Better give me a gun, mom, chaw-chaw," says Junior, his jaw working overtime. "Then I can, chaw-chaw-chaw, get the watch for myself."

As editor Semyovnov likes to put it: "If one picture is worth a thousand words, then one Krokodil cartoon should be worth a thousand pictures."

WHAT YOU CAN DO ABOUT TODAY'S $65-A-DAY HOSPITAL COSTS

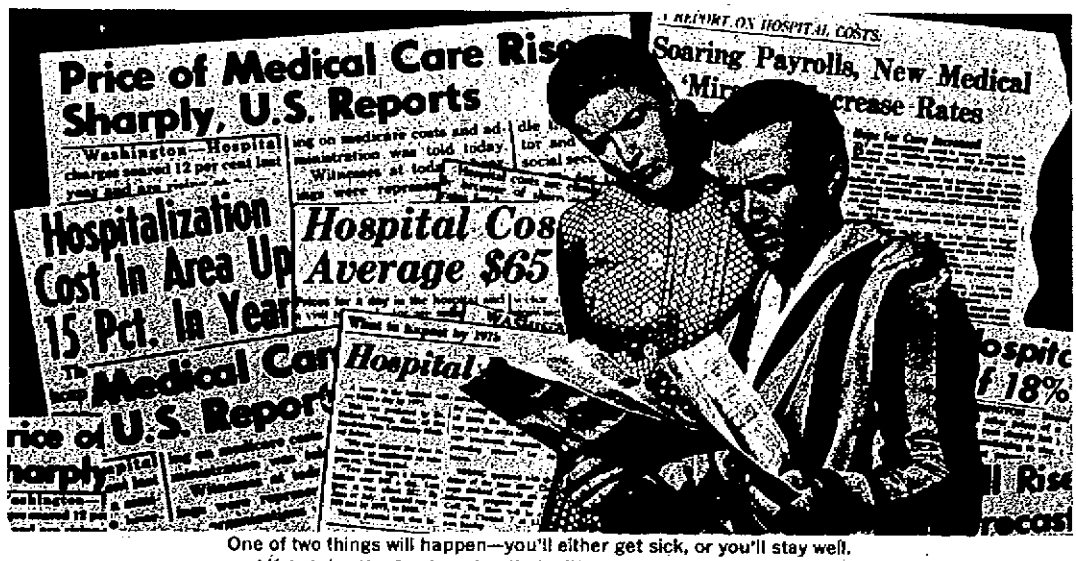

LIKE EVERYTHING ELSE, the cost of being sick or hurt has gone up sharply. The average daily cost of one day's stay in California hospitals has tripled since 1952—to over $65 a day. Experts say it will climb even higher!

These skyrocketing medical costs have put millions of Californians in a dangerous spot, because their health insurance is no longer enough to pay the bills. They'll either have to pay the lion's share out of their own pockets—or buy more health insurance, using money they'd rather save for the future.

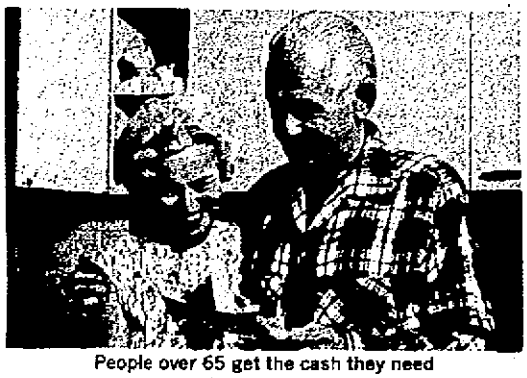

But now there's a remarkably different kind of money-back health insurance that solves this problem. It's a plan that you can add without risking a penny because it also pays you if you stay well.

This revolutionary health insurance takes the worry out of life because it returns money to you if you don't get sick or hurt. If you don't need the benefits, you get paid a substantial cash "nest egg" at maturity.

Like ordinary health insurance, this remarkable plan pays you generous tax-free cash benefits if you do get sick or hurt. The cash comes to you direct-by-check, to spend any way you wish. It pays you regardless of other hospital, medical or surgical insurance you may have, including group.

One of two things will happen—you'll either get sick, or you'll stay well. Life's twice the fun knowing that, either way, you must get paid.

People over 65 get the cash they need to help with Medicare.

But unlike ordinary insurance, this low-cost plan means you no longer have to get sick or hurt to collect. If you stay well, you still get a big check. Instead of paying premiums which return no money if you have no claims, you get a cash refund of all your basic annual premiums at maturity. In effect, you built up an extra savings account to add to your future pleasure and security.

You don't even have to stay 100 per cent healthy to get money back. If you collect less than what you paid in annualized premiums, you get a cash refund of the difference. So no matter what, you must collect. It's the sensible answer for people who no longer want to gamble against today's rapidly rising medical costs.

This remarkable Money-Back plan is offered by Certified Life Insurance Co. of California as part of the famous White Cross Plan protecting thousands of California families. And the White Cross Plan includes low-cost protections to help folks over 65 fill the gaps in Medicare that could cost them thousands.

The story of this revolutionary health insurance that also pays you cash if you stay well, and special "Over-65" plans to supplement Medicare, is told in the Gold Book, an informative booklet offered free by Certified.

NOTE: Readers of Parade can get a free copy of the Gold Book by using the postage-paid reply card attached to this page. No cost or obligation for this service.

Little Copycats

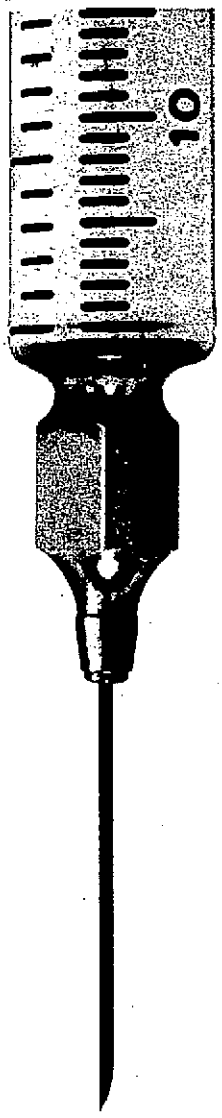

BY VIRGINIA POPE

Parade's Fashion Editor

Just a short time ago fashionable ladies were desperately trying to dress like little girls. Well, now the tables have turned. Today, it's the sub- and early teens who are the copycats—their model is sophisticated mother. If mom can wear city pants so can her darling 7- to 14-year-old daughters. Joseph Love, the Yves Saint Laurent of the younger set, has one dashing two-piece pants suit that is irresistible to schoolgirls. It comes in faded French blue with the popular sailor collar overblouse. Remember the pretty baby doll dress with its pink satin sash that little girls used to wear at parties? Well, today's little ladies have dumped that image for swingy party pants. The very newest come in prints, but there are a variety of others in brightly colored jumpsuits and even very dressy ones in silky bell bottoms with white-lace tunic tops. The one-piece shorts dress, too, has been swiped by the younger generation. Most of these have sailor collars. In case you're beginning to wonder whether girls are ever going to wear dresses anymore, they are, and attractive ones at that. Dress costumes featuring short jackets and very full skirts held tight at the waist by a belt are new for children, so are the peasant-embroidered waistcoats with a very full dirndl skirt. Other copycat fashions are the blouson, cuffed long sleeves, shirtwaist dresses and long coat and dress combinations.

Costume dress (l) in French blue, red belt, printed voile skirt, $14, alongside a peasant bolero outfit in pale blue rayon with frilled neckline. Sells for about $12. Both from Cinderella.

Can two Right Guards serve in the same cabinet?

Of course they can. Because there are two kinds of people in most families. Some need only to stop perspiration odor. For them: Right Guard Deodorant, the world's No. 1 defense against odor. It's the only protection they'll ever need. But others need extra protection from odor and wetness. For them: brand-new Right Guard Anti-Perspirant. Americans 'come back to Erin' —and stay

by Jack McCarthy

Tomorrow is St. Patrick's Day. Not all Irish-Americans, however, will do their celebrating in the United States. A good many will greet the great occasion on the Old Sod itself—and not as tourists, but as full-time, year-round residents.

For in recent years Ireland, which once sent waves of immigrants across the sea, has been getting some of them back, as more and more Americans of Irish descent find Ireland an ideal land to settle in—beautiful, hospitable, and a place where you can live on as little as $7 a day. Small wonder that that old Irish song, "Come Back to Erin, Mavourneen," is taking on new meaning.

Last year, Ireland had about 175,000 American visitors. About 6000 U.S. citizens have settled there permanently. The U.S. Embassy in Dublin says it mails out 4700 social security and federal pension checks each month to Americans now resident in Ireland. Among those who have either permanently settled or maintain homes there are film director John Huston, model Valerie Harte, and folk singer Burl Ives

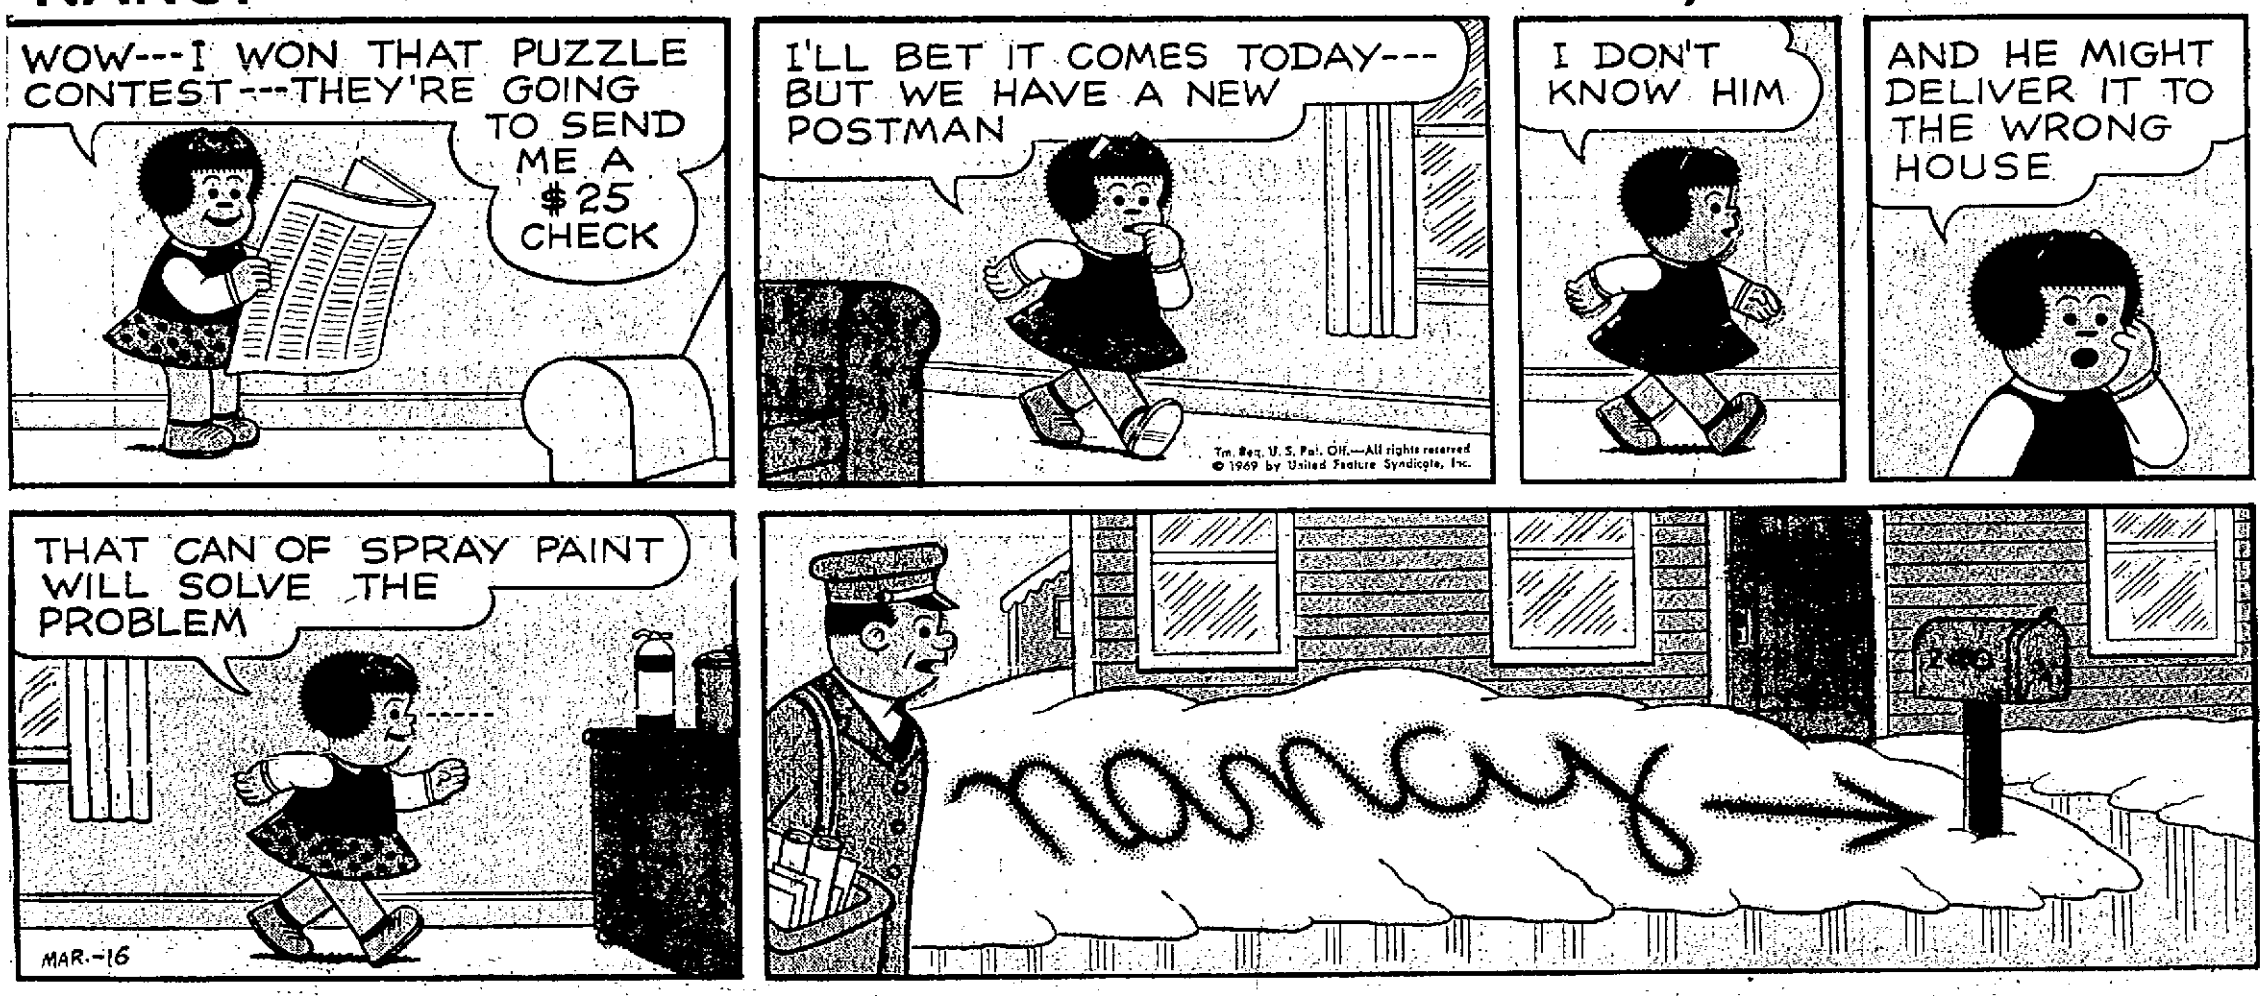

Plenty of less prominent Irish Americans are permanently enjoying the good life in the Emerald Isle. Usually they are returned natives, born in the area where they now reside.

The manager of the Moira Hotel in Dublin, John McGeady, used to be captain of waiters at the Stork Club in New York. "When the Stork closed," he explains, "I came back to see my folks for a week or so. After a couple of leisurely strolls in Dublin, I cashed in my return ticket. No regrets."

Singer Burl Ives is an American who now makes his home in Ireland. Here he's attired for his role in 'Rocket to the Moon,' filmed in the Dublin Mountains.

merchant, now in his 70's, lives in a Dublin hotel and follows his hobby of theatergoing—either in Dublin itself, or by hopping an occasional plane to London or Paris, about an hour away.

Joe Gallagher from New Jersey, is an oil company pensioner who says the fishing in Donegal is the best in the world.

Raven-haired Mary Maher found Ireland a great place for starting careers as well as ending them. She fell in love with Dublin while on vacation from her newspaper job with the Chicago Tribune. Today she's a star feature writer with the Irish Times and a permanent Dubliner. "It wasn't hard to do, especially when you come from a long line of Irish," she says. "The appeal of Ireland is in your blood. You soon get used to the slower tempo. Ireland is right on the edge of Europe, and is full of delightful people. Each man is his own man, and makes the day go as he wishes. There is no grander place."

What would it cost an average person to settle in Ireland? You can buy a fairly good home with plenty of acreage at prices ranging from $5000 to $10,000, and homeowners get government grants for property improvements. Or you can rent a cozy place for $40 to $80 a month on a long lease—short leases run higher. Food is reasonable, though there's not a great deal of variety on the bill of fare—bacon and eggs with potatoes has been the favorite dish for centuries.

For a final inducement, Ireland has an amiable climate, with temperatures seldom below freezing or above 70. Grand weather for St. Patrick's Day.

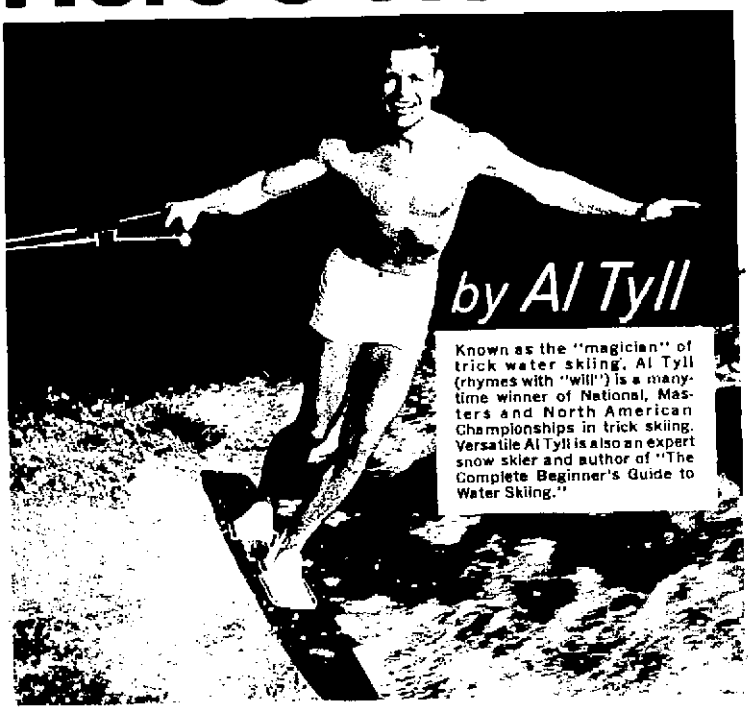

Short story writer Mary Lavin returned from Massachusetts to land of her ancestors, where she now owns a castle.

Film director John Huston, born in California, has become an Irish citizen and is proprietor of a large estate in Galway.

If you want to Stop Smoking, Here's How!

Trick water skiing may look simple, but no sport is more demanding in terms of stamina, coordination and sheer physical strength. Believe me, trick water skiing and smoking just don't go together—not if you want to stay on top.

Some time ago, I decided I should stop smoking. Although I had been smoking for 14 years, I noticed that now I was smoking more and more and I wasn't doing my best at skiing. Having been the champion trick skier for many years, I just couldn't afford to get hooked on the habit. I had to stay physically fit. However, I found it was getting harder and harder not to reach for a cigarette. Then I remembered reading about Bantron. I went to my drug store, bought a package of Bantron, and started taking it.

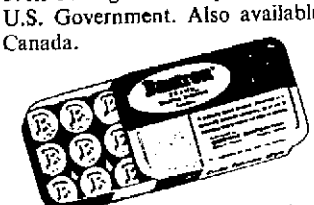

I'm very happy to say that with Bantron's help, I stopped smoking completely in 5 days. I had no difficulty in stopping, and didn't feel restless or irritable. It didn't affect my taste for food or anything else and it was so pleasant and easy to take. Just one Bantron pill after each meal for 5 days did the job for me. And now it's been more than 18 months since I've touched a cigarette! I feel very proud to endorse Bantron and strongly recommend it to anyone who wants to stop smoking. It is a marvelous aid to quitting or to cutting down easily and quickly. Just try Bantron. You'll be amazed how it will help you.

I've learned that clinical evidence has established that Bantron is more than 80% effective in helping chronic chain smokers give up smoking completely. Extensive research work at a great American University has shown that 4 out of 5 people who had a desire to stop smoking were able to do so within one week with the help of Bantron. Even those who didn't stop completely cut down drastically.

Bantron simply acts as a substitute for the nicotine in your system and helps curb the desire for tobacco with a harmless, non-habit forming substance called lobeline. The result is that you feel no pangs of withdrawal and no desire to smoke.

Bantron is easy and pleasant to take. It really worked wonders for me. Even now, when I think of smoking, I just take Bantron instead. I recommend Bantron to everyone who wants to stop smoking quickly and easily. Try it. You'll be amazed with the results, just as I was. It really works!

Bantron is so safe when taken as directed that you can get it at all drug stores without a prescription. It has even been granted a patent by the U.S. Government. Also available in Canada.

WHAT YOU CAN DO ABOUT TODAY'S $65-A-DAY HOSPITAL COSTS

LIKE EVERYTHING ELSE, the cost of being sick or hurt has gone up sharply. The average daily cost of one day's stay in California hospitals has tripled since 1952—to over $65 a day. Experts say it will climb even higher!

These skyrocketing medical costs have put millions of Californians in a dangerous spot, because their health insurance is no longer enough to pay the bills. They'll either have to pay the lion's share out of their own pockets—or buy more health insurance, using money they'd rather save for the future.

But now there's a remarkably different kind of money-back health insurance that solves this problem. It's a plan that you can add without risking a penny because it also pays you if you stay well.

This revolutionary health insurance takes the worry out of life because it returns money to you if you don't get sick or hurt. If you don't need the benefits, you get paid a substantial cash "nest egg" at maturity.

Like ordinary health insurance, this remarkable plan pays you generous tax-free cash benefits if you do get sick or hurt. The cash comes to you direct-by-check, to spend any way you wish. It pays you regardless of other hospital, medical or surgical insurance you may have, including group.

One of two things will happen—you'll either get sick, or you'll stay well. Life's twice the fun knowing that, either way, you must get paid.

People over 65 get the cash they need to help with Medicare.

But unlike ordinary insurance, this low-cost plan means you no longer have to get sick or hurt to collect. If you stay well, you still get a big check. Instead of paying premiums which return no money if you have no claims, you get a cash refund of all your basic annual premiums at maturity. In effect, you built up an extra savings account to add to your future pleasure and security.

You don't even have to stay 100 per cent healthy to get money back. If you collect less than what you paid in annualized premiums, you get a cash refund of the difference. So no matter what, you must collect. It's the sensible answer for people who no longer want to gamble against today's rapidly rising medical costs.

This remarkable Money-Back plan is offered by Certified Life Insurance Co. of California as part of the famous White Cross Plan protecting thousands of California families. And the White Cross Plan includes low-cost protections to help folks over 65 fill the gaps in Medicare that could cost them thousands.

The story of this revolutionary health insurance that also pays you cash if you stay well, and special "Over-65" plans to supplement Medicare, is told in the Gold Book, an informative booklet offered free by Certified.

NOTE: Readers of Parade can get a free copy of the Gold Book by using the postage-paid reply card attached to this page. No cost or obligation for this service.

Teens talk about problem skin.

Teenagers are experts when it comes to knowing about problem skin. These Westchester teens were given a new liquid anti-bacterial skin cleanser called HyperpHaze. For about two weeks, they washed with HyperpHaze instead of soap. Here's what they said about it . . .

Ron: Well . . . before I was using another product. HyperpHaze worked much better than that and it was a lot easier to use.

Camille: It really cleans out the oil and clears your face up . . . this lasted and that's what I want.

Sue: I had pimples on my chin. It cleared those up...

Bill: When I started using this stuff I had a lot of blemishes. I don't have as many now.

Angela: Well, with soap I used to wash my face two or three times before it really felt clean. But with HyperpHaze, it almost seemed to tingle!

Les: Well, if it's hospital-tested, it must be good enough. Right?

Camille: My brother . . . he's going to be a doctor ...said "Hey, you're really looking great!"

Fran: I didn't break out like I usually would.

Denise: I didn't expect it to clear up my whole face, but it did . . . I used it all up . . . after I stopped using it my face broke out again. It's like a preventative.

Fred: It was easy to use.

Ron: Well, the thing I liked about it was just one thing to use instead of a lot of separate things.

Angela: It's inexpensive because...you don't have to use more than one product.

Carole: I don't feel that I have to spend hours and hours cleansing my face . . . with soap I have to wash it three times over.

Angela: Once I used it, I felt I didn't have to worry ...you can just, you know, go do what you want to do.

Denise: It's not perfumey. I like HyperpHaze's smell.

Bob: Doesn't leave a smell.

Russ: I felt more confident because . . . it helps your face and yet no one else can notice that you've got it on.

Doug: There's no trace or smell or anything like that. Nobody can notice it. You know, I think that's the best thing.

Jim: It took care of all the problems I had."

Bob: This HyperpHaze was really good.

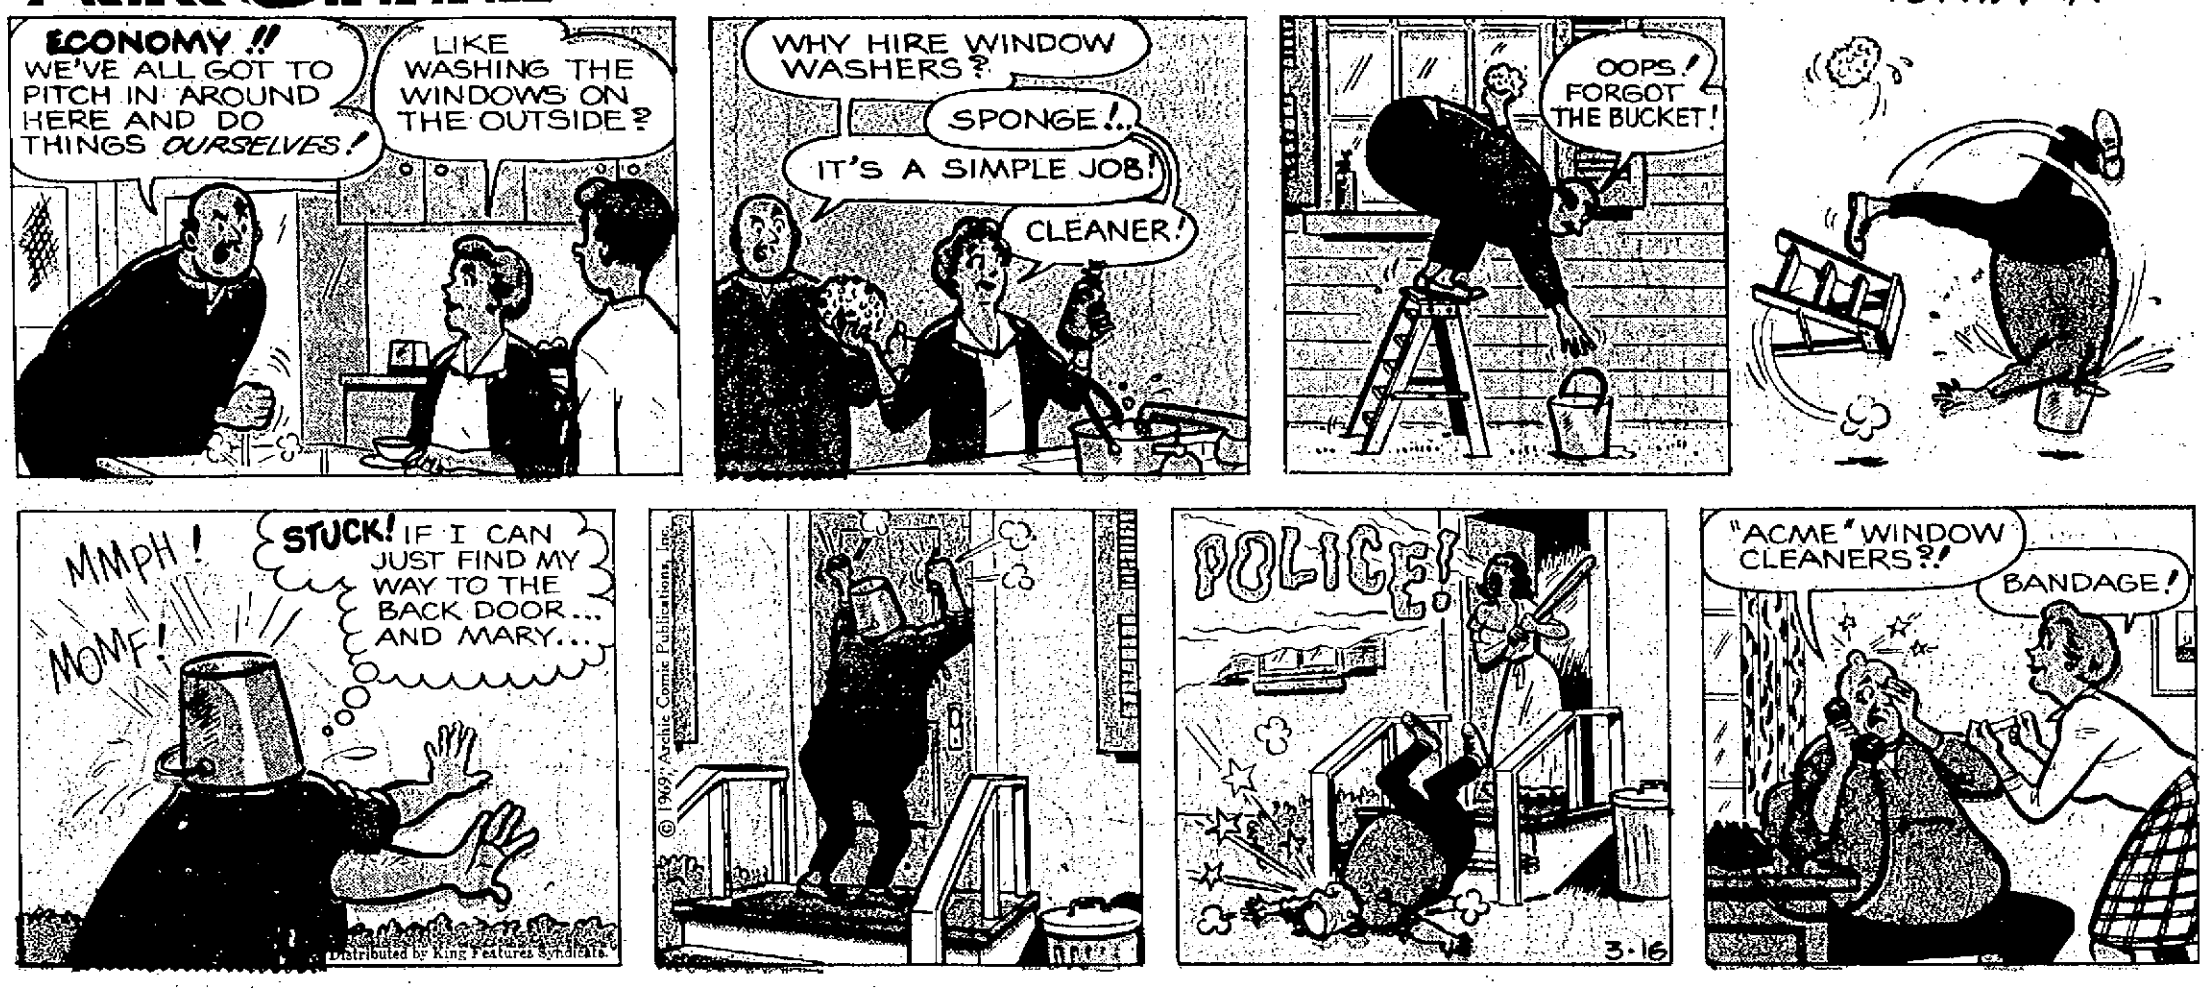

Russ: It was quick. And it got you clean. And it worked.

Ron: HyperpHaze works better than any other product that I ever used.

Wash with HyperpHaze instead of soap and see why teens agree... HyperpHaze–the clean, clear solution for skin problems.
